CLASS BANQUET

Held in Honor of the Two Victorious Basket Ball Teams of Glenwood Sunday School

The Barnea Bible Class of Glenwood M. E. Church banqueted last Tuesday evening, both the Senior and Junior Basket Ball teams of the church. Both teams alike were city champions, the Juniors winning fourteen out of fifteen games played, while the "Big Team," as the boys called it, had the remarkable record of winning all of their games in town, and only loosing two out of town games, making in all 23 out of 25 games won.

The Junior team had to play Como M. E. for the Junior Championship of the city, and after loosing their first game of the season, on Como's floor, 16-13, they came back strong and beat Como, on the Glenwood Shelterhouse floor, by the score of 24-11. Then a third game had to be played and West Market Hall was chosen as the most neutral floor, and Glenwood won for the second time by the score of 23-12. This final game decided the championship.

Record of Senior Team.

The Senior team started their season by beating West High School, 25-21, and from that time on, all eyes were upon them. For the season the team scored 768 points in their twenty-five games as against 382 points of their opponents, or, figuratively speaking, four points more than twice as many points as their opponents.

Glenwood won the West Side Championship, hands down, for they beat West Park M. E., who finished second, by the score of 78-7, then they were entitled tto play for city honors and the scores were as follows:

City Championship Series.

Glenwood 32, Trinity 13—Central League.

Glenwood 21, St. Marys 18—South League.

Glenwood 17, St. Patricks 15—East League.

Glenwood 14, Grace M. P. 11—North League.

The next chart shows the number of baskets made and games played by each player. Stinson, star center of the team, had the remarkable record of playing in all but the last game,

JUST A FEW WORDS OF INTRODUCTION

We begin, this week, the publication of The Hilltop Record, and expect to continue issuing the same each week, date of publication being Friday.

We have no great predictions to make concerning the future of the Record, but we do promise to do our best to make it an interesting newspaper devoted exclusively to the Hilltop and immediate vicinity. It will be strictly non-partisan, with no partial interest in politics except when a moral issue is at stake.

With these few introductory words we will leave it up to the citizens of the Hilltop to judge for yourselves as to its worth after it has been with you for a sufficient length of time.

Each and every person can help to increase its worth as a "news" paper by sending in any item of news you may happen to know of. Either telephone or send the same to the office of the Hilltop Undertaking Co., 2352 West Broad street. Bell, Hilltop 2781, Citizen 17882. Or telephone Hilltop 1652, publisher's residence.

The Flower and Garden Committee of the Hilltop Improvement Association is talking of offering prizes to the Hilltop gardeners. Why not arrange for an exhibition of all the best garden products of the Hilltop next fall, together with other features that would go to make up an interesting occasion of that sort?

Here's a suggestion: In place of buying the flag to be raised at Glenwood Park next Fourth of July let the various ladies societies on the Hilltop get together and do as Betsy Ross did—make one. They might call themselves the "Betsy Ross Society" for this occasion. Wouldn't everybody pride our home-made "Old Glory" all the more?

BE A HELPER

With food stuffs soaring at so high a mark, and with the probability of its going higher still, the prevailing problem is "how to make ends meet." If you have in any way discovered a way by which some one or two articles of food could be utilized to a saving advantage, or know of the food value of any article that could take a place on the family table and help to keep down the "high cost," please let your friends and neighbors know about it. Send the facts to The Record for publication.

The columns of The Record are open to the people on the Hilltop for the discussion of different local subjects that would tend to benefit our readers. Be as brief and to the point as possible, as c... space is limited.

THE HILLTOP

It is Not Experiencing a "Boom," But a Good, Steady Substantial Growth

The growth of the Hilltop during the past three or four years has been wonderful. If you do not think so just start out and take a "hike" over it some day, and experience the reality. Street after street which but a couple of years ago led only to large cow pastures, commons, etc., are now paved and lined up on both sides with beautiful modern houses surrounded by nicely kept lawns—and what is better still, homes that are populated by a class of people inferior to none, and which we believe can be excelled only by those we'll meet "When the roll is called up yonder, etc.

Just begin your journey say on the southeast corner of the Hilltop—if you do not care to walk all the way over and haven't yet held the lucky number on some six-passenger affair that has been given away by some large-hearted business concern, just jump on a Camp Chase going east, and get off a couple squares west of the baby camp on Sullivant avenue, then "hoof" it up and down the different streets and avenues till you get to Hague avenue—if you can stand walking till then. Take a note book along, and while you're resting at home from that journey just recall what you've seen and compare the present with two or three years ago. Wonderful indeed has been the growth of the Hilltop.

Then, just as the taste of a good thing creates an appetite for more, so you'll want to go again. This time turn your steps to the north of Broad street, going up and down the numerous avenues, past the beautiful homes in this section, taking in the newly-made Hill Crest Park addition with its improved streets and avenues and boulevard, and you wil be convinced that there is no better place for a home in Columbus than right here on the Hilltop.

Then turn to the business section. What a big improvement in the way of new business blocks and stores in the past three years.

And not only has the building of large store rooms been confined to the central section of the community, but all over the outlying districts can be seen fine store rooms occupied by prosbusiness concerns.

Also the large buildings that have been built at the State Hospital, together with the new buildings that are now being erected at the Feeble Minded Institution, are noted improvements that are plainly visible.

All these, and with the prospect of other big improvements give evidence of a brilliant future for the Hilltop.

Border Relics

Harold Cooley, who recently returned from the border with Battery C, brought home a number of articles of interest, among which is an Indian blonket, also a three-inch shell which he went three miles to recover after it had been fired and buried in the ground.

IN THE BUILDING LINE

A Partial Review of What is Being Done on the Hilltop

With the building season now begun the Hilltop bids fair to keep up its record of last couple of years. Scores of houses are going up, with many others in preparation.

Mr. C. K. Stewart, of the Bronx addition, reports more lots sold and better prospects for building this year than at the corresponding time last year. They are intending to improve the streets of that addition with an application of tar and macadam.

Patrick Lane is helping to improve the west side of Hague avenue by the erection of a modern eight room brick dwelling.

The Federal Realty Co. is building three six room houses on South Burgess near Broad—at Nos. 173, 218 and 222 respectively.

A six room modern is occupying the lot at 343 S. Hague. Built by Messrs. Brown & Brown.

Wm. E. Newberry is the possessor of a fine, new seven room dwelling at 313 S. Hague, which is nearly completed. All the latest in modern facilities together with a finished attic and oak finish on the first floor.

Mr. Ellison has about completed a five room frame at 310 S. Hague.

C. K. Stewart, of 463 South Richardson, is building a five room at 437 South Terrace, also a five roomer at 459 South Richardson, and will put up a six room modern at the corner of Fremont and Richardson.

E. B. Rickett's new six room brick bungalow on South Burgess, near Sullivant, is very pretty and a home the owner should be pleased with.

W. H. Morris is finishing a pretty six room frame bungalow at 464 South Terrace.

A six room frame for Mr. Gano is being built at 439 S. Richardson, by H. C. Van Gilder.

Knox & Phillips are preparing to put up a fine six room dwelling on Eldon avenue in Hill Crest Park, north of Grace street

About half a dozen new ones are to be seen in Glen View Heights.

J. A. Kline has two six room bungalows about two-thirds completed on North Ogden.

A number of fine dwellings have been erected on the High Ridge addition, south side of Sullivant avenue, near Belvidere.

Many other dwellings are going up in different sections of the Hilltop, but we have been unable to get a full list this week, but will try to in another issue.

THE ASSOCIATION

Appoints Garden and Flower Committe—Officers Chosen for This Year

At the last meeting of the Hilltop Improvement Association it was decided to appoint a Garden and Flower Committee, the duty of which is to look after the interests of the city gardens and vacant lots of the Hilltop, and assist in any way they can to help any who wish to plant gardens but lack the necessary ground or seed.

It is the desire of the committee that persons having lots to be planted, or knowing of such, report the same to any member of the committee. Also, any one wishing a lot to plant, please consult this committee.

Those composing the commitiee are: W. L. Millikin, George Stewart, L. M. Seiller

The association contemplates planting for a big Fourth-of-July celebration at Glenwood Park this year. One of the big features of the occasion will be a flag raising upon a new flag pole which will be placed in the park.

The officers of the Association are as follows:

Fred Postle, President.

A. L. Scales, Vice President.

W. E. Dalby, Secretary.

Dr. L. E. Turner, Treasurer.

Directors—John Davis, Harry Beedett, Harry E. Greenwood, H. G. Butler, C. H. Haldy.

---

The father of John Stelz, 656 S. Harris, died April 19th. The funeral services were held last Sunday, the remains being taken to Hallsville, O., for burial.

---

One of the leading Hilltop industries these days is gardening. The feature vegetable planted—potatoes, notwithstanding the high price of seed. Here's hoping for a good crop.

---

Mr. S. C. Mitchell is again at his old stand the barber shop at 2385 West Broad street.

---

Spring beauties and violets are again with us in the field and wood.

HILLTOP SERVICE FLAG

Coal Consumers, Attention

Columbus, Ohio, May 23, 1918.

West Side Coal and Lumber Co., West Broad St. and Big Four R. R., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen: It may interest you to know that the dealers' requirements for Columbus, as shown by the recent survey was 695,000 tons of coal for the year beginning April 1, 1918, and that about 31,065 tons were delivered during the month of April. According to these figures it is the opinion of our committee that deliveries will have to be speeded up considerably if any large percent of the requirements is to be taken care of before fall.

Please endeavor to impress upon your customers the importance of taking the grades that are available and not waiting too long for some particular kind or grade of coal.

Very truly yours,

FRANKLIN COUNTY FUEL COMMITTEE.

2357-2359 West Broad Street

GEORGE C. STEWAST, Manager

The closing of the Broad Street bridge to street car traffic, and also to walking across in the near future is going to make it very inconvenient for Hilltop people getting to and from work. Of course we'll have to put up with it for a while at least.

It has been talked of dividing the cost of a temporary bridge at West Broad street for street car traffic equally between the city, county and car company. The plan was proposed by Councilman M. W. Westlake.

However, it ought not to make any great convenience for Hilltop people from a shopping viewpoint as there now is very little necessity to go over town to buy when we have most everything needed right here on the Hilltop, and at prices better than you can get over there; and again the most obliging, honest and best set of business people in any one section of the city. BUY IT ON THE HILLTOP AND SAVE TIME AND MONEY.

Decoration Day

Cover them o'er with beautiful flowers,
Deck them with garlands, these brothers of ours,
Lying so silent by night and by day,
Sleeping the years of their manhood away.

Cover them over, yes cover them over;
Parents, husbands, brother and lover.
Crown them, these dead heroes of ours,
And cover them with beautiful flowers.

Cover the thousands that sleep 'neath the sea;
Sleep where their friends cannot find them today.
Roses and lillies and violets blue,
Cover them over, yes cover them over
Think of of those far-away heroes of ours;
Cover them over with beautiful flowers

HILLTOP ROLL OF HONOR

The cause of human freedom has ever held a sacred place in the deeper feelings of the American people. The khaki clad boys of today are worthy successors of an heroic past. They go forth to defend and maintain the same principles which inspired the patriots who purchased our freedom as well as those who preserved and kept it inviolate when assailed. The cause for which they contend is the noblest in the history of mankind. Our forefathers fought to establish a free government in this western world. Their sons fought to make the government thus established an instrument of human freedom, and to complete the task which had been so nobly begun. Our sons now go forth to extend the blessings of freedom to the whole world. Knightly sons of a chivalrous and heroic people! They are worthy of the great trust which the nation has placed in their hands. The noblest traditions of the past will be safe in their keeping. They will return when their task has been achieved with new laurels which will give added luster to the untarnished fame of the nation. May God speed them on their mission and hasten the victory which will bring them again to the sacred ties of the homeland.—Dr. W. F. Wykoff.

THE HILLTOP RECORD.

S. J. Wheelans, Publisher

Last Sunday, May 26, being generally observed as Memorial Sunday, the M. E. Church arranged for a patriotic service to be given that evening. The S. S. sang some patriotic songs, Mrs. Wilson sang two beautiful solos. The Shockey Band rendered numbers that were well received.

The Wells Post was well represented by a good number of the old veterans of "61" to "65." The W. M. Wells Relief Corps was also present and given a warm reception.

The choir and congregation sang as the opening song "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." Rev. Walter Casto led in an earnest prayer for the boys in blue and our boys in khaki. Dr. Wykoff discussed the issues of the Civil War under the subject, "Our National Mission," in such an earnest way that called for well deserved applause.

Rev. and Mrs. John Pennington, Highland Avenue, were visitors in Damascus over Sunday

Miss Gladys Herbert of Granville, spent the past week a guest at the home of her mother, Mrs. Carrie Herbert, S. Richardson.

Rev. G. W. Lose will be installed as pastor of the St. John's Lutheran Church, on South Burgess, near Broad St., next Sunday, June 2nd, at 10:30 a. m. by Rev. B. F. Schillinger of Columbus, O. Sunday School will take place at 9:15 a. m. Heretofore they held Sunday School and services on Sunday afternoons, but hereafter all services will take place as above stated until further notice.

Hilltop Ice Station, 62 S Terrace.

Mrs. A. W. Leonhardt, 47 N. Park, who has been sick for some time, is reported worse

The Sells family had their annual reunion last Sunday on the farm of Frank Jinks, near Groveport. Forty members of the family were present, nearly all of them residents of this county and Pickaway county. Dinner was served in the beautiful shaded lawn of Mr. Jinks. Prayer was offered by Harvey Sells of Mt. Sterling. After spending the afternoon in pleasant social intercourse, they all assembled in the front room of the palatial residence of Mr. Jinks, and, after a song service, reading of the Scripture and prayer by Rev. J. Berry, husband of Laura Berry (formerly Sells) of the Hilltop, they elected Harvey Sells of Mt. Sterling president for next year; Mrs. Ella Root (formerly Sells) of Circleville, secretary, and a committee on program for the next reunion to be appointed by the president.

Emmy-Lou Pumps for girls, $1.50. Broad-Terrace Shoe Store.

Next Sunday will be the Annual Rally Day service at the St. Paul United Evangelical Church. Rev. G. K. Ackley of Akron, Ohio, will preach morning and evening. Rev. Ackley is an Evangelist who has spent many years in evangelistic work with great success. He is a man of great ability as a pulpit orator, and is a special favorite among the young people. We consider ourselves quite fortunate to be able to secure his services for this occasion. His coming will be a great treat for the people of the Hilltop. Miss Lillian Stockland, teacher of music of the Patriotic League of Columbus, will sing at the evening service. There will be special music at the morning service. A good program has been arranged for the entire day. Come and bring your friends with you

NOTES ABOUT THOSE IN ARMY SERVICE

Mr. and Mrs. John Aitken, who live on the Wilson Road just a short way north of Broad street, west of the Big Four Railroad, have the distinction of having four sons in the U. S. service. One of them, Thomas Aitken, is serving as first-class ship fitter and plumber on the transport "Aeolis." Their ship collided with another boat about 500 miles out to sea, tearing a part of her front off, but they succeeded in making New York, where the proper repairs were made. He came home on a furlough during that time.

John Aitken is second-class electrician on the battleship "Utah."

James Aitken is at Camp Holt, Ga., on the old Gettysburg grounds, in the tank service department.

William Aitken, who was in the navy before war was declared, enlisted before he was of age. He is in the aviation engine repair department of the navy, and is somewhere in European waters.

Mr. Aitken came to America with his family from Scotland about 14 years ago, hence their four boys were all born in Scotland.

They also have another son, who will be of age soon, and a daughter. The boys write home that they are getting along all right and like their work.

Cincinnati, O., June 17, 1918.

Publisher of the H. T. Record:

I will give you a few lines to print in your paper. It will be very few, too, for mess call is due in 15 minutes. I would not miss my mess for $25. Co. D, Training Detachment, Hughes High School, Cincinnati, O., is composed of quite a number of Hilltop boys and West Side boys. I have made a mistake. I should have said men. This is a great place. Could not be any better. Just think of it—Hughes High School turned over to our own use and used as we see fit. This school is the greatest school in the world. Some 300 rooms. The most modern place of its kind in U. S. A. Two large gyms, plenty of showers, two fine swimming pools, a great, big library, just so full of interesting reading that it is running over, and a great, big auditorium. The stage is as large as any in Columbus theaters. Boys, it sure is fine here. Company D, Training Detachment, is composed of mechanics in training for U. S. to be used as he sees fit to use us. We are taking to this training like a leech does to a human body. A large wood-working shop for wood and patternmakers, blacksmith shop for the blacksmiths, foundry for the moulders, and a machine shop for the machinist. This is all in this school, too. So Columbus, get wise. You are away behind. We get two months' training here and are then placed in a regular outfit. Every man in this company will thank Cin. people when we leave, for they sure are fine—just bring us everything. Mess call. Goodbye. Luck to all.

OBITUARY

Daniel L. Keagy was born in Coshocton, Ohio, Dec. 7, 1857, and departed this life June 12, 1918, in his sixty-seventh year, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Nellie Tinkler, 83 Whitetnorne Ave., Columbus, Ohio. On the 27th day of May, 1875, he was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Ann Collins. To this union were born ten children—three sons and daughters. There were added to these families eighteen children, fifteen of whom are living. The mother and two children preceded the husband and father several years ago. Of the remaining eight children, seven were present at the funeral, viz.: Mrs. Effie Stover, Springfield, Ohio; Mrs. Viola Williams, Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Jennie Hillis, St. Joseph, Mo.; Mrs. Roy Burnett, Granite City, Ills.; Mrs. Nellie Tinkler, Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Anna Gaffin, Columbus, Ohio, and Mr. Lowell Keagy, Canton, Ohio.

Brother Keagy was a life-long member of the M. E. church and has been an attendant at Glenwood M. E. church for several years, where he was a member of "The Men's Bible Class," where he will be greatly missed, as he was an interested student of the Bible. He was laid to rest in Green Lawn Cemetery by the side of his wife and son, Friday afternoon, Rev. Wykoff conducting the services at his late home. The son and sons-in-law acted as pallbearers.

Invite Pastor to Return

At a largely attended meeting of the official board of the Glenwood M. E. Church Tuesday evening, a resolution was unanimously adopted requesting the return of the pastor, Rev. William F. Wykoff, D. D., for another year at the coming session of the Ohio Conference, with instructions that the resolution be brought to the attention of the presiding bishop.

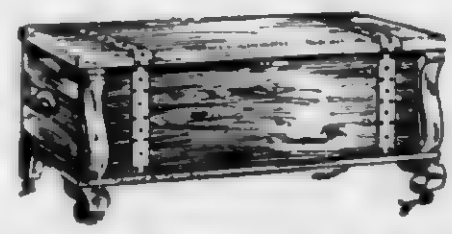
JUNE 20. 1918



Mrs. Winfield Scott, of Highland Avenue, daughter, Mrs. Charles Cannon, and granddaughter, Mary Elizabeth Cannon, have just returned from spending two weeks in Youngstown as guests of Mrs. Scott's brothers, M. W. and Paul G. Wade, who are photographers of that city. They came home by automobile, spending a night and day in Massillon, where Mr. Winfield Scott was, for a number of years, associated with the Massillon State Hospital.

Memorial Day, accompanied by Miss Maude J. Wade, a sister, and Mary Edith Wade, a niece, first decorating home graves here, they drove to Logan and nearby towns, decorating their mother and grandmother's graves. They visited acquaintances and places of forty years ago and took a picture of M. W. Wade on his 52nd birthday standing on the site of the old home, where he was born.

Returning through Chillicothe, they looked up friends at Camp Sherman, spending a little time with Rev. and Mrs. Turley.

After visiting with friends here, the Messrs. Wade returned to Youngstown Tuesday of last week, by way of Lima, where a cousin, Dr. J. Croney, formerly of this city, now resides.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

THE tearing away of Broad street bridge and wrecking of the old laundry building on south side of the street will bring to mind of the "old settler" some of the old landmarks that one had to pass on his way from Columbus to "Glenwood" or "Sullivant's Hill," by which names our present Hilltop was known back in the early '70's. In order to make the journey one had the choice of three methods—by horse and buggy, on horseback or walking half way and "hoofing" it the other half. Horse cars had not yet made their appearance on that thoroughfare.

On reaching the Scioto river, just before entering the old wooden, covered bridge, perhaps you would stop and watch the landing of a few passengers and the unloading of freight from the canal boat which had just pulled in from the south at Fitch's warehouse, which was the north terminal of that canal system. If you had time you'd watch them as the empty boat was them pulled north along the east bank under the bridge till the horses or mules reached the roadway on the northside of the bridge, when they were unhitched and probably led up the inclined road to the street to be fed, while the boat was pushed across to the west side of the river by means of long poles to Monypeny's warehouse which stood at the river's edge on the north side of the street, where a cargo of wheat and corn was loaded on it, after which it returned to the east bank, and was again started on its southern trip, the horses following along the tow-path on the river bank till they came to Mound street where the canal begun.

Coming west from there on the National pike (Broad street) you approached Franklinton, by which name that locality was then known, but no railroads.

If you were on the market for a marriage license, or wished to transact some legal business, maybe you stopped at the old Franklin county court house, which stood where the Franklinton school now stands, at the northeast corner of Broad and Sandusky. Continuing west past the convent grounds, with a few houses along the way, you were in the country with farms on both sides of the road.

On reaching the foot of the hill which was considerably steeper than at present one could see by looking closely the old log house that stood on the top of that knoll on the north side of the road and east of the main drive into the State Hospital grounds. It was occupied by Andrew Stierhof, the hostler and handy man for hospital officials. To the west of the driveway and south of the main entrance of the main hospital building, which was being constructed, stood the double frame house which now stands on the back end of the lot between Whitethorne and Belvidere, on the south side of Broad. The territory between these two avenues at that time was occupied by a brick manufacturing concern, engaged in burning brick for the new hospital building. Opposite this on north side of the road was built a temporary structure for housing the workmen employed on the building, it extending east and west along the road with a bar in one end of it. It was called "Kramer's Boarding House," and, as could be imagined, was a pretty lively place, especially after working hours. The petitions dividing the sleeping rooms, which were wooden were only about six feet high, offering temptations to the occupants for landing an old boot or a pumpkin or cabbage onto the bed of his sleeping neighbor: or, if short on "AA" smoking, or chewing tobacco, it was easy going "over the top" when the coast was clear. A story is told of two tramps who appeared there one day with a bundle of men's socks of the "salt and pepper" variety prevalent in those days, which they tried to exchange for supply of the "oh, be joyful" at the bar. The boarders put up a scheme on them. Mr. Herman Michaelis, now deceased, who had previously served as constable in Marietta, pronounced them under arrest, and turning to the bar keeper with a request for his rig as a conveyance to haul them to jail, purposely gave them a chance to run, which they did, and the gang after them showering them with bricks and stones over the hill to the hollow now used as a ball grounds, nearly to the river, after which they returned and divided up the socks. Next morning some children on their way to school, ran a ground squirrel under the stone curbing of the old well that stood about where Midland avenue comes out, where they found another bundle of socks.

A Good Way to Celebrate

With Fourth of July but two weeks off, wouldn't it be one fine way to celebrate it this year if every home and business place on the Hilltop would display at least one American flag and buy at least one thrift stamp on that day? Both of these seem a small thing to do, but what a tribute that would be to the Hilltop boys who are giving their lives that all the world may enjoy the freedom which we Americans have enjoyed for so long.

Ladies White Canvas Strap Sandals, $1.48. Broad-Terrace Shoe Store.

How do you enjoy the walk around to State St. bridge in going over town these days? A good way to save that big walk is to do all your shopping on the Hilltop.

Don't forget the Patriotic Community Sing at Memorial Hall next Sunday afternoon at four o'clock.

School vacation for the summer begins with this week.

THE HILLTOP RECORD

Of Interest to the People on the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 2. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, June 27, 1918 No. 10

General Pershing Says to the Women of America:

WRITE! WRITE! WRITE!

From the man who commands "our boys" in France comes this message: "Let everyone who has a loved one on this side, write, write, write. Send long, cheerful letters telling not of great events but of the happenings in the home—things about friends and all things that look little to the folks at home, but which the soldiers like to read about. Then again, don't wait for a reply. Replies may not always be prompt, but let the letters from home be very prompt.

Repeated stories are being told of the absolute joy with which mail is received on the other side. The message from home telling of the little things that are happening, mean more than anything else in the world to "the boys" in the trenches. The following written from the Front, is a further call to duty: "The influence which our women exercise on the army's conduct in this war cannot be overestimated. They are the army's inspiration in everything it does. The soldier fights not for himself but for the woman he loves—for her and for her posterity. * * * So, the army's message to the women is that it is here for them. We say to each of them—your fighting man has come to France to take his part in the great war, animated by the same impulses which make an American fight anywhere for the protection of womenkind. The soldier knows that the women trust him and that they will encourage and support him."

The importance of writing letters to the boys "over there" cannot be overstated. It is just as much a part of the work necessary for victory as is the shipping of arms and ammunition. The morale of our troops must be kept up. They need your help. They need the inspiration that comes from friendly words from home.

They are, in large measure, strangers in a strange land. They are in the midst of death and desolation. They have a tremendously hard task to do and they are doing that task for us—for you and for me. It is only a small thing for them to ask, but a very necessary thing for us to do—to write, and write frequently.

And when you send letters see to it that you write and direct these letters in such a way as to insure their delivery. The American Postal Service in France thus urges relatives of American soldiers to exercise extreme care in directing mail to the troops abroad.

"Given names should be written in full. Return address should be given and ink should always be used. Lead pencil writing often becomes illegible in transit."

General Pershing singles this one thing out among the most vital services that the women of America can render to "the boys" over there.

Remember this message—write, write, write.

When you write, don't forget to enclose a stamp. He can not get them as readily as you can.

NOTICE.—The Fourth of July being next Thursday, we expect to have the Record out on Wednesday next week. Please get communications or news items in by TUESDAY noon, if possible, to insure publication.

Highland Avenue's Patriotic Work

Following is the Thrift Stamp and War Savings Stamp report, Highland Avenue School:

Total sales, $4,102.99. Chester Cook, Colonel, 8-B Class. He has a credit of 900 War Savings Stamps sold. Bernard Anthony, Captain, 7-A Class. He has bought 20 War Savings Stamps. Guy Williams, 6-A, Captain. He has bought 20 War Savings Stamps.

Mrs. Dolle's Sewing Classes and Miss Watts' class, 6-A, and Miss O'Neill's class, 8-B, have each made a Red Cross blanket and Miss Mathews' class, 6-A, has made an infant's Red Cross blanket.

During vacation the children may buy their stamps at Highland Avenue School on Monday and Tuesday of each week of Miss Hatt. Let us keep up the good work we have started.

Only one class—7-A Room 10—has gone "over the top." Every pupil in 7-A, Room 10, has bought Thrift Stamps. The class numbers 40 pupils.

This report respectfully submitted by Augusta Scheiderer, Highland Avenue School secretary.

Men's White Oxfords, $2.85. Broad-Terrace Shoe Store.

Miss Dorothy Hammerstein, 208 Whitethorne Ave., reader, will give a recital at the Burgess Avenue Church, Tuesday evening July 2d, at 8 o'clock. No admission will be charged, but a silver offering will be taken. Proceeds to go to the Intermediate Society of the Church. Everybody welcome.

Does that house need painting? Better let me estimate on the job. Strictly first class work. Also paper hanging. Roy Barrell, 267 Whitethorne ave.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

THE STATE HOSPITAL

THE Asylum for the Insane first stood on the north side of East Broad street, about a mile east of the State House. It was built about 1844, and held in its inter days over 300 patients. It was totally destroyed by fire on the night of November 18, 1868. Six patients' lives were lost at that time.

After an act and appropriation by the State legislature to rebuild it—and even the work partly commenced—the plans were changed, and a tract of land containing 300 acres was purchased from Mr. William S. Sullivant, part of which was then known as Sullivant's Hill, on the north side of the National Pike (now Broad street) about three miles west of Columbus. The price paid was $100,000. This was to be the new location of the hospital. On July 4, 1870, a consecration service was held, and was taken part in by officers of Grand Lodge of Masons. This was presided over by Governor R. B. Hayes. A street parade was held in Columbus in honor of the occasion, in which the State officials, fire department, visiting Masonic lodges, and others, took part. The name of the location was changed from "Sullivant's Hill to "Glenwood."

On September 1, 1870, work of excavation for the main building was begun, with appropriate ceremonies, during which Mr. William S. Sullivant threw out the first shovel full of dirt.

The name of the institution was changed to the Central Asylum for the Insane. After its completion, the first regular patients were received on September 7, 1877. Dr. Richard Gunday was the first Superintendent, but only remained about a year, and was succeeded by Dr. W. W. Ellsbury.

Some of the men working on the building lived with their families in small cottages erected on the grounds for that occasion.

The house on the north side of Broad street near Midland avenue, occupied at present by Dr. Williams, was used as an office building by the administration board, and stood north of the front entrance to the main building.

Most of the brick used in construction of the building was made at the Jones & Co. brick yard, which was just opposite on the south side of the road, just east of what is now Whitethorne avenue, and occupied a strip of about 33 acres, running through to Sullivant road on the south. Whitethorne avenue was then a township road and run between the brick yard and a strip of woods then owned Mr. Thomas, who lived at that time on the west side of this road, about 200 yards south of the National pike.

East of the brick yard along the south part had grown up quite a hazlenut patch, which was an attractive place for boys at the proper season. Not far from this, on the south side of Sullivant road, stood Gill's saw mill, which did quite a business in this line.

It was in a pasture field between Thomas' woods and what is now Highland avenue, that Mr. Hiram Davidson, now living on Highland avenue had an experience with a young Jersey bull. He was crossing this field on his way home, when he espied said J. b. coming toward him with his head lowered in a way that foretold hostility. Mr. Davidson suddenly resolved to adopt, without further notice, "safety first" methods, which resolution he put into execution by taking refuge in a nearby small hickory tree whose lower limbs presented an inviting opportunity. Just as he had reached a place "high and dry" Mr. J. B. took possession of all that territory under the tree and proceeded to surround it and lay plans for his "trenches," etc. After this he adopted the seige method and spent his time gazing up into the tree at Mr. D., with a longing desire to give him the "once-over," while Mr. D. sat there wishing for a good supply of the products of the brickyard. After an hour and a half of "watchful waiting" the seige was declared off by Mr. J. B., who relinquished his strategic position and sauntered away, when Mr. D. came down from his roost and made for the nearest fence about 500 feet away.

A New Independence Day

The day the first British soldier fell on European soil, during the present struggle against old-world militarism, a new and wonderful thing took place in America. When that British soldier fell, mortally wounded, fighting for the liberties of the world, the death-knell was sounded in America, of a certain spirit that will never be revived.

That British soldier—he may have been a boy from the British Isles, from Canada, from Australia, or from New Zealand—that British soldier, when he fell, died in behalf of American independence. Therefore his spirit that has in times past expressed itself in blind, provincial spread-eagleism, can no longer perpetuate itself on American soil. When that British soldier fell there took place in America a revolution more abrupt than the early, heroic one of Seventy-Six. It was a revolution as regards the attitude of every true American toward Independence Day and his understanding of the real spirit in which the Declaration of Independence was written. No longer will it be possible for an American to speak of Great Britain's sons as aliens. From this time forth, he must speak of them as brothers.

Whatever may be the joy of an American when he thinks of his civil liberties, he can no longer show true patriotism and national pride by using England's defeat in any past war as a subject of never-ending triumph and exultation. The mingling of the blood of British and American boys on European battle-fields has forever sealed fraternal intimacy between the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race.

Ralph Walcutt, 44 S. Wheatland, has gone to Milford Center to spend the summer.

Mr. Edward Courtright of 2542 W. Broad St., died Monday at 11:30 P. M. at Grant Hospital. He had been ailing only a few days, and became seriously worse Monday afternoon. Counsel was called and he was hurried to the hospital for an operation, but it was too late.

He leaves a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Felton of Galloway, and Miss Florence Courtright, and a brother, Mr. Samuel Courtright, and a sister, Miss Martha Courtright both of Galloway. The funeral services will be held at 1 P. M. Thursday, at the residence, at 2 P. M., at the U. B. Church at Galloway.

Store open Wednesday night. Closed July 4th. Broad-Terrace Shoe Store.

A Christian Endeavor society has just been organized at the St. Paul United Evangelical church with the following officers: President, Mr. Okey Gaitrell, vice president, Earl Daniels, Secretary, Ruth Ellison; Treasurer, Jennie Pink; Organist, Mabel Dun; Chorister, Donald Baker. The first meeting of the society will be held Sunday evening at 7:30 when echoes of the State Christian Endeavor Convention which was held in Newark last week will be given by members who attended. A splendid program is being arranged for this service. If you are interested in Christian Endeavor be sure and come, and if you are not interested be sure and come. You will be welcome.

Mrs. Martha Ludwig of Madison, Ohio, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. P. E. Smoke of 24 South Warren Ave., for a few days.

All the war gardeners of West Broad Street School will meet at the building next Tuesday afternoon, July 9th, at 3 o'clock, to receive their badges. Keep on "a-hoein' and a-singin'" for your "Uncle Sam."

The Memorial Baptist, at the close of its services last Sunday morning, renewed its call for the second time to the Rev. C. R. Robbins, D. D., to become its pastor which call has been accepted. Dr. Robbins was for twenty-six years pastor of the Lincoln Park Institutional Baptist Church, Cincinnati, one of the largest Baptist churches in the denomination. A nervous breakdown from overwork necessitated his relinquishing the strenuous work. After a long and seemingly hopeless sickness he was fully restored to health in answer to prayer. During the past six months while acting pastor of the Memorial Baptist Church of this city more than fifty members have been received, the financial income nearly doubled and his salary three times increased. In accepting this call it is with the understanding he is privileged to assist churches at dedication services, church debt raising and conducting evangelistic meetings. A somewhat singular coincident is that at the same meeting last Sunday the church also extended a call to Miss Louisa Goranflo as assistant pastor who had served fourteen years as one of the assistants and private secretary of Dr. Robbins in his long pastorate in Cincinnati.

As long as we think only of what our country has done for us, our patriotism is likely to be of the quiescent sort, and hardly equal of making its presence known. But when we begin to think of what we may do for our country, patriotism leaps into a flame. Self-absorption is desirous to all motives. Loyalty, as well as love, grows by self-sacrifice.

Clarence Vanmeter, 115 South Oakley avenue, left on Tuesday morning for Chillicothe to work with the civil engineers in surveying the land preparatory to enlarging Camp Sherman. He expects to be gone two or three weeks.

The last draft list of young men who have become of age within the past year catches a large number of our Hilltop boys.

Some of our stores will close at 5:00 p.m. each day through the week, excepting Saturday, during July and August.

If you expect to go away during the vacation season, please send us announcement of the fact.

Mr. Rocco Emanuel has opened a shoe repair shop at 14 Highland avenue, in the room formerly occupied by Dr. Sharp as an office.

Sister Sue Pumps for girls, 85c Broad-Terrace Shoe Store.

The car strike of the first of the week demonstrated the great growth in the number of automobiles in the past eight years. When the other strike occured in 1910 the motor drawn vehicles were pretty scarce, but at this time their presence reminded one of a morning during State Fair week.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

THE OLD NATIONAL ROAD

THE Old National Road, of which West Broad steet is a part, was built to answer a nation's needs, in early days, from the time of the building of its first ten miles in 1811, which started west from Cumberland, Md., its eastern terminus. As time went by it was extended through Petersburg, Uniontown and Washington, Pa., to the Ohio river at Wheeling, where it crossed into Ohio passing through Cambridge, Guernsey, county, Zanesville, the southern part of Licking county, to Columbus, from thence west through Madison county, Springfield, the northern edge of Montgomery and Preble counties to the Indiana line, through Richmond, Indianapolis and Terre Haute, thence through Illinois, touching Vandalia, terminating in western part of that State near the Mississippi river, not far from St. Louis, Mo. It, was, before the advent of the railroad the great highway which helped in a wonderful way in opening up and bringing together the eastern part of the coun- with the "far west," as this section was called in the earlier days.

The road was first built under supervision of the United States government, but was afterward turned over to the different states through which it passed. Work on extension of the road from Wheeling into Ohio as far as Zanesville, was begun in 1825, and was completed to Columbus by 1833. It entered Columbus on Friend (now Main) street, to High, thence north to Broad where it resumed its westward course. Concerning the route west of Columbus, an old edition of the Ohio State Journal said:

"The adopted road leaves Columbus at Broad street, crosses the Scioto river at that end of the street and on the new wooden bridge erected in 1826. . . . Thence passes through the village of Franklinton, and across the low grounds to the bluff which is surrounded at a depression formed by a ravine, and at a point in the prolongation in the direction of Broad street; thence by a small angle, a straight line to the bluffs of Darby creek; to pass the creek and its bluffs some angles were necessary; thence nearly a straight line through Deer Creek Barrens, and across that stream to the divining grounds, between the Scioto and Miami waters; thence nearly down to the valley of Beaver Creek.

Shortly after the road was built across the State of Ohio it was seen that a revenue must be raised for the expense of keeping it up from those who traveled on it, and laws were passed authorizing the erection of toll gates.

The toll gate was a long pole extending across the road and fastened to a post near one end, with a few feet extending over the short end and weighted so that by releasing the rope at the long end of the pole it was lifted into the air high enough to allow the passing of the horse or vehicle wishing to go through. The man in charge was called the toll gate keeper, and lived at his station, called the toll house. In early days in Ohio he was appointed by the governor, but later, after the road had passed under the care of the counties in went through, the commissioners had the appointing.

Following is a partial list of toll charged at these gates, which existed in 1840:

Score sheep or hogs, 5 to 10c. Score cattle, 20c. Every horse, mule or ass, led or driven, 3c. Every horse and rider, 5c. Sled or sleigh drawn by horse or ox, 5c. Each additional horse, 5c. Each dearborn, sulky, chair or chaise, one horse, 10c. Each additional horse, 5c. Vehicles with tires from two and a half inches to six inches in breadth, from 10c down to 4c, according to width of tire.

These prices prevailed, with some changes at various times as long as toll gates were in use.

Friends' Reconstruction and Relief Work

Friends are now on trial as a body before the country. We must do all things necessary to an adequate organized expression of our desire to serve our country and humanity. The maximum of our resources must be utilized. In the last analysis the burden of responsibility rests upon the local communities. New homes will rise in Europe, farms rescued from deterioration, shivering and diseased bodies clothed and healed, and in our own home-land the crying needs of war-time ministered unto in proportion to the number of Friends' meetings which heed the call of a world in distress. There must be, firstly, a clear sympathetic vision of our obligation and a deep consecration to our tasks. There must be, secondly, an adequate organization for translating this vision and consecration into achievement.

Because of principles established by our forefathers, we hold, as a religious body, a peculiar relation to the present crisis. Thousands of persons outside our group are looking to us appealingly and insistently for leadership. As a body we shall be asked the question: "What are Friends doing in these times."

Only as a body can we adequately give answer. Not only can we best heed the present call of a world in distress in an organized way, but our [illegible] is at stake.

When the war is over, Friends should have a leading part in those readjustments which all persons realize must be made. If, however, we are spectators to the world tragedies of the present, we shall have sold our birthright. We shall have lost all right to speak. We shall have destroyed, on the part of others, all willingness to listen. To justify the negative attitude we are so often forced to take we must give ourselves in every positive service. To disprove the accusation of disloyalty to country that sometimes confronts us, we must show, as nearly as possible, a readiness for the quality of sacrificial service others are rendering. We must do all these things as a group or their significance as an expression of the Society of Friends will be largely lost.

The Friends of America's estimated budget is $250.000.00.

Total contributions received for week ending June 1 were $28.677.58

Supplies are sent to France, Belgium and Russia.

Our local church, the Highland Ave. Friends, has raised over $200.00 since January for Friends' reconstruction work

The ladies of the church have bought $40.00 worth of material, and made children's garments, which are sent from this unit.

The work which we are to do in France is an organic part of the civilian branch of the Red Cross.

Great opportunities are opening to us for impressing our love for our country, humanity at large and the Kingdom of God.

"Where can I find 'a book' that will give me the facts about the Indian and the Mound Builder?" has been asked many times by persons in all classes, and especially by pupils and teachers of the public schools.

Prof. H. C. Shetrone, 83 North Burgess Ave., Assistant Curator, Ohio State University, Archaeological and Historical Society, has produced a volume entitled "The Indian in Ohio," with a map of the Ohio country, that unifies under one cover, three aspects of the subject, namely, the American race as a whole; the Indian in Ohio (historic period), and the prehistoric or archaeological period in the same territory. Each of these topics has been presented by masters of thought and expression which, together with the map of the Ohio country, serves to give the reader a brief outline of Ohio Indian history that is well worth seeking.

Westwood Lodge No. 770, K. of P., held its first outing on July 4th at Tom's Grove, N. Hague Ave. A large crowd was in attendance and a general good time was had. The afternoon was spent in athletic games, Mr. F. L. Sulzberger being in charge of sports. A ball game between the Reds and Blues resulted in a victory for the Reds—18 to 8. There was also a tug of war, 100-yard races for boys, also for girls. Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Michaelis each won a needle-threading contest, he receiving a fountain pen and she a box of silk handkerchiefs as prizes.

The high spot of events was the horseshoe pitching by those noted Hilltop pitchers, Messrs. D. B. Ulrey, Frank Cussins, J. H. Carter, Chas. Cunningham and Mr. Ireland.

Lots of good ice cream, pop corn and peanuts served as refreshments for the event.

The Red Cross of Glenwood Unit will meet only on Wednesdays instead of Wednesday and Friday as heretofore. We have plenty room, plenty machines and plenty material for all who want to work on that day.

---

Nearly six months ago Mrs. Mary McKeever, 424 South Warren Avenue, developed a case of blood poisoning in her hand. After several attempts at healing it, without desired results, a good neighbor woman, Mrs. Mary Hull, 434 S. Warren, who served as a nurse in Cleveland, became interested in her case, and, after a faithful course of home treatments, has succeeded in helping to restore her to health again, to the great appreciation of Mrs. McKeever, who speaks very highly of her.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the St. Paul United Evangelical Church will hold their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. John Houdashelt, 101 N. Ogden Ave., Thursday, July 18th, at 2:00 P. M. Every member is urged to attend as a special program is being arranged for the day.

The many friends of Miss Eva Ross, who for several years, while she was employed as stenographer with the Central Building Loan & Savings Co., made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Scott, of Highland Ave., will regret to learn of her recent death after two weeks' illness, in Washington, D. C., where she was holding a government position.

---

Mrs. H. G. Deems (formerly Miss Metta Moore) underwent an operation at Protestant Hospital last Monday morning. At last reports she is said to be getting along quite well and her speedy recovery is hoped for and expected.

---

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Moss of S. Ogden Ave. entertained Sunday, Mrs. Anna Overly, Mrs. William Wheeler and daughter, Grace, Mrs. Chas. A. Moss and daughter, Dortha, and son, Robert, of Akron.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

THE OLD NATIONAL ROAD AND ITS STAGE COACH LINES

When we daily walk along our present main thoroughfare, West Broad street, and look upon the numerous street cars, automobiles, trucks and wagons, that give it life today, we can hardly realize that less than seventy-five years ago the real life of that highway—then the National road—was its numerous stage and mail coaches, freighters, etc. with the sound of their rattling wheels accompanied by the cracking whip, or echoing horns of their cheery divers as they drove their steeds over this line between Columbus and the west.

Just fancy a journey over this road, say back in the early forties, how many persons the traveler met! How many interesting and instructive conversations were held with fellow travelers along this journey, and persons of note that one met.

In the old coaching days along this road the passenger and mail coaches were operated similar to our present railway service. Large companies owned and operated different lines, and at times competition was very keen between these companies, both in fare cutting and speed between Columbus and other points. One of the lines operating over this road west of Columbus was known as the Ohio National Stage Company; another was Neil, Moore & Co.; both of these were Columbus companies.

There are very few persons around here now who have ever ridden in one of those old stage coaches, and it is doubtful as to whether there is any of the old coaches to be seen save possibly in some wild west show. They were very handsome in their day, painted and decorated inside and out, with a capacity of about a dozen persons, including the seat by the driver high up front, which was an enviable one in good weather. The coach rested on thick, wide leather straps which served as springs, and gave it sort of a "rocking" motion as the high rear wheels traveled over the road. The baggage was carried on the rear end. Ten miles an hour was an ordinary rate of speed for these coaches. But as competion between lines was keen, the driver was often urged to go the speed limit.

There was one line which advertised as "leaving Columbus daily, for Cincinnati at 8 a. m., and through in 36 hours, with a stop-over of six hours at Springfield."

Traveling after night was somewhat dangerous, especially through hilly country, when a mistep might cause an accident, besides the four or six horses could not be controlled as easily going down steep grades or sharp curves as well at night.

The U. S. mail was carried by contract with the government, similar to the railroads today. There were fast mail lines and way mail lines, also separate stages carrying such mail as newspapeas, etc. Some would think with our present fast mail trains of today that the stage coach mail was carried at a "snail pace" in comparison, but when we learn that it was carried from Columbus to Indianapolis in 20 hours, and to St. Louis in 49 hours, we come to the conclusion that it was not so slow after all.

Passengers traveling on the coaches would buy their tickets at the beginning of the entire journey. When coaches came to a toll gate—which was about ten miles from its preceeding one—the toll gate keeper counted the passengers and kept a strict account of the same, and the stage companies settled with the authorities.

As has been stated before, one of these toll gates was located on the Hilltop, and stood in its later days a little west of the corner of where north Wheatland avenue a Broad street is located. It had been moved at different times, standing at one time about where Midland avenue is, and at another at the present location of Broad street and Central avenue.

A Soldier's Letter to Doctor and Mrs. Whitehead

France, June 10, 1918.

Dear Doctor and Mrs. Whitehead:

This is rather a bad day outside, cold and drizzling rain, with no flying of course, all of which gives me opportunity to write. We have a very pleasant place to spend such days, here in the Red Cross Officers' Club, where we have an excellent library of both current magazines and books, very comfortable lounging chairs, music, tea and chocolate in the afternoons, and good writing facilities.

Saturday morning Don Graham, a Harvard chap, and myself went on our usual week-end visit to our French friends of whom I have told you before. They are surely wonderful people and really typical of the best in France. One cannot appreciate the true spirit and worth of the French people until he has met and known such ones as these.

On Sunday the Colonel put on his dress uniform, that of Colonel in the Dragoons. It was rather an elaborate affair and he really looked quite wonderful in it, with all its braid and his medals, (including the Legion d'honem, the highest of all French decorations). This he did in honor of his lieutenants, as he likes to call us The madam speaks very good English, having had an English nurse and having traveled a great deal so that we have little difficulty in being sociable as we might have is we were thrown upon our yet unmastered knowledge of the French language.

I think I told you in one of my other letters about Dr. Steiner being one of the post dentists here. I see him nearly every day and have a chat with him about news from home, etc. If anything he has gained in weight since coming into the service, which shows that the war has worked little hardship on him in this respect at least. I have some snap-shots being developed and printed which I hope will be finished by the next time I write you so that I can enclose a few.

The pictures which we can send home are restricted to personal ones only, and the taking of other pictures is carefully guarded against.

Hoping to hear from you at your first opportunity and also hoping that you are both in good health I remain.

Your sincere friend,

WALTER RANDOLPH.

Death of Mr. F. L. Beaver

Franklin Lafayette Beaver was born near Hebron, Licking county, Ohio, April 7, 1854, and departed this life July 11, 1918, aged 64 years, 3 months and 4 days. He leaves a widow, one daughter, Mrs. Mabel Wickham, Newark, Ohio, two sons, Charles and Carl, one sister, Mrs. Emma Tom, two brothers, Martin I. and Marion Beaver, of this city, three grandchildren and numerous other relatives and a host of friends to mourn their loss.

Mourn not the dead who calmly lie
By God's own hand composed to rest.
For hark! A voice from yonder sky,
Proclaims them blest, supremely blest.

With them the toil and strife are o'er,
Their labors end, their sorrow cease,
For they have gained the blissful shore.
Where dwells serene eternal peace.

A letter from L. A. Rosser, who is on the U. S. S. Jupiter, written to Mrs. Daisy Walcutt, says in part:

Boston, Mass., June 6.

"I have been advanced another notch, and had to change my uniform, which will cost be seventy-five dollars or a hundred dollars, before I get the whole outfit. We, the gunners gang, came very near signing a pledge for a month not to write to anyone, because we did not get any mail for about two weeks. I think it was delayed somewhere. Everyone was barred but our best girls—mother.

The mail arrived, and we voted not to adopt the motion. May go home the first chnace I get. But chances are slim at present."

The pastor of this church some years ago saw a boy fishing with two hooks. On one was a bit of red flannel and the other a wiggling worm. When asked for what purpose the lad answered: "One is for suckers, the other for shiners." Dr. Robbins took the hint and began giving each Sunday a five minute prelude on some popular theme preceding his sermon Many of those preludes were published in the daily papers of Cincinnati, some were republished in other papers and magazines. Theme of preludes this coming Sunday. Morning: "The Last Biscuit." Evening: "Milk or Booze." Come and hear.

PRAYER

Last Sunday morning at the Memorial Baptist church, the paster, Dr. Robbins, gave a five minute prelude preceding the sermon, on the following theme: "Stop a minute every noon and pray."

"Sweetly sings Tennyson, 'More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of.' Still more significantly sings another poet: 'Who goes to bed and does not pray makes two nights of every day.' One of mine own favorite coined sentences is, 'The surest way to the accomplishment of great things is by way of the throne of grace.' The request has gone forth that every person in this great nation stop a minute each noon and pray. President Wilson says of this: 'Beautiful, incalculable in significance and worth.'

"First, what shall I do? 1. Inculcate reverence everywhere. 2. Call to remembrance God. The greatest and gravest sin of our nation and world has been forgetfulness of Jehovah, and this is the principle cause of this horrible, unparalleled war. 3. The starting of a world wide revival of pure and undefiled religion, the supreme need of the church and mankind universally.

"Second, for whom shall I pray? 1. The president of the United States and all in authority. 2. The soldiers and sailors and their families. 3. A saloonless nation. 4. World wide evangelization. 5. The speedy coming of the kingdom of God. Not only world democracy, but world wide Christianization.

"'Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done.'

"'Never since time began
Has mortal man
Had sorer need to pray that prayer immortal.
For ne'er before has Death's grim door
Its gaping portal flung so wide,
Nor man so gallantly defied
His menace, and so vastly died;
Never has life so racked and tortured been,
Nor earth such deadly exigencies seen.
And that full prayer of prayers
In its divine simplicities
Fills all the heights and depths
Of our necessities.
Granted in full it would bring earth
To heaven, and unto life—new birth
So—to your knees—
And, with your heart and soul, pray God
That wars may cease.
And earth, by His good will,
Through these rough ways, find peace!
"Thy kingdom come;
And, as in heaven,
On earth Thy will be done!'"

—The Fiery Cross by J. Oxenham.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

CAMP CHASE AND ITS SURROUNDINGS IN THE DAYS OF '61-'65

GOING west from Columbus, on the National road (now Broad street), in 1861, after passing through the village of Franklinton, which was located in the vicinity of the present Broad and Sandusky street corners, one passed through a region of rich farm land, with scarcely a house in sight till the foot of a steep bluff was reached. The roadway led up to the top of this bluff past a thick growth of timber and underbrush which bore the marks somewhat of the days of the old settlers when the Indian, panther, wildcat, etc., frequented this territory. The raccoon, wild turkey, and other game could still be found here, while over to the north, along the river, were plenty of muskrats, skunks, and possibly a beaver now and then. On reaching the top of the hill a by-road on the north led to the Sullivant homestead that stood a short distance off the road not far from where the main hospital building now stands. Passing on west, with scarcely anything in sight but woods and meadows, you came to a long row of willow trees that stood on the south side of the road, beginning about where Eureka avenue now is and exteding westward nearly to the old Thomas farm house that stood back from the road on the location of the present home of Attorney Carl Weber. (An old saw mill stood to the south of this house for some years.) On going about half a mile west you came to the famous old four-mile house, which was torn down but a few years ago, that, as a historical landmark occupied a very prominent place during the days of the old stage coach lines, and at the time of the Civil War. It stood on the north side of the road a short distance west of the present Hilltop Transfer Co. and Beckett Garage building.

Opposite this house on the south side of the road almost as far as one could see then, was a plot of farm land containing about 465 acres which was a noted spot in the history of the Civil War, and a part of which became the final resting place of 2260 Southern soldiers who had died while prisoners of war in its enclosures, and whose remains now lay in the little Confederate Cemetery beneath the shade of many native and imported southern trees, surrounded by a four-foot stone wall, on the extreme southern border of the old camp ground, and on the north side on what is now Sullivant avenue.

About three months after the beginning of the Civil War, in 1861, between twenty and thirty prisoners of war from the 23d Virginia Regiment, recently captured in the Kanawha Valley, and brought to Columbus, became the first occupants to inhabit the Camp Chase prison. These were held as hostages for the Union Soldiers captured by Confederates. They were not held long, but were returned to their homes.

The prison section of Camp Chase was located near the southeast corner of the big camp ground as what is now Hague and Sullivant avenues. It was enclosed within a board fence about fourteen feet high at the top of which was built platforms around it which were occupied by sentinels to guard from escape, etc. This was enclosed by an outer high board fence extending around the entire camp and parade ground. Within the prison enclosure were two rows of buildings to house the prisoners, used for mess and bunking purposes. These were long rooms, with single bunks arranged three tiers high—the occupant of the upper tier being so close to the roof as to almost brush the under side of it when he turned over. The tables for eating were composed of planks, and were adorned with plate, knife and fork, tin cup for coffee and an iron spoon for each of the thirty or forty prisoners that gathered around them. The prisoners stood while eating. A large ditch, traces of which can still be seen on South Hague avenue ran through the prison enclosure from west to east.

Hilltop Children Use Playground

According to an estimate over 71 per cent of the regular children at Glenwood Park Playground are Hilltop residents. This means that all the West Side are not using the park At the playground this year there are new slides, climbing ladders, rings and poles. A tennis court is being built which will run on schedule time. This year there will be twilight play, the park being open till dark, starting Mon., July 22. (Hrs., 9 a. m. till dark.) Miss K. Cherry and Oliver S. Matheny are the same teachers as were last year.

A Letter from Ralph Roe

France, June 10, 1918

Dear Little Mother and All:

It has been some ten days now since I last wrote, and much has happened in that time that will make it difficult to tell it all to you in sequence.

To date I have had no mail from the States, although it has been over a month since we left our Texas camp, and that makes it more difficult to write, because of extreme loneseomeness and the feeling, somehow, despite common sense to the contrary, that nobody back there cares whether or not they write.

We left our Rest Camp at the port of debarkation, where we had been for four or five days, several days ago, and traveled by rail to our first training area. At this latter place our headquarters were billeted in a charming, deserted chateau in a small village, where I was so fortunate as to have a tiny room all to myself and was able to sleep in a real bed, on a real mattress for the first time in many months. When we had to leave there, after a very short stay, to move on to our present location, the parting was almost heart-breaking, if that term may be applied to the parting between animate and inanimate things, such as I and my billet.

So much as I have seen of France has made a profound impression upon me We traveled by rail several hundred miles from the port of debarkation through what I believe to be a part of the country not yet touched by the war's desolation. It was a continual panorama of natural scenery, the beauty of which I never have seen duplicated anywhere. The entire journey made the railway seem a blot upon an earthly paradise. The people everywhere are wonderful. They combine a reserved courtesy to curiosity with any kindnesses they may be able to show us.

RALPH.

Dr. E. H. Cosner, Dayton, Ohio

Livest wire in the Montgomery county dry organization. Last year, in addition to making many speeches throughout the state, he spoke at some 120 places in Montgomery county. Dr. Cosner presents the subject from a dual standpoint, that of the effect of alcohol on the human system and of its cost to the taxpayer. Through many years' practice he has seen the effect of the use of liquor in the home and his convincing manner of speech leaves no doubt in the minds of his hearers as to the truth of his statements. He comes to Columbus from Piqua, where he speaks at the Grace M. E. church in the morning. He was obtained for 11th Ward meeting through the efforts of Mr. C. S. Randall and W. H. Fledderjohn.

He will be at Glenwood Church Sunday at 7:45.

The Republican County Central Committee is composed of one representative from each ward and township in Franklin county. The members of this committee are chosen at the Primary election Aug. 13th.

I am a candidate for Committeeman from the Eleventh Ward and will appreciate your support.

Out in the Mongongahala valley one sweet summer morning two miners in the early dawn went into one of those underground chambers where death always lurkes, and they had gone a little way when there was one of those terrible explosions which any time may be expected. One of these men was thrown to the ground and was probably insensible until he died. The other, no one knows how long he suffered from hunger and suspense till death came to his release and relief. It was more than a week of strenuous work, day and night, by sorrowing comrades before the bodies of these men were recovered. Then it was discovered thatt he slowly dying man had upon the black coal wall scratched with an old rusty nail six inscriptions, which, by the genius of a little girl putting plaster paris upon, they were able to read. The first was this, "One biscuit left." Imagine the terrible distress of mind and anguish of spirit when out of the two dinner pails there was only one little biscuit left to stay the pangs of hunger and ward off starvation. The second inscription was, "Thankful for an opportunity to repent." Poor Hans. Thankful there was time for making his peace with God and securing entrance through the open gateway of Heaven. The third line was, "Christ can save us." And so he can; for He is able and willing to save unto the uttermost through the blood that flowed from the five bleeding wounds on the crimson cross of Cavalry. This was the following sentence, "Give all my property to Lizzie." This referred to his wife. I recall one day being less than an inch from death in a railroad calamity, and, like flashes of lightning, these two thoughts dashed across my brain: "Thank God my two life insurance policies are paid in full and due in a few weeks; second, I am so glad that it was possible for me to have collected the last dollar on our church debt of twenty-eight thousand dollars before leaving my family and church"? The fifth words were: "I must lie down." He was fainting and sinking, dying; then raising himself on his knees he scratched on the face of the coal drift these significant words: "Send my children to Sunday school." This was the last message of the dying man; and, if this were my last words to you, my dear people, in this prelude from this pulpit this morning, to parents especially, it would be this: "Send your children to Sunday school and the morning services of preaching and worship. O fathers and mothers, let me beseech you that you never neglect the religious teaching and training of your children. Training, which is teaching chrystalized into staunch, shining, enduring character. But don't say to them, "Go," but "Come."

A Bit of History About Some of the Above

Ft. Sumter had been fired on, and President Lincoln issued a call for 75,000 men on the 15th of April, 1861.

Capt. Henry Thrall, of the Vedettes, a company of boys organized in 1857, was in the State Auditor's office when the call came in. He went to the Governor's office and offered the services of the company, which was accepted, and on Monday evening, April 17th, the company was on its way to Washington, 95 strong, officered complete. Stopped at Lancaster, Pa., two weeks, then to Harrisburg two weeks, then to Philadelphia, camped there two weeks at Suffolk Park, Centennial Exhibition. From there to Washington, through old Baltimore. Camped on the north side of Washington for a few days, got our guns and equipment, then marched over the long bridge and went into camp on the Virginia side of the Potomac. Drilled, dress paraded, was inspected, did guard and picket work. Took up our march to Fairfax C. H., and was one of the skirmishers on the first line of battle. Did not have fight with the Johnnies, but we threw down fences for the line of battle, and picked up dewberries and ate them so the line of battle would not trip on them—these berries were big, fat ones.

We marched on to Centerville, Va. Had a little brush with the enemy. Went into camp a few days. Saturday evening, July 29th, '61, we took up our march to Bull Run, arriving there just before daylight, the 21st, at or near the stone bridge on the Warren pike. Our brigade—Schenk's—was ordered to the rear, and marched obliquely to the left and got within 350 yards of a Rebel masked battery in the woods and was under their fire for two and a half hours. Returned to the Warren pike and supported our batteries until evening. Infantry and artillery retreated. Our brigade was rear guard back to Fairfax C. H., and in good order arriving at Camp Upton at noon on Wednesday, the 22d.

Frank Dorsey, who was with the 17th Engineers in France, but returned to America, on account sickness, and spent some time in the U. S. Hospital at Waynesville, N. C., is now home a 30 day furlough. The 17th, which contains a large number of our Hilltop boys, was among the first 35,000 Americans to reach France, and have been engaged in construction work over there for nearly a year. That regiment was one of the three U. S. regiments to march in the London parade on August 15, 1917, which was reviewed by the king and queen. Frank expects be back in service at the end of his furlough, but does not know where he will be sent.

CAMP CHASE AND ITS SURROUNDINGS IN THE DAYS OF '61-'65

CAMP CHASE Prison was the receiving place of thousands of Confederate prisoners during the Civil War, who were brought there and held for exchange, etc. The greatest number there at any one time was in 1863, when about 8,000 prisoners were quartered within the stockades.

Naturally the congregation of a large number of men like this would experience more or less sickness, disease, etc. which resulted in a large death roll; hence the present Confederate Cemetery, which was the burying ground for those prisoners during the days of the war. (It is said that three Union soldiers were also buried there.)

A disease that infected the camp a good deal was smallpox, which broke out among the prisoners and took a large toll. In order to combat this disease and care for the afflicted, a separate building was erected south of the prison ground along the east line of the camp, and was known as the "pest house" (it is said that an old thorn tree which still stands along the west side of Hague avenue a short distance north of Sullivant is the same one which stood by the side of that building.) A wagon known as the "black Mariar" conveyed the dead from that place to the grave yard.

There stood, at that time, on the south side of the Sullivant road, opposite the site of the present Confederate Cemetery, a farm house which was occupied by a Mr. Lacey, with a large family. One of the members of this family was an ambitious son of about 15 years, named Henry. He like most farmer boys was the possessor of one member of the farm's live stock. In this instance it was a pig. Though Henry was raising the pig for the purpose of supplying the wants of the inner man, the piggie was developing his talents for a "roadster." It was one day in late spring of 1864, when this valued possession of Henry's resolved then and there to embark on a foraging expedition—probably taking the desire by seeing the soldiers' exploits. He hadn't wandered far from his own "fireside" till Henry started in pursuit, and was about to overtake him when, with a grunt he quickly threw his gear in "high" and ran the guard line, then made a shoot for the smallpox shed, where he took refuge beneath its floor.

Now Henry had just one idea on this occasion, and that was to recover his pig. He, also, started across the guard line, but was ordered to stop by the guard—which Henry didn't do. The guard told him he'd shoot. Henry told him to blaze away, but he was going to get his pig; which he did by crawling under the shed, when he grabbed the pig and drew it, squeal, smallpox germs and all from under the shed with an attitude of victory and satisfaction that can well be imagined.

But the victory was not all on Henry's side, for in "the fullness of time" Henry was down with A-1 case of smallpox. Twelve members of his father's family had the disease, and four brothers died with it.

Mr. Henry Lacey now lives at 353 Clarendon avenne. He is one of the oldest residents on the Hilltop, having never lived further than three miles away, except 18 months, since 1857.

He tells of a little joke some of the boys of the 88th Regiment, which was doing guard duty at Camp Chase, played on some "squirrel hunters" (new recruits for the Union Army). An army mule was confiscated and decorated all over with canteens, old kettles, cans, etc., and turned loose and headed into the camp to where these new recruits were stationed; then a cry went up that Genl. Morgan was on his way to attack Camp Chase, and this, one of his mules, was loaded with all kinds of explosives, and was liable to blow up any minute. Of course the joke worked, with the result that a lot of those victims are reported as having ran faster than some of Columbus' citizens the day the "dam busted," in 1913.

THE HILLTOP RECORD

Of Interest to the People on the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 2. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, August 1, 1918 No. 15

FINDING MONEY

Occasionally there comes into the Record office some resident of the Hilltop, who wishes to advertise for some lost money. We cheerfully insert the ad, but, at the same time, have a sympathetic feeling that the chances are two to one against the recovery of the lost money. Why? The Hilltop is not exempt from some dishonest persons, who, on finding such, instead of trying to find the owner, delude themselves with the fact that they are the gainers by pocketing the money of another person who has been so unfortunate as to lose it.

If a person finds an amount of money of any consequence and does not try to find the owner, he is doing a dishonest act and knows it.

An instance of the kind was that of the wife of a working man who lost eleven dollars in a pocket book with a gas receipt bearing her name and address. What excuse had the finder for not returning the money, which she said was all she had?

Another case was that of a boy who works on a milk wagon, who lost a pocket book containing $22.00, the pocket book having the owner's name on it. We do not know the owner, but venture to say that if necessary we could locate that man in a very short while.

There is one thing to be remembered when one finds a sum of money and keeps it—he has appropriated the same that belongs to someone else that, in all probability, has earned it and did not get the good of it.

Memorial Baptist

Sunday, A. M. Sunday school, 9:15

In the absence of the pastor, Dr. Robbins, who is on vacation and preaches Sunday in Bluefield, W. Va., the pulpit will be ably filled Sunday morning at 10:30 by Rev. T. E. Howe.

Evening at 7:30 by the Rev. T. F. Chambers, D. D., formerly pastor of the First Baptist Church of Columbus.

Dr. Robbins' five-minute prelude preceding the sermon last Sunday night was on this theme: "Shall We Grow Tobacco or Tomatoes." Let me ask this question: Can America, in this unparalleled crisis in the history of the world, in this awful hour of the righteous judgments of God, in this season of humanities' gethsemane, afford tobacco and continue to live selfishly and unsacrificingly and dare to luxuriate in soft living, smoking and chewing what animals refuse to eat, when the breast of the world is being torn and lacerated by the arrows of war, and the great heart of mankind is bowed with grief and stricken with horror as never before in all the tides of time. Dr. Kane, one of the most distinguished physicians of Pennsylvania, is appealing to the farmers in all the tobacco-growing regions in the United States to plant food crops instead of tobacco. Note: Any soil rich enough to raise tobacco is sure to raise great quantities of wholesome food. If it is necessary (and we believe it is) to economize on wheat flour, meat, sugar, and like necessities, much more necessary we entirely cut out tobacco. If the country is coming to the pinch where it is going to be "nip and tuck" for people to get enough to eat, not only in America, but all over Europe, is it a folly and sin to waste national fertility on anything so absolutely useless and harmful as tobacco? While the aboriginal weed may survive moral assaults unscathed, economic arguments will soon be the death and burial of it. Slavery is forever gone. The saloon is doomed. Forever saloonless before 1920 will be the United States of America. Sunday baseball will be played never more. Theaters and picture shows will close. Dance halls will be emptied, and. If pulpit and press and people will unite in leadership in leading the present generation into the paths of purity and spiritual power, America, called of God to go in advance of world democracy and world-wide evangelization, will become the shining example of righteousness, and the power of God unto the salvation of the world. Say, let's stop raising tobacco and raise tomatoes.

Who and What Eats Tobacco?

Many men, some ministers, a few women, goats and the green, horny, ugly nasty, poisonous tobacco worm. What does for men and women: Discolors their pearly teeth unpleasantly scents their breath, dims [illegible] eyesight, impairs their hearing, wastes their money, causes stomach troubles innumerable, sleeplessness, nervousness, and the majority of cancer of lips, tongues, throat, intestinal troubles. Who eats tomatoes? The overwhelming majority of people throughout the country. Most anybody can raise them. Good raw or cooked: fresh from the vines or cans, pickles, pies, sauce, catsup, chilli [illegible] stewed baked, fried, served in all manner of ways, and withal, wholesome, contributing to longevity of life. Which shall it be, tobacco or tomatoes? Which shall it be, a needless luxury or an essential necessity?

I have thus spoken earnestly of a practical matter because the practical things have the most vital influence upon the ending of this cruel war and all our religious interests. Have you thought: God Himself has a son in this war. A little boy was walking out some weeks ago with his father. It was a beautiful sunset hour. Truly suggested against the soft red of the afterglow in the sky, one star began to shine, increasing its luster until it gleamed in golden glory. The baby boy noticed this and exclaimed: "Look, father, God is hanging out his service flag. He must have a son in the war." The kaiser has six sons safe and sound without a wound, while Theodore Roosevelt has one son—the youngest—dead, buried in Germany, surrounded by the enemies of mankind, and another sorely wounded, crippled for life, in an hospital in dear old France, and hundreds of thousands—among the best and bravest in all lands—living or dead; but listen: God has only one son, and that son is in the war. Jesus Christ is bleeding on "every battlefield of Europe." O, for his sake, let's sacrifice every luxury like tobacco and help bring forth every necessity like tomatoes for world democracy, world Christianization.

We began publishing The Hilltop Record one year ago last April. At that time we promised to improve the paper as time went on, and its patronage grew; which patronage, we can say has been very satisfactory on the part of Hilltop business men, whose support has made it possible to keep the paper going. But, like everything else these days, the cost of producing the paper has increased very much the past year, with prospects of going still higher.

We wish to continue to improve and enlarge the paper from time to time, but in order to do so, need more of the "wherewith" to pay for same. We have, in the past year, put out a large number of copies of the paper, aside from our regular subscribers, but expect to curtail that number more in the future, and are now kindly asking our readers to please assist in making the Record a better and larger paper by giving us your subscription for a year, and we will try to give the best we can in the way of a Hilltop newspaper.

Miss Ardis Hensel, 35 N. Warren avenue, has taken charge of the subscription department of the Record, and expects to call on you soon. Please give her your subscription or renewal when she calls. The price is only 50c a year. Six months, 25c. Miss Hensel's phone No. is Hilltop 179.

A Letter from Ralph Roe

France, June 10, 1918.

Dear Little Mother and All:

I cannot say so much of the French railways and other means of transportation. Our journey in particular was made extremely uncomfortable by the style and size of their cars. Good time was made practically the entire distance, due, I am convinced, to the fact that we were drawn most of the way by American locomotives of the large Pacific type. The roadway was well constructed and the track smooth, largely the result of improvements made by American engineers. As much of the country as I have seen is woefully hilly, and French motorcycles seem, none of them, to have been constructed with any idea of being capable of negotiating these hills.

At our first billeting area we had our first taste of what some phases of the war means. Several nights there were bombardments of a small, important city some few miles away. One evening we saw an aeroplane fight—that is, we could see the puffs and hear the reports of the guns, although the planes themselves were beyond our vision. A few days later we saw another aeroplane fight and chase, this time between two American planes and one German plane. It was much like a fight between wasps, and they were gone from our sight before we could witness the outcome.

At our present location we are in another very pretty little town, somewhat larger than our first billeting place. We are very comfortable, and, aside from the severe cold that I don't seem to be able to get rid of since getting over here, and which causes me frequent sick headaches, everything has been very comfortable and worth while, for, after all, there is nothing in life, no matter how inconvenient or distasteful, but what has its welcome compensation. The long hike from the railroad to our first billeting place, on a very hot day, with our heavy packs on our backs, our overcoats hung over the straps in front of us, our rifles slung over our shoulders, and wearing our warm blouses, with our feet sore and blistered, was more than compensated for by the comfortable billets we eventually reached and the splendid meals obtained while there.

We are still a goodly number of miles from the front lines and our various units in the course of their final training. Everything here is very peaceable. Yesterday was Sunday and there was some sort of a Grand Fete celebrated by the church. The procession was very short, but extremely picturesque, being headed by a number of children, mostly robed in white, the acolytes bearing the maces and the cross and in attendance upon the priest being in full vestment, and the priest also in full vestment walking under a gilded canopy, followed by a quartet of male voices, vested and chanting as they passed along. After these came the citizens of the village, many of them in mourning for members of their families lost in the war.

The madame of the billeting place for the men of our detachment is a most gracious woman, offering us many facilities for our personal comfort that are often fully unexpected and equally appreciated. She has lost her husband and one son in the war and has another son in the front line trenches.

There are many other things I should like to relate, but censorship forbids, so will reserve it for the telling at some time in the distant future. Will endeavor to write again within the next week or ten days. With love to all.

RALPH.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

CAMP CHASE AND ITS SURROUNDINGS IN THE DAYS OF '61-'65

We mentioned, in the closing part of last week's story, a joke that was played on some new recruits, in regard to the notorious Gen. Morgan and his band of raiders who had been pillaging Southern Ohio. Reports were circulated at different times that he was about to break on Camp Chase and release the prisoners.

Here's a little incident that happened at one of these times: Near the camp stood a house occupied by a family of prominence in those days. The family had retired for the night, and everywhere quietude seemed to abound, when suddenly the wife was startled by hearing a "bang, bang, rattle, bang, bang," almost in her midst. She lay there almost afraid to breath, feeling sure Morgan had come and was making a night attack on Camp Chase, and all kinds of things were happening, when suddenly there came to her ear, in the midst of the darkness, the voice of her husband which said, "Well, you're down there. Now, I suppose you'll stay there till morning!" After awakening, however, to full consciousness, she became aware of the fact that instead of a bombardment from Morgan it was a number of slats in the bed that had loosed and fallen to the floor, with the—well, you know the racket they usually made; if you don't. "ask Dad, he knows."

An interesting story of an attempt, by the prisoners, to escape from Camp Chase, is told. It had been secretly planned and the day set—July 4, 1864. The men were to take positions in groups of three or four around the camp. The signal for action was to be "Frese fish," given by the leader as the bread wagon passed out the prison gate; he and those immediately around him falling in right behind the wagon while others were to fall in behind them as close up as possible, with a continual pushing forward through the gate, making it impossible to close the same. Each prisoner was to have his pockets filled with rocks for defensive purposes. The morning of the 4th came, and everything looked lovely for the success of the plan, the men being jubilant over their prospects, and watching for the bread wagon to come and make its exit. Confusion came, however, through the earlier, and, as it proved, untimely arrival and departure of the wood wagon, which caused the failure of the plan. The leaders were so eager to escape that they gave the signal as the wood wagon went out, and most of the men who were mindful only of the bread wagon, were off their guard, not expecting the signal at that time. Thus the few leaders, about a score, passed through the gate, and the main force not being in supporting distance, the guards succeeded in closing the gate. The few escaping prisoners did not get very far away before they were recaptured and returned. Two of them being wounded by bullets from the guard. Two men running down the Sullivant road darted into the farm house of a Mr. Lacey, near by, and crawled under the bed, but were soon recaptured.

On another occasion several prisoners secretly banded together and planned to escape by the tunnel route. A new sink about ten feet square was dug to the depth of eight feet. The planks covering it were secretly loosened and a number of men let down who proceeded to tunnel on the east side toward the outer fence about 30 feet away. After days of desperate digging by different prisoners who secretly relieved each other, and with high hopes of success, the ground caved in during one night, and the plot was revealed when daylight came, much to the disappointment of the men.

The opening meeting of the Sunset Literary Club, a Hilltop women's society, will be held on October 9th. The world war, the causes that led up to it, and the probable effects will be discussed by members at the various meetings. Germany's part in the war, what the world owes to France, suffrage in England, home rule in Ireland, social conditions in Russia, child welfare, medical women and the undeveloped resources of America which the war will hasten to uncover, are among the topics to be discussed. Mrs. Austin Hutt is president of the club.

A large crowd, ideal weather, and a general good time marked the features of the annual outing of the Hilltop Improvement Association at Buckeye Lake, Wednesday. The Ohio Electric carried most of those that went, but a great many went over in their machines.

THE HILLTOP RECORD

Of Interest to the People on the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 2. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, August 8, 1918 No. 16

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Ferguson of 311 Clarendon Ave. arrived home Sunday after a pleasant visit with her aunt, Mrs. Frank Walker of Newark, O. They enjoyed themselves in the orchard eating apples and fishing. Apples are going to waste by the bushels in the orchards. They had a pleasant time.

Mr. George Stewart, manager of the Hilltop Carlile & Kerr Furniture Store, is taking a few days' vacation this week. He is not going anywhere in particular nor staying at home all the time—is just "browsing around."

A lawn fete will be given Thursday evening, August 15th, at the corner of North Park and Broad Sts., next to Dr. Turner's office, for the benefit of the Epworth Fresh Air Camp. This camp is supported by the Epworth Leagues of the Columbus District and many a poor child is given a chance to get the pure country air who would otherwise have to spend their summers in the hot city. Come and give this good cause your support.

Mr. and Mrs. John Buckingham, 175 Midland, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Friday, August 2nd, at their home, by entertaining a few relatives and friends at a 6 o'clock dinner.

Doris Mary Stewart, 99 S. Ogden Ave., gave a program of reading and impersonation at the Y. M. C. A. Hut, Columbus Barracks, Wednesday evening, entertaining the soldiers.

Robert Morris Chapter, O. E. S., will give their annual picnic on Saturday, August 10th, at Torn's Grove, North Hague Ave. They are to meet at Broad and Hague at 2 p. m., where conveyances will be waiting.

Mrs. Isabel Burnside and daughter, Miss Eva, 39 North Ogden Ave., have returned from a trip to East Palestine, where they attended the funeral of Mr. Blaine McGaffick, a nephew of Mrs. Burnside.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fippin, formerly of Camp Chase, are making their home now with their daughter, Mrs. F. P. Sperry, 45 S. Harris Ave.

The Misses Gertrude and Marian Slater, North Ogden Ave., left Monday morning for a visit with relatives and friends in Ashtabula County.

A reception will be tendered Mr. Frank Dorsey under the auspices of B. F. Allen Rebekah Lodge Thursday evening, Aug. 8, from 7:30 to 10, at the home of Mrs. Marah, 150 Clarendon Ave. All of his friends are asked to meet him here.

Mrs. Walter P. Castee (Celestia Swanson) of Ridgeway, Ohio, is spending a few days at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Merch E. Swanson, South Wheatland Avenue.

Fred Ault, North Eureka Ave., is spending several weeks with friends in Belmont County.

Earl Gaffin, 253 North Burgess Ave., who has been at the Military Institute, Cincinnati, for three weeks, as mechanical expert, will sail for over seas in a short time. His wife will remain with him till he leaves. His Hilltop and High School friends wish him success.

Mr. E. E. Evans, N. Harris Ave., who has been confined to his home for several weeks on account of a nervous breakdown, is reported to be no better. Dr. Upton is in attendance on him.

The Westminster Guild of the Hoge Memorial Church met Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Irene Dickson, [illegible] Garden Ave. After the program and work meeting, dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Red Cross

Anyone having a knitted garment that is finished please return to Glenwood Church, Friday afternoon. On account of no material to work with there will be no sewing till further notice.

The Primaries

Hilltop voters should not overlook the primary election Tuesday, August 13, 1918. It has often been charged that the best class of voters are indifferent about the primaries and that such permit the less scrupulous voter to select the men of his choice. All voters are urged to vote at the next primaries on Tuesday. One of the men seeking nomination on the Republican ticket has been a resident of the Hilltop for ten years and has been active at all times for its welfare. We refer to Fred W. Postle, candidate for Prosecuting Attorney. Mr. Postle was elected to the Charter Commission and then to the City Council; is now serving a second term as president of the Hilltop Improvement Association and also serves as president of the Baraca Class, Glenwood M. E. Church. He is also a member of Westgate Lodge, F. & A. M., and Westwood Lodge K. of P. on the Hilltop.

You will do well to select Mr. Postle for Prosecuting Attorney.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the St. Paul United Evangelical Church will meet at the home of Mrs. Smickley, 438 S. Harris Ave. Thursday afternoon at 1:30 p. m. on August 15th. Mrs. Ella Vittim, secretary of the Columbus Holiness Foreign Missionary society will address the meeting. The program committee of this society have arranged a splendid program for this meeting and a good attendance is desired. You will be welcome though you are not a member of the society.

A Correction

We wish to make an apology for an error in the letter from Emery Muncie to his father, on page 2 of this issue. In the address line it reads "Dead Dad," in place of "Dear Dad," as it should be. We'll just blame the hot weather for the error, and let it go at that.

Mrs. H. G. Hamilton, of Chicago, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Watts, 59 N. Ogden, who has been in the hospital since an operation for appendicitis has sufficiently recovered, and will soon join her husband, who has accepted a position at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Mr. Ed. Lucas and Mr. Earl Baird, two of our most esteemed young men, left Sunday morning, July 28, for an extended trip to Mammoth Caves, Kentucky, contemplating a stay of probably three weeks. The trip is being made in a Ford Roadster, reconstructed by these two gentlemen, from a touring car, into a spider-looking affair with seats for two. Their baggage consisted of a tent, an extra fly, cooking utensils, [illegible] cases, carpet bags, traveling bags and the cook, Mr. Don. Armbrust, who was to ride wherever the other two gentlemen were not riding.

We await their return with interest, as the writer received a postal card from Mr. Lucas, from Frankfort, Kentucky, stating that they were already nearly drowned (this flivver has neither top, side curtains, wind shield, or doors, with which to keep out the rain), and we wonder how they will look upon their return home.

Just a few words to our Hilltop young ladies: Coming home in the car the other evening I noticed two young ladies that sat by me with very long finger nails cut pointed, which is very unbecoming for a Christian girl, as in certain places in New York the vile gambling women wear their nails in that style.

From Emery Muncie

Mr. M. P. Muncie, 2480 Sullivant avenue received the following letter from his son, Emery, who is with the 308th Trench Mortar Battery, of which a number of Hilltop boys are members:

Somewhere in France.

Dead Dad:

We have finally arrived in France after a very tiresome journey. We were 15 days at sea. Were pretty lucky coming over, did not see any sub-marines. I have come to realize more that there is a war. Everthing you see almost is some kind of a war machine. Every place you go you see soldiers of different nations, and lots of them, also a few Austrians, taken prisoners. I expect they are glad that they were.

We went through part of England, and it is a very pretty country. That old English style of architecture prevails throughout the whole country. Their railroads are very different from ours. The engine (passenger) only had one big driver one a side, but they went along at a pretty good rate.

You can easily tell that you are not in the U. S. A.

Have not been in France long enough to write anything about it. There is no telling how long we will be at this place I will write at least once a week to you and let you know how I am. That is about all we are allowed to tell; and I guess it is best after what I have heard.

Well, this will be all. Am feeling fine. Hope to hear from you soon. Best wishes to all, and tell mother I will write when I get settled.

Emery

Y. P. B. Meeting

The Sullivant Avenue Y. P. B. will hold its regular meeting at the home of Miss Edna Patterson, 65 Cypress avenue. Invitation is extended to the young people of the Hilltop. Those who wish to attend, meet at Highland avenue and Broad strset at 7:45. Plans will be discuised at this meeting towards the organization of a Flying Squadron in the interest of the coming dry campaign. The society is planning to hold meetings in the different churches of the West Side in the interest of Statewide prohibition in Ohio.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

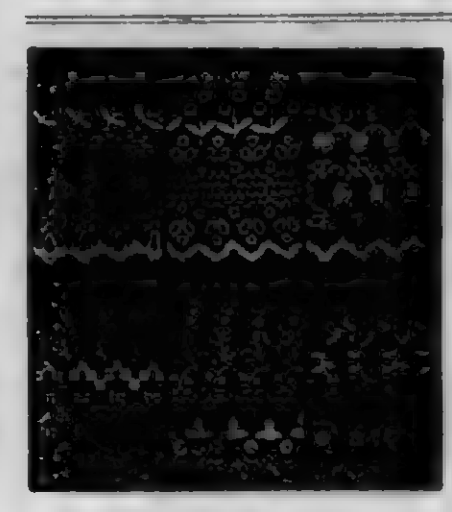
CAMP CHASE AND ITS SURROUNDINGS IN THE DAYS OF '61-'65

We mentioned, last week the story of a plot to escape from Camp Chase prison by following the bread wagon out as it passed through the gate. The bread that supplied the camp was baked in large ovens on the camp ground, and was said to be of a splendid quality. The wagon that hauled it had a large bed about six feet wide and eight long, on which the bread was piled row after row, from front to rear, several feet high. As it delivered its load to the various parts of the camp it was welcomed with delight by the hundred or thousands of hungry men. Sometimes a boy who helped to deliver would be riding the wagon standing on the pile of bread, but that did not bother in those days, so long as the bread was forthcoming.

Besides the bread, beans, bacon and coffee made up the average meal, with an occasional change at times as convenience allowed, such as roasting ears, in season, or potatoes. At times some of the soldiers would want a change in rations, and take it upon themselves to get it by silently getting away from camp and embarking on a foraging expedition, when some farmer was liable to discover a shortage in his poultry flock, or maybe a pig would fail to show up at the proper time. But it is said not so much of that foraging was done as would be expected under these conditions.

Smuggling of forbidden articles into camp was practised to some extent, and was a source of annoyance at times to those in authority. One of the things was whiskey. All manner of schemes were resorted to in order to sneak that inside the camp. Putting it in tin cans and labeling "canned peaches," was one method resorted to. Another was having a false bottom in a large milk bucket, with a quart or so of whiskey stored away in the bottom of the bucket, arranged to be extracted when a convenient time arrived. At one time a party was found to have quite a number of bottles of "tanglefoot" hung on her hoop skirts. It's probable that a good many of the younger people do not know what hoop skirts are. We'll, grandma can tell you about 'em. There's one thing, though, it is quite fortunate they do not abound in these days of narrow street car doors, automobiles, etc., else there would be other great problems to solve in connection with the present ones. Some of the large hoops, could be used, however, in our present day poultry yards, for coups for little chicks. It is said that it the "hoop skirt day" when a thunder storm was seen approaching the said hoop skirts were rushed to a window and (provided window was large enough) rolled out of doors by some of their proprietors, fearing the steel hoops in them would draw the lightning.



Camp Chase, like any other place where a large number of men are assembled, was the scene of pranks of various sorts. It is said that at one time a farmer was driving by on a load of hay when some soldiers, to scare him, touched a lighted match to the hay, and it gained such quick headway that it could not be extinguished, and in order to save the horses, quick work had to be done to detach the singletrees from the wagon. The hay, wagon and all, was burned up.

Hacks running from Columbus to Camp Chase (there were no street cars) carried passengers that distance for a quarter each way. Sometimes a bunch of soldiers would get in, and taking occasion for a little fun on descending the road down the hill, succeed in upsetting the hack, which, after "jollying" the driver for a season, they would help upright and continue their journey.

Stealing the other fellow's tobacco, pipe, socks, or other articles obtainable was quite a common occurance.

A Letter from Philip Robinson

American Expeditionary Force,
July 6, 1918.

Dear Brother:

After many various experiences I am at last somewhere in France. I am near enough the front to hear occasionally the big guns. I have not rejoined my battery, but hope to soon before they go to the front. At present I am with another battery and drilling hard. Yesterday we hiked several miles and it certainly gave me a good appetite. We get plenty to eat and have good quarters. It is very warm here and also very dusty. When we got in from the hike we all looked like millers. Had a good trip across the Atlantic. Had good weather most of the way and did not see any submarines. I did not get seasick, but dry land looked good to me. After landing we traveled five days and three nights to get here. But a day's travel here does not get one very far, as the railroads are very old-fashioned and are also very much overworked. I saw a good bit of new country, and, although it is very interesting, everythnig seems years behind times. All along the way we pass people cutting hay with scythes and hauling the hay to the barns on carts. Saw only one wagon being used on a farm and two or three mowing machines. The people raise a lot of wheat, barley and oats, but very little corn. Everywhere one sees potato fields and vineyards. Part of the country is about as steep and stoney as at home and part is nice, rolling country. In the level country the houses are close together and the fields small and well cultivated. But the hilly country is not farmed very much. One sees very few fences, mostly all hedges and walls. The buildings are all of stone except a few brick, and, for the greater part, small. They have gates across the roads at all the railroad crossings and a house there for a flagman. Through the country the people ride about in carts often drawn by a little donkey. The women work in the fields just like the men. We passed several good-sized towns and all of them have narrow streets with the houses built out against the sidewalk. Very few houses have any porches and are very plain. Here and there we saw some fine houses with lawns and really fine looking places. In most all the railroad stations are cafes, where travelers can buy eats and drinks, such as beer, wine, etc. So far I have kept sober. The ordinary wine tastes about like hard cider or weak vinegar. Don't think much of it. At some of the stations there are Red Cross canteens. A good many women work around the stations, taking the place of men. We can get daily newspapers here from England. They cost 5c or 25 centimes. I can understand French money alright, but don't know many French words. But if I stay here long enough I suppose I'll learn. There is a Y. M. C. A. here and most every night there is some kind of entertainment to go to. We have to be in bed at 9:30 p. m. and get up at 5:15 a. m. After we drill all day most of us are ready for bed by that time. Hope you get your vacation to go home this summer.

PHILIP.

P. S.—My address now is Cpl. P. E. Robinson, Battery A, 54th Arty., C. A. C., American E. F., A. P. O. 719.

A Greeting to Sammies Overseas

Good morning, dear Sammies in khaki and blue.
While sleeping last night I was dreaming of you—thinking and dreaming of you.
Then I saw you in camp, in field and in trench,
And with you Canadians, English and French—all comrades together.
Fierce battles were raging, in air, on land and on sea;
Brave heroes were dying to make the world free—from tyranny and oppression.
You were smiling, courageous and hopeful,
Determined to win in the fight;
Hurl back the huns, crush out wrong and establish the right—of weak nations to live.
You asked me of mother, sister, wife and sweetheart;
If home fires were burning, all doing their part—to help win the war.
Just then I awoke, but boys, let me say,
Home folks are doing their best in every way—to help you win out.
Threads of our love now bridge the sea;
God's listening ear hear's every plea—so, though unseen, friends are near.
They are praying that soon this world war may cease.
And with shouts of victory and poems of peace —
you may come back to your own.

Mrs. M. M. Marshall.

Columbus, Ohio.

Columbus, O., August, 1918.

What benefit is the initiative and referendum to the people if we don't use it? Mayor Karb has recommended two or more times, a 5-cent fare for the street cars. It seems the citizens do not adhere to it very rapidly. If they did some one would make a favorable reply. Hello! somebody said: Maybe he's interested, he'll make a suggestion. Then he's off for Topinabee, Michigan, to watch results: The people's steam roller." The initiative and referendum ought to be applied to squeeze some of the water out of the street car stock. Why do we, as a first-class city, endeavor to build up Philadelphia or some other large place, instead of our own town. The street car employes are all or nearly all residents of Columbus, Ohio, and would give as good service for our city as for a foreign one. It would not only be beneficial towards getting them good wages and homes, but the surplus would create a great street fund, sufficient to pave every street and here without making any extra expense to the pepole. All would contribute, local, as well as the traveling public. Push the initiative and referendum. If the voters say more increase to the fares, all will submit with good grace. The entire plant should belong to the city—the trackage, cars with equippage, power and light. The cars would be of no benefit without the power and light. Take all or none. Councilmen circulate the initiative in your wards and give the people a chance to express their views. R. P. WRIGHT.

Sunday, September 8, has been fixed as the date for burning the mortgage on the church building of Glenwood Methodist Episcopal congregation. All outstanding pledges must be paid in by September 1. Most of the funds necessary to cancel the church's obligations are already in hand. Some few pledges are yet to be gathered in, but it is fully expected that these will all be in by the date named. This will be a gala day for the congregation and it is planned to make it a great rally day throughout the church organizations. A record attendance of the members and friends is expected. No money will be raised on that day.

Glenwood Park Is Third in Playground Attendance During July

July records show that the war has not had any effect on the playground attendance, for more than 43,000 attended the nine city playgrounds during the past month. Actual figures show a total of 43,579. Livingston was first with 10,698. Goodale second with 10,390. Glenwood Park third with 6,997.

Due to the promotion to Supervisor, Mr. O. Matheny is not at Glenwood, but Mr. Vaughn Haines has charge. The latter was a member of the 1918 graduating class at West High, playing on the football, backetball and track teams.

The new tennis court is in fine condition, and has been used a great deal during the last few hot days by the small children. The older people can use this court since the playground is open until 8 o'clock.

Mrs. H. O. Kuch, of 465 South Warren avenue, has been in Mt. Carmel Hospital for the past two weeks, following an operation. She is reported as recovery nicely and hopes to return home very shortly.

War Stamp Meeting

Deferred registrants who were called together last Sunday afternoon for the purpose of enlisting them in the sale of War Savings Stamps are to be called together in separate ward meetings for the purpose of organization.

At these meetings the registrants of each ward will elect a ward chairman, who will name a precinct captain for each precinct organization of registrants. A secretary for each ward will also be elected.

The meeting as announced by Chairman E. A. Seed, of the County W. S. S. Committee, for the Eleventh Ward will be at Glenwood M. E. Church, on Monday evening, August 19th, at 7:30 o'clock.

All Hilltop men who are concerned in this please remember the date and place.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

CAMP CHASE AND ITS SURROUNDINGS IN THE DAYS OF '61-'65

At the beginning of the Civil War Goodale park was made a camp for troops preparing for service. It was called Camp Jackson. But shortly after a new and larger site was selected four miles west of Columbus, which was also called Camp Jackson till the following June, when it was named Camp Chase.

Gov. Solman P. Chase, who had been a U. S. Senator, was elected Governor of Ohio in 1855 and re-elected in 1857. He was an ardent opponent of slavery. After serving as Governor of Ohio he was Secretary of the Treasury in President's Lincoln's cahinet for some time, and then Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Within a few months after the establishing of Camp Chase it assumed the appearance of a good sized town, containing within its boundaries about 160 buildings, including officers quarters, privates quarters, mess halls, stables, hospitals, cooking and baking houses, prisons, etc. Besides the large drill and parade ground.

A number of men who were mustered into service during the war are still alive, but that number is rapidly dwindling away. The late W. S. Carlile, founder of the furniture stores bearing that name, of which the Hilltop Carlile & Kerr Co. is one, at one time cited out a certain tree not long ago that stood near the main entrance of the camp, under which he stood while doing guard duty.

In March, 1862, a rumor went forth that about 70 negro slaves were in Camp Chase prison, brought as servants to captured Confederates. The rumor was ordered investigated by the State Senate, and was partly confirmed by the finding of about 50 negroes from Ft. Donaldson. The Senate committee concluded its report by recommending the adoption of a resolution severely condemning their detention in the prison.

Scores of regiments were encamped here during the entire period of the war, at different times, some preparing to go to the front, and others sojourning there for a short time, preatory to being transferred elsewhere.

When Gen. Morgan came into Ohio on his raiding tour, in 1863, the Governor, fearing an attempt might be made to attack Camp Chase, ordered the militia of Franklin, Madison, Clark, Greene, Pickaway and Fairfield counties to report immediately to Brig. Gen. J. S. Mason, at Camp Chase, to be organized and officered. Many people were scared on this occasion, and preparations were made to protect property in case Morgan should put in his appearance. Some farmers drove their horses and cattle far in the woods, or hid their stock in some secluded spot. It is said that at one place, where the husband was absent, the wife put the family carriage horse in the parlor of their home, and that the noise of said horse's pawing and tramping around during the night sounded like the firing of distant artillery, and was mistaken by some for Morgan's approach.

However, Morgan confined his raides to the southern border counties of the State, where he was finally captured and brought to Columbus and placed in the Ohio Penitentiary. But after being there a few months he effected his escape and made his way to Cincinnati, where he crossed the river into Kentucky and Tennessee. The cell in the Penitentiary is marked and can be seen by anyone visiting that institution.

Morgan afterward did service for the Confenderacy in the vicinity of Tennessee and Kentucky, but was finally killed by being shot.

Vol. 2. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, August 22, 1918 No. 18

Mrs. Badgley's First Letter From Her Son

Somewhere in France.

Dear Mother:

I'm in the finest of health and getting along pretty good. It's a beautiful country over here; lots of young vineyards and, of course, you know this country is noted for its wines. The main buildings are called chateaus and are surrounded by large groves of trees, mainly oaks and cedars, and most of all the beautiful driveways, shaded by palms one hundred feet high and also oaks and sycamores. The chateaus are enclosed by high stone walls and iron fences and gates. All houses are built of stone with wooden shutters, very old and quaint. The people are whole-souled and loving. They treat us so politely They ride bicycles, women and all; also high-wheeled carts drawn by horses and donkeys.

I had an awful time trying to get a lead pencil, and when I did finally after many signs, it turned out to be a pencil made in China or Japan, and not any good. We have plenty to eat. I buy candy and cakes at the Y. M. C. A. We have good cold water to bathe in. It certainly makes us feel snappy. It's just like ice, but invigorating. We have cast-iron stomachs and an unusual appetite. Tell Wendell to stick to his work and when I come back we'll move out on a farm and we will make it go, too.

Well, Momsie dear, write me as soon as you get this. I am sending you some money. I send my love to all of you.

My tenderest love, Dear Heart,
FARRELL.

The Muncie brothers have returned from their motor trip. Had a fine time. Did not go as far as they expected on account of rough roads. Were treated royal by the people. Sign boards had "Welcome" and "Come Again" on Them. Dixey highway was good. Saw stone slab by the roadside of Daniel Boone's trail. Suppose we were going the same road that he went through. The Kentucky scenery was beautiful. Hills and mountains were covered with pine, cedar, locus, sassafras and other trees, holly bushes, sword ferns, acres and acres of tobacco, hemp and millet. Dug coal by roadside. Sulphur spring and cistern water to drink. School began the first of July and ends Feb. 1. Good school houses and beautiful farm houses. Saw Belmont Stock Farm; had beautiful horses and fine barns. Kentucky has beautiful horses and mules and are well kept; hogs and cows run at large; cows had bells on Postman carries mail on horse back; ladies ride horseback and carry a basket. Slept one night at the foot of Gaully Mountain, near the L. & N. ra... The train made a beautiful sight at night and the lights twinkled through the trees and spring water trickled over the rocks. Visited the High bridge over the Kentucky riger, which is 372 feet high. Crossed the Kentucky river by side of the bridge on a ferry boat. Water thirty-two feet deep. Visited Lexington, Williamstown, Stanford, Danville, Ft. Thomas and many other cities.

Mr. and Mrs. Esten McNaught of Fraseysburg, Ohio, spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dunn, 109 N. Harris Avenue.

Mr. Maurice M. Smith 283 Clarendon avenue, who is located at Ft. Jay, Governor's Island, New York, has been spending a few days with his parents. Governor's Island, which is but a short distance from New York City, is quite an interesting place. It was occupied by the British after the disastrous battle of Long Island, during the Revolutionary War. The fort in the officers club contains an old brass mortar with the inscription and English crown on it which the British left behind when they evacuated New York. They took all their artillery with them but this one piece.

RIGHT NOW

is the time to begin thinking about heating stoves for the winter. If you are going to burn coal and do not use a furnace, you want the next best thing. Not only as a conservation measure for economy, but for comfort as well.

Moore's Air Tight

fills the bill completely. The most perfectly constructed coal heating stove in the world today, the most beautiful and attractive in appearance, and, best of all, the most economical. It burns the smoke, gas and soot from the soft coal and gives more heat from a ton of coal than any other stove in existence.

Pleasant Evening

On Saturday evening, August 17th, Miss Florence Dunn, 109 North Harris avenue, entertained in honor of Helen Carl, of Camp Chase, who leaves in a few weeks for Sciotoville, where she will teach in the High School. Many ufeful gifts were presented to Miss Carl. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by those present Dainty refreshments were served, after which the guests departed, wishing Miss Carl a very pleasant and successful year.

Those present were, Misses Helen and Marie Carl, Helen Baker, Delia Sloan, Ethel Wheeler, Messrs. Ellis Jones, Harold Link, Denzil Bentley, Charles Chambers, S. Parr Johnson, Mrs. J. W. Wheeler, Mr and Mrs. Esten McNaught and family, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dunn and family.

W. E. Dolby, wife and son, spent Sunday at Shell Beach, Buckeye Lake, visiting Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Ulrey, who are spending a couple of weeks at that place. They report all having a fine time.

K. L. C. E. Meeting

On Friday evening, August 16, the St. Paul's United Evangelical K. L. C. E. held its business and social meeting at the home of the Misses Florence and Mabel Dunn, 109 N. Harris avenue. Twenty-five were present, and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Dainty refreshments were served, after which the guests departed.

These meetings are held on the third Friday of each month, and everyone on the Hilltop is invited. Come out September 20th, and help boost the St. Paul United Evangelical K. L. C. E.

Mr. Joseph M. Dunn, of Chicago, has returned to his home after visiting with his brother, Mr. Charles Dunn, 109 N. Harris avenue.

Next week is the State Fair. All Hilltop people will have a grand opportunity (if you've got the admission price) to go in and hang around and watch our country cousins devour real chicken without the substitute, and—maybe b-r-e-a-d like "mother used to eat."

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

A FEW MISCELLANEOUS STORIES

In the remote days of the Hilltop and the surrounding country, when the houses were very few and far between, amusements among the young folks were different than those of today. However, they had their fun just the same. Maybe it would be a "husking bee" at some certain farm. At the proper season the corn was hauled in from the field to the barn, the word sent broadcast that "all things were now ready," and on a certain night the corn crop would be tackled. The young man in each home would hustle up with his evening chores and feeding, speed up in preparing himself in his "Sunday attire," hitch up his favorite speeder to the buggy, and away he'd go for perhaps miles across the country to the home of the "prettiest girl" in the whole country round about. While on the way over he would keep the horse going at a good pace, but returning, with two in the buggy, there was no danger of the speed limit being violated.

The corn was often taken in the large barn, where there was plenty of room, and the young folks all gathered around it and proceeded to husk the ears from the stock. There was generally a prize or penalty for the finder of a red ear. After the corn husking was over, maybe a big supper was enjoyed or the floor was cleared and an old time dance took place.

Sometimes instead of a husking bee, an "apple paring" for the season's apple butter supply was the social event.

On other occasions, some farmer, about to build a new barn, would announce a "barn raising," when the men would gather there on a certain day and assist in raising the huge timbers, sometimes hued logs eight or ten inches square, into position for the framework of a large barn. The "wimmen folks" would in the meantime prepare a feast when all that participated would gather around the table laden with—well we'd better not mention what in these days of food conservation.

On one of these occasions, during the Civil War, a farmer living a short distance south of Camp Chase, wishing to raise the framework of his barn, asked a soldier from the camp to bring some of the boys over and help him. The next day he came hiking there with a company of forty men. It is needless to say they did the job. It is said the barn still stands a short distance southwest of the Confederate Cemetery.

We learn that along in the late '50's Mr. Lucas Sullivant, who was the owner of nearly all the territory west of the river, including the Hilltop, owned and harbored a number of elk, also buffalo, which were in a large pen located south of the National road and near where Ogden avenue now is.

It is also said that Mr. Sullivant at one time had a "deer lick" where Glenwood park now is, and that two fine springs at that place provided them with a quantity of good water. Our informant says he could locate today the spot of one of the springs, which has been covered up.

Many people today would be surprised could they hear the stories of the flocks and flights of wild pigeons that used to pass over this section at times, generally from west to east. An instance is told of one time in about the year 1836 the numbers of pigeons flying over were so great as to darken the sky for half a day. They flew at a height out of gun shot.

In 1852-53-54, also '56, they were said to be plentiful. The Ohio State Journal of Feb. 24, 1860, is quoted as saying that, "The numbers of pigeons caught in the country is almost incredible. We noticed on the streets the other day three wagon loads of the blue-winged birds, all caught by one company of trappers. The city market is flooded with them, all fat and in good condition for the table. They sell for 50 cents a dozen, and thousands are shipped to the East, where $1.25 and $1.50 are readily given."

Thru the use of light web ammunition belts American and British infantrymen carry 100 more rounds of rifle ammunition than their German opponents with leather belts, and this seemingly unimportant part of equipment has resulted in the repulse of superior enemy forces on more than one occasion, says a statement issued by the ordnance bureau.

With his web belt the American soldier carries 250 rounds of ammunition disposed so that every cartridge is easily accessible. The German soldier carries but 120 rounds.

William J. Smith, died of infirmities of age at his home, at 38 Whitethorne avenue, on Saturday, August 24th. He was 77 years old, and was a former superintendent of the Columbus State Hospital farm work. The funeral services were held Tuesday, at the residence. His wife and one daughter survive him. Burial at Green Lawn.

We heard a Hilltop boy lamenting his troubles the other day because the school vacation was nearly over and there was enough coal in the school bin, already, to run all winter.

In Alabama Great Southern Railway vs. Foley, (Ala.), an action by a married woman to recover damages for personal injuries, the plaintiff's husband, in describing the extent of his wife's injuries, said: The only thing I know is that she is no earthly account to me like she used to be. She can't make a fire, bring in a back log; she can't even wash and cook, and I have to help do that. I never did have to help do that before."

Miss Grace Gifford is home from Seattle, where she has been for seventeen months, engaged in important work for a bonding firm. While there she made her home with Mrs. Lillian Payne whom many people on the Hilltop will remember as Lillian Medford. Miss Gifford will be at home, 72 North Park avenue, for a week or ten days, and will then go to Morrow county to visit her mother and sister. Many incidents immediately affecting this young lady have occurred during her absence in the west. Her two brothers have married, and are now at war work. Her sister has also married and her brother in law has gone to camp, preparatory to U. S. service. Many of her young women friends are in Washingtog doing clerical work, and many young men friends are across the sea. Miss Gifford will return to Columbus later in the fall.

Rev. G. R. Robbins and wife, who have spent a delightful vacation with their daughter at Bluefield, W. Va. among the mountains, are returning this week. He will occupy his pulpit at Memorial Baptist church next Sunday. The new assistant is also expected to begin her work at the same time Dr. Robbins on Tuesday night delivers the principle address at the Centennial Celebration of the Columbus Baptist Association, at the Kirkersville Baptist church, and Mrs. Robbins gives the annual address before the Young People's Society of the same Association.

A small boy's "win the war" solution: "Eat more fish. The fish is a clean animal. You will never see it wallowing round in the dusty road, and scratching in the dirt. Besides it takes a bath every day, whether it needs it or not."

"This certainly is a hot summer."

"Huh! Any fool knows that."

"Then there was no need of me telling you."

Moore's Air Tight OAK

This beautiful stove has all the essential qualities of a first class heater that the original Moore's Air Tight has, being of solid iron construction (not thin steel, as most Oaks are), has perfectly fitted air-tight draft doors, slotted heavy iron fire-pot which burns the gas, smoke and soot.

It's a classic in design, perfectly smooth and easy to shine and keep clean. Beautifully nickel trimmed. An all iron stove has double the radiating power that a thin steel stove has, and will give a more lasting heat—therefore requiring less attention to operate. In all, we believe this is the greatest heater in the world—at it's price.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

A FEW MISCELLANEOUS STORIES

In 1845, by act of the legislature, the State purchased a tract of some fifty acres on the right bank of the Scioto river, north of the Columbus and Xenia Railroad, containing an immense supply of limestone rock lying in strata from five inches to five feet thick, and affording some of the finest building stone in the western country. The purchase was made from Wm. S. Suilivant for fifty thousand dollars, and included the right of way through his land for suitable transportation to and from these quarries to Columbus. A railroad was soon constructed by the C. and X. company leadng from the quarries to the penitentsary. The stone used in construction of the State House, was taken from these quarries.

There are probably many persons who do not know that at one time the Soldiers' Home was located on the Hilltop.

On April 22, 1862, the Soldiers' Aid Society caused to be established, in a room in the depot building, a place where sick and disabled soldiers could be cared for. But on October 17, 1863, it was moved into a building erected by the Columbus Branch of the United States Sanitary Commission, near the Little Miami Depot. It contained 45 beds. It provided a great comfort for sick and destitute soldiers and seamen.

In May, 1864, a barracks and other buildings were erected by the government on the south part of the State quarry tract near the crossing of the Columbus and Xenia railroad, now known as the Miami Crossing, and north of the Ohio State Hospital grounds. There were about twenty tenement buildings, which were given over to be used for a Soldiers' Home, which were taken possession of in September, 1865, and a larger home instituted.

An act was passed by the legislature, in April, 1866, establishing a temporary home for soldiers, with sufficient funds to maintain the institution. It also provided for the appointment of a board of trustees, by the Governor, to manage its affairs. The home had then nearly two hundred disabled soldiers.

In April, 1869, by action of the trustees, the legislature ordered removal of the patients, belongings, etc., to Dayton, to the National Soldiers' Home.

How often have we passed by the beautiful State Imbecile grounds, on the south side of Broad street, extending through to Sullivant avenue, and wondered how long the institution located there had been in existence.

On April 17, 1857, State legislature passed an act to establish an asylum for the education of idiotic and imbecile youth. A large house on East Friend street (now Main st.) opposite the Blind Asylum was leased for five years, and suitably prepared to receive pupils, Dr. R. J. Patterson being chosen superintendent. The number of pupils were five. The numbers increased so much as to outgrow the capacity of the building, which was enlarged in 1860. The number then being over 50. In March, 1864, the legislature authorized the purchase of a tract of 130 acres of land on the National Road, about two and one-half miles west of the State House. It was said to have been purchased for thirty-five dollars per acre. In their report of the purchase, in 1864, the trustees say: "The site selected for the building is near the brink of the elevated plain, on the west side of the Scioto valley. The situation is a beautiful one, overlooking and presenting a fine view of the city, while it is in plain sight of the Capitol. A very fine maple grove runs around the entire front of the high ground, and at the same time the principal part of the land is in the Scioto valley, and is easily susceptible of the highest state of cultivation."

Work on the main building, which was intended to accommodate nearly 300 pupils, was commenced in 1865, and nearly completed in 1868, when the inmates to the number of 105 were transferred to it from the old quarters on Friend street.

An additional 57 1-2 acres were purchased, and later on several other buildings added.

On November 13, 1881, the Central building was destroyed by fire, and other near-by buildings damaged, but no lives lost. However, several records of past years were lost.

I can't say enough in praises of the patented Caloric Pipeless Furnace. We never have been so warm and comfortable as we have been since we have had it. We hardly know it is cold until we go out. This last cold weather we have had it proved what it would do. Our neighbors would say, "I wish our house was as warm as yours." We have six rooms and bath and a hall, and they are nice and warm. The furnace proved to be more than what it was represented, and we wouldn't have it out of our house for anything. We can surely recommend it to anyone.

Mortgage to be Burned

Glenwood M. E. congregation will burn the mortgage on their new church building at the services Sunday morning. There will be special services and all the members and friends of the church are earnestly invited to attend. No money will be raised at this time, the indebtedness having been provided for in advance. Glenwood Church was organized twenty-five years ago and so rapid has been its growth that the membership is now over 1500. The present building, which is a fine brick structure of modern architecture, was erected in 1910. At the beginning of the present year there remained an indebtedness of $3800. In a recent debt raising campaign the amount necessary to liquidate this indebtedness was raised. Dr. William F. Wykoff, the present pastor, was transferred last fall from First Church, Shelbyville, Ind. His salary has been increased and his re-appointment earnestly requested by the official board. A great crowd is expected at the services Sunday morning.

A crowd of young people of the Hilltop planned to have a marshmallow roast Thursday, August 29. After the heavy rain the woods were too damp, therefore they decided to have a good time at the Fiedderjohann home, at 24 South Eureka Avenue. After several good games were played a thrilling ghost story was related out on the lawn. The different members actually having the privilege of touching the parts of the murdered man. Everyone went home feeling that they had had as good a time as though they had gone to the woods. Those present were: Misses Ruth Marshall, Leota Williams, Louise Hoar, Grace Robbins, Gladys Aure, Marie Zinn, Grace Gifford, Maud Linn, Flora Fiedderjohann, Grace Curran, Ruth Curran and the hostess, Bertha, Beriem and Ruth Fiedderjohann. Messrs. Ralph Reed, Harley Crab, Hershel Ferguson, George Neff, Kenneth Dickerson, Ralph Kimes, Marius Ferguson, Edward Whalley, Kinsley Neff, Sargeant-Major Wolf, Raymond Barns, Mr. Morris Charles Brown, and Mr. Van Heaten.

At Glenwood Sunday School

Mr. Fred L. Sulzberger passed the examination for Assistant Inspector of Ordnance Material and Gunfire Control Instruments, with a percentage of 83. The examination was held at Cleveland. Mr. Sulzberger will enter service next Saturday. He expects to leave Columbus that day. He wishes to state to his friends and patrons the following:

"In regard to my jewelry business, I will say that my sister, Miss Gleneva Sulzberger, will have charge of the store during my absence. I feel that the Hilltop people will be patriotic in their continuance of patronage in the future as they have been in the past, as there will be a good, reliable jeweler to do your work."

We wish to add that here is a good chance for Hilltop people to display their loyalty, not only to one who is leaving his business to serve his country in time of need, but also to a loyal Hilltop citizen and business man who is well known and respected. We all wish him well, and hope he will be able to be back with us again in the near future.

Mr. D. E. Jaques and family, 185 Midland Avenue, have returned home after a delightful motor trip of 10 days through Cleveland, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Canada and other points of interest. Mr. Jaques is auditor and salesman for the Carlile & Kerr Co., of West Broad Street.

A Letter from Corp. Geo. Barnhart

Somewhere in France,
July 28, 1918.

Dear Mother and Dad:

I received your letter of June 26, and was more than glad to get it. I am real well and still working every day. When I first came to this camp I was sick for three days. Had Spanish influenza. I guess we brought it with us from England as many of the boys had there. It doesn't seem to be serious, but makes a fellow feel pretty tough for a while.

I had a dream of home last night. It was the first dream I believe I had in the army. Everything was just as natural. I was standing and talking to mother, and was sure enjoying myself. I wished it were true.

We get the Chicago Tribune and the New York Herald. It is printed in Paris for the A. E. F. soldiers. We get The Stars and Stripes, from Paris, once once a week. It is a very nice paper.

I have seen three of the largest cities in the world—New York, London and Paris. The Yanks have saved the latter from the much hated huns. They are sure giving the Germans their medicine now.

The French people are very enthusiastic over the work of the Yanks. They show their appreciation more than the British.

Had a very nice time while I was in England, but was glad to get back to France.

It is quite a sight to see the boys sitting around out in a wheat field, writing letters. It is a treat for a soldier to get mail from home, 4,000 miles away. I know it puts new life into a fellow.

We can hear the big guns on the western front pretty plainly at night, after everything is quiet. Some nights when there is a big battle on, we can see the reflection in the sky caused by big guns which are constantly throwing the huns back on their own ground. It is sure some experience for a man.

We have two squadrons here who have been up in the lines. They tell some good stories about the huns and their early offensive last spring. I believe they have made their last bid for Paris (Paree). The Yanks and French and putting the rollers under them now.

We get plenty to eat, but it is not like going out in the garden and getting the real stuff. I priced a cantaloupe in a little city not long ago. They asked 3 franc, 50 centimes, which is about 70 cents in our money.

I cannot forget my first ride in an areoplane. It was simply great. I went about 5,000 feet, I guess. It was high enough for the first time, I know. When the pilot made a nose dive he lost his cushion, and came down to get another. He wanted me to continue the ride, but I had already had enough for the first time. Thep are pretty safe now unless the pilot gets careless. This was a Canadian pilot that I went up with.

I saw a piece in a paper at the Y. M. C. A where the Buckeye capital is call "Over the Top City," for oversubscribing in the war loans and the big way chest. It is quite an honor to Columbus.

I remain your loving son and brother,
Corp. George W. Barnhart,
658th Areo Squadron,

Opening of the Hilltop Public Schools

Highland Avenue school began the year's work with an enrollment of 740 up to Tuesday night.

The new teachers are: Miss Maize, Art; Miss Sauder, English; Miss Dumont, Commercial Arithmetic; Miss Hungelman, Spanish and French; Miss Faehnle, 2d grade; Miss Pflazer, 6th B.

The West Broad Street School opened Tuesday with a registration of about 600.

The attendance in the first grade is so large that the pupils could not all be accommodated in their regular room, so an extra room in the basement had to be provided for them.

Besides the former teachers remaining over from last year, the following new teachers are there: Mrs. Heid, 4th B; Mrs. Decker and Miss White, 3d grade and Miss Catharine Sperry, 2d grade. Mrs. McGinley will be back again at the 4th A.

Spanish will be taught in the 4th, 5th and 6th grades. About 75 are now enrolled to take that language.

The school will also have manual training and sewing, some Red Cross work, and preparation for war garden work for next spring.

Hilltop Boy Wounded

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Anderson, 160 North Eureka avenue, were informed, by telegram last Tuesday, of the wounding of their son, Corporal William S. Anderson, Co. E. 161st U. S. Infantry. The nature of the wound is undetermined, but was received while in action July 18th. Corp. Anderson enlisted at North Yakinia, June 26, '16. He is 27 years of age.

Mr. W. E. Davis, of Gallipolis, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Davis, 147 N. Burgess, last week.

Rev. and Mrs. G. R. Robbins, who have been spending their vacation at Bluefield, W. Va., returned to their home last week.

PLAIN SEWING, at No. 16 Midland avenue.

Mary Hollis was called to Toledo, last week, to the bedside of her brother, who is very seriously ill.

The New Registration

Approximately 739,036 men will register in Ohio on September 23d, under the new 18-45 draft law. This estimate has been made by W. S. Pealer, the State draft head.

In a report sent to Provost Marshal Gen. Crowder from the State headquarters, Columbus' ratio to be furnished in this list including Franklin county, will be 35,309.

It is estimated that not more than 20 per cent of the registrants will be inducted into military service. Many youths will be exempted to complete their education, and older men will be kept at occupations deemed essential.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

The Pioneer and His Old Log Cab

While printing these little sketches of the Hilltop and vicinity in by-gone days, it might be well to give our readers a few paragraphs on the days of the old pioneers who came to these localities when the whole country was a wilderness, and when the Indians frequented some localities, and the bear, wild cat, panther, wolf, etc., abounded on all sides.

The first generations to settle in this part of the state came mostly from Virginia, though a few New Englanders were met with once in awhile. The history of this region is full of evidence of their sturdy character.

The sturdy men and brave women who left far distant homes and loved ones to enter upon life here in the wilds of Ohio were of the kind that were equipped for it. They were the merchant, farmer, mechanic, soldier, politician, ready to put their hands where occasion required.

About the only things the pioneer brought with him besides his family and moving outfit would be probably an ax, an auger, the trusty knife and rifle (a flintlock in those days) maybe a plow, with a small quantity of bedding and clothes, a few iron and pewter utensils and a faithful dog. This their outfit.

As soon as possible after the arrival of the emigrant and family, preparations for the building of a log cabin were begun. A clearing was made for a site, and a time appointed; the whole neighborhood gathered for miles around. Some cut down suitable trees and chopped the logs to the proper length. A man with a team hauled them to the proper place, where they were assorted for the builders. A suitable tree was found which furnished the clap-boards for the roof, which must be straight grained and three or four feet in diameter. The boards were split about four feet long and were used without planing or shaving. Another party prepared "puncheons" for the cabin floor, which were split logs hewn and smoothed with a broad ax. After the material was all prepared, which generally took a day, the "house-raising" began. A man would stand at each of the four corners who would cut a notch in each end of the log and place it in position. Others furnished the timbers and laid the puncheon floor. An opening was left at one side about four feet wide for the door, and another for the window, and another at one end for the broad chimney, which was built of logs and lined with stone or plastered thick with straw or grass. The clapboard shingles on the roof were held down by logs placed lengthwise and bound firmly. Not a nail was used, just wooden pegs where needed. The rough door, after being made in its crude way, was hung on large wooden hings made according to the custom. There was no plumbing, or wiring, or varnishing; not even laying of a new rug.

Then came the "house-warming," as a token of good fellowship among the settlers. The same neigbors all gathered, and then came feasting, singing and dancing such as could enjoy their hearts to the fullest. Did you ever talk with some "old timer," and see now his or her face flushed with joy as they recalled the scenes of long ago?

The furniture for the new home now must be secured. There being no furniture or stove stores in those days the only proper caper was to make the needed articles. A table was made by splitting a log and hewing its surface to the proper thickness, then boring a hole in each corner and inserting long wooden pins for legs. Stool chairs were made the same way, only they had three legs instead of two. The bed was a wide, low platform built in a convenient corner. As the family grew a puncheon floor was built on the cross logs above and a ladder made of pins driven into auger holes led to a bedroom under the roof. Wooden pins also supported shelves which contained the pewter plates and spoons, and basins. The rest of the cabin equipped with pots, a shovel, pair of tongs, spinning wheel, and wearing apparel. In the veary early days greased paper took the place of glass for the window.

I can't say enough in praises of the patented Caloric Pipeless Furnace. We never have been so warm and comfortable as we have been since we have had it. We hardly know it is cold until we go out. This last cold weather we have had it proved what it would do. Our neighbors would say, "I wish our house was as warm as yours." We have six rooms and bath and a hall, and they are nice and warm. The furnace proved to be more than what it was represented, and we wouldn't have it out of our house for anything. We can surely recommend it to anyone. John K. Platto, 180 Maholm St.

There are about 1400 children in the two public schools on the Hilltop, which number, together with those attending West High and St. Aloysius schools gives our streets a busy appearance at school hours. Then should a large bunch of those army trucks be passing through at the same time, makes one think "if it keeps on this way we'll be needing traffic cops at our street corners."

The scarcity of grapes this season on account of the severe cold last winter makes a noticeable vacancy in our fruit supply. It is hoped next year's crop will make up for this year's deficiency.

THE HILLTOP RECORD

Of Interest to the People on the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 2. — The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, September 12, 1918 — No. 21

From William Anderson

The following letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, 160 N. Eureka Ave.:

France, Aug. 9, 1918.

Dear Mother and Dad:—

I received your most welcome letter while I was in the front line. I was at the front for a long time and could not write. I was slightly wounded in the right hand, and just came out of the hospital and it is hard for me to write now. So I have a good excuse for not writing, but my hand is pretty good now, so I will be back at the front soon. There is no use me telling you what we did to the Germans, for you can see it in the papers, but you can be sure the boys did good work and always will. We are having fine weather here now. I went to a show last night, given by wounded soldiers and it was sure a good show.

Your loving son,

BILL.

The girls of Miss Hazel Linville's Sunday School class of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church have just completed a number of garments for the Red Cross to be sent to the far-off Belgium children. The girls have worked very industriously during their summer vacation, meeting once each week at the home of their teacher for the sewing. Hikes and picnics have helped to keep up the interest and a wiener roast in the near future is being planned.

On Friday, Sept. 13th, their teacher, Mis Hazel Linville, will entertain the class from 3 until 6 at her home, 244 North Ogden Avenue. The members are Irene Dickson, Mary Muncie, Alberta Jones, Daisy McGugin, Helen Hoffman, Edna Kadel, Angeline Jerman, Valerie Otten, Dorothy Downs, Ina Biddle, Kathryn Morris and Kathleen Darnell.

A special meeting of the Golden Rule Girls of Glenwood M. E. Sunday School was held at the home of Mrs. Johnson, 54 S. Richardson Avenue, Tuesday, Sept. 10. Election of officers were as follows: President, Lillian Grumney; Secretary, Edna Lambert; Treasurer, Sarah Westlake. The next meeting will be held at the home of Lillian Born next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. These meetings will be held every two weeks on Tuesday. The class will do Red Cross work.

Highland Avenue Friends Church has called as pastor, Rev. Herbert A. Handy of Virginia, who will begin his services, Sabbath, Sept. 22. Rev. Handy comes well recommended, and though a young man, is well fitted for the place. Rev. John Pennington, the present pastor has been appointed General Superintendent of Pastoral and Evangelistic Work of Ohio Yearly Meeting. His headquarters will be at Damascus, Ohio, where he has purchased a home, to which the family will move next week.

The dedication of the Friends Rescue Home last Tuesday was a successful affair. There was a praise service in the morning, conducted by Rev. Pennington. Dinner at noon in the Reception Room, at which about 100 took part. In the afternoon Rev. Kirby preached the dedicating sermon and conducted the dedicatory services. In the evning Rev. Kirby preached a powerful sermon at Glenwood Church on "My People Perish for Lack of Knowledge."

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Newberry received a telegram from Ottawa, Ontario, informing them that their son Lieut. Ellsworth Dewith Newberry had been admitted to the general hospital at Boulogne, France, Aug. 29, 1918, with a gun shot wound in the face. He has been in service of the Canadian army for 2 years and 5 months.

The Hilltop Improvement Association will meet this Thursday night at 7:30. There will be a smoker and good speaking. All come. Important.

On Saturday afternoon Miss Hilda Woerner of 78 W. Terrace St. gave a party in honor of her little friends. The afternoon was spent playing games and refreshments were served; all report a fine time. Those present were Robert Little, Harold Steward, Edgar Underwood, Homer Evans, Gilbert Wilkins, Margaret Little, Harriet Lewis, Martha Geany, Louise Woerner.

The J. R. B. Class met at the home of our President, Miss Martin, 155 S. Richardson ave. Mrs. Fresure, Mrs. Fishbaugh, Mrs. Seiller were assistant Hostesses. New officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs. Fletcher, President; Mrs. Clevenger, First Vice; Mrs. Draper, Second Vice; Mrs. Gibson, Treasurer; Mrs. Roller, Secretary; Mrs. Mossman, Press Reporter. After the business meeting dainty refreshments were served. The guests departed at a late hour, saying they had a lovely evening and biding the hostesses good night.

Alva C. Myers, 303 Belvidere Ave., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Myers, left today for Camp Greenleaf, Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga., where he will be in training in dental surgery. Mr. Myers is a graduate of West High School, Class of 1914, and O. S. U., Class of 1918, College of Dentistry, and is a member of Psi Omega Fraternity.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Abram and son Roy, and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Tinker, formerly of the Hilltop, motored from Chillicothe Saturday and spent the week end with relatives.

Storekeepers are doing business on the Hilltop for the convenience of the people. Their success and our convenience depend on patronage of these stores. Sometimes someone will say, "I can't find what I want on the Hilltop." Well, did you think if every time you wanted to make a purchase, if you first called for that article at the Hilltop stores—and if that practice was indulged in by our people—the demand would soon bring these goods to the shelves of our business houses? The demand for anything always brings the supply if it is urgent enough. It is not because the business man does not want to carry a certain article, but because he has no demand for it, is the reason he has not got it. Therefore when you wish to make a purchase first try our merchants, either by calling or by phone, and prove to your own satisfaction that the purchasing facilities of this community can be made second to none in the city—even the High rent district of High street.

Then again, if the Hilltop merchant does not, at present, carry the article you are looking for, let him get it for you. He is in just as good a position to procure the same as the largest department store on High street. And nine times out of ten can sell it for less than the High street merchant.

Glenwood F. M. Society Elects Officers

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Glenwood church, on Monday, September 9th, elected the following officers for the coming year Prest., Mrs. Edith Williamson; V.-Presidents, Mrs. Mayer and Mrs. Gould; Rec. Sec., Mrs. Myers; Treas., Mrs. Simmons; Cor. Sec., Mrs. Prior; Supt of Standard Bearers, Mrs. Gould; Supt. King's Heralds, Mrs. Shekels; Pianist, Mrs. Walton.

The regular meeting of this society is the afternoon of the second Thursday in each month. The October meeting will be held at the home of Mrs Mayer

New Railroad Yards

The Big Four Railroad Company has a large force at work on their land purchased some time ago, at Camp Chase, west of the West Side Lumber Co. They are grading and making preparation for a large railroad yard there, in which the freight business on this division of the road can be handled instead of in the crowded yards in the city. There are to be 16 tracks extending from Camp Chase one and a half miles up the road to Avenue station, or where Sullivant avenue crosses said railroad.

There will also be a double track into Columbus from that yard.

Trains on this division will be made up in this yard. It will be quite an important point in this section.

We were shown, by Mr. C Michel, corner of Wheatland and Broad, a cat fish weighing nineteen pounds, that was caught at Buckeye Lake last Sunday. It was of an immense size, and presented an attractive appearance. It would make a fish dinner for several ordinary families.

Mr. E. A. Crawford and family, of Coshocton, Ohio, are visiting at the home of C. E. Helmbrecht, 122 Whitethorne avenue. Mr. Crawford is attending the convention of the Ohio Building and Loan Associations

Don't forget that you can get school supplies from Viola Bryan, 20 Highland avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gaffin, of Cincinnati, visited at the home of his mother, last Saturday and Sunday.

CO-OPERATE

If it is to win the war, we are all in for it. The fuel administration urges the use of Mine Run Coal for the reason that it increases production. The mines that do not operate their screening plants have just that many more men mining coal, naturally increasing their output. The increased number of men being drafted daily reduces the supply of labor continually. So that it is not so much a question of cars now as it is miners.
Let us do our bit, even if it is a little inconvenient by using mine-run-coal. So many people that used it last year, liked it better than lump, especially in furnaces and heating plants.

Last Sunday St. John Lutheran congregation, of S. Burgess avenue, celebrated Harvest Festival with a zest that indicated genuine thankfulness. The women of the congregation had decorated the auditorium with flowers, vegetables, and festoons. The congregation sang hymns of praise. Miss Dorothy Lose rendered two solos, and the pastor spoke of God's precious promise concerning harvest and its fulfillment. The attendance was especially encouraging.

Mr. James W. Zink, 65, of 320 Midland avenue, is in Mt. Carmel in a critical condition from burns received Tuesday morning at the John W. Brown Manufacturing Co. He was heating coffee when his apron caught fire.

Prof. E. M. Muncie and son, J. W., of Brazil, Ind., is visiting his brothers, L. W. and N. P. Muncie, on his way home from Ft. Thomas, Ky., where he has another son, Emery O. Muncie, in the Medical Corps.

The many Hilltop friends of Glenn H. Martin, who formerly lived at 126 Highland avenue, and who has just "gone over," will be pleased to learn that he he has been made a corporal in G Company, 336th Inf., 84th Div., A. E. F.

E. J. Chenoweth, 37 S. Warren avenue, has received word of the arrival overseas of his son, Max A. Chenoweth, who is with the 332d Infantry Band.

THE HILLTOP IN BY-GONE DAYS

While printing a few of the stories about Camp Chase and its surroundings during the Civil war, we received the following concerning Mr. S. J. Long, a brother of G. M. Long, of 65 North Park avenue:

"The latter part of October, 1863, I was stationed with Co. H, 1st Ohio Volunteer Heavy Artillery, at Camp Nelson, Ky. 380 Confederate prisoners were marched through from East Tennessee to Camp Nelson, and then turned over to our regiment for further transmission to Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio. A detail of 75 men was made from our regiment for guards. The prisoners were placed aboard box cars at Nicholasville, Ky. with two guards at each door of the train. I do not remember how long we were in transit, but arrived in Columbus in the evening, and disembarked at the Union Station, and then we marched our Confederate prisoners, 380 of them, through the city on High street, to Camp Chase for safe keeping.

"We were tired, and glad to be relieved of our duty, and return to our camp, which we did during the next few days. There were several interesting incidents connected with the trip which I will not relate now, but may tell you at some future time. From your brother,

S. J. Long, Sergt.
Co. H., 1st, O. V. H. A."

---

The question has been asked as to how long Camp Chase remained after the war, and what became of it.

During the month of February, 1866, the military records and documents of Camp Chase were moved to Columbus, and the place ceased to be an army post, although a guard was still retained there for safety of the property.

In the spring of 1866, a description of Camp Chase was thus given:

"It is no longer a military center—no more a living thing. The city is deserted, the giant form of a skelton. Thousands of armed men paraded as the guardians of the living thing. A single man, unarmed, keeps watch over the remains of the thing dead, waiting for burial. Two years ago you entered Camp Chase and with signs and courtesies were directed to shortspoken orderlies, warned by sentinels, received by officials, and came away impressed with its greatness. Now you drive as to a cemetery; a guard in shirt sleeves kicks away a stone and opens a lonely gate. The row of barracks remains unchanged, flowers planted by some careful wife of careless officer still bloom, the flag staff stands without pulley rope or flag, the chapel is empty. The scaffold on which Hartrip and Oliver were executed stands firm in ghostly solitude with beam in place nnd trap half sprung, and seems waiting for another victim. Everywhere silence; propsticks withdrawn, windows from buildings; old shoes piled in promiscuous groupings tell which buildings have been last occupied. A fruit tree in the midst of its loneliness blossoms and puts forth its leaves with all the proud defiance of nature, and with a scornful fling with every wave of wind for the works of man perishing on every side."

The prison property of Camp Chase was offered for sale at public auction on July 14, 1866, by order of Gen. Richardson.

The camp was torn down, and a portion of the lumber shipped to Dayton, to be used in the National Soldiers Home at that place.

On going back and forth over town one often wonders what that double row of trees at the foot of the hill going north from Broad street, known as "Shady Lane," was used for. It was the driveway to the residence of William Sullivant, which stood near where the front entrance of State Hospital building now is. The drive extended some distance north, thence turned to the left up the hill and back south on a private roadway past the house. The steepness of the National Road up the hill at that time made this way easier to reach the top. The old stone gate post on the west side of the front entrance, which was about eight feet high, is still there, but nearly buried beneath the fill on the present grade of the street.

From a Satisfied Owner

Lancaster, Ohio, April 20, 1918.

The comfort the patented Caloric Pipeless Furnace has added to our last room house the last winter is not easily described. There are so many advantages, I hardly know which to mention first.

These have come to us at such low cost that I blame myself for not installing the Caloric years ago. My doctor, the coldest that Central Ohio has had during my lifetime, we burned only six tons of coal to keep us warm through all the house. On the severest weather we fired the furnace three times a day; in moderate weather only twice.

The fire kept perfectly and the temperature of the house was comfortable all through the night. The ventilation was perfect. We had no headaches and fewer colds in the family than ever before.

Mrs. Lamb especially appreciated the cleanliness of the furnace, for we have no dust or soot in the house, nor did we have any damp walls nor frost on the windows. The house plants thrived in windows far distant from the furnace.

With no coal to carry, no ashes to take out, and so little labor and expense, our Caloric has meant so much to us that we would not think of doing without it any more than we would do without our electric lights or our Willys-Knight.

THE HILLTOP RECORD

Of Interest to the People on the Hilltop and Vicinity — Phone, Hilltop 701

Vol. 2. — The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, April 10, 1919 — No. 51

The time for listing personal property for taxation for 1919 begins April 14th, and all tax lists must be made out, signed and sworn to before May 1st, to avoid penalty and get benefit of the one hundred dollar exemption. Beginning Monday, April 14th, I will be at the No. 17 Engine House, corner Wheatland and Broad, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, until May 1st. The law requires that I, as assessor, administer the oath and give necessary information, free of charge. Each person is required to list all personal property in excess of one hundred dollars. Blanks will be mailed to you by the County Auditor.

Respectfully, Henry K. Wirtz, Assessor for the 11th Ward.

A delightful occasion was the surprise party given by the Pomeroy Home Club on Mrs. Anna Mott of 71 Eldon Avenue, April 2nd it being her birthday. She was called down in the city in the afternoon and on returning at six oclock found her house full to overflowing with friends and relatives. Mrs. Albert Young was in charge and had a fine hot dinner ready. The table was beautiful with sweet peas and Easter flowers. The dinner was followed by music by Mrs. Ruth McCorba of Pomeroy, on the piano, Miss Gladys and Mr. Howard Young on the violin and guitar. The club showered Mrs. Mott with handkerchiefs while the relatives gave her lovely and useful articles. It was a perfect surprise and a very happy affair.

ST. PAUL'S EVANGELICAL CHURCH

On Saturday evening, April 12th at 7:00 o'clock prompt, Mrs. Pearl Smith Maier will speak to 'teen age girls and their mothers on the subject "Girls' Life Problems." Previous to her marriage to the Rev. H. W. Maier Mrs. Maier was connected with the Ohio Christian Endeavor Union as Junior and Intermediate Field Secretary. She is a splendid speaker, and is, herself, a very wonderful girl. Every 'teen age girl on the Hilltop should hear Mrs. Maier.. The girls of the St. Paul's Society extend a cordial invitation to every 'teen age girls Sunday School class or other organization to attend in a group, or individually.

Sunday afternoon, April 13, 3:00 P. M. at the St. Paul's United Evangelical Church. Mr. Haines A. Reichel, Field Secretary and State Intermediate Superintendent of the Ohio Christian Endeavor Union will speak to 'teen age boys and young men. His subject will be "A Man or a Monkey." Mr. Reichel is well known to some of the yong men of the Hilltop, and they will vouch for the statement that he is "some speaker." We do not hesitate to promise every 'teen age boy and young man who will agree to spend the hour from 3:00 to 4:00 on Sunday next at the St. Paul's Evangelical Church the livest and most interesting address he has heard in many a day. Boy's clubs, Sunday School classes, or other organizations are cordially invited to come as a group, or individually. Father is welcome, if he is interested enough to come.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the St. Paul United Evangelical Church will meet at the home of Mrs. John Houdashelt. 101 N. Ogden Ave., next Thursday afternoon, April 17th. at 2:00 o'clock.

"How to Give God's Day to God-like Deeds." This is the subject of the Christian Endeavor for Sunday April 13th. Why not come out to the St. Paul's United Evangelical Church, corner Broad and Warren and see what good meetings we have. Mrs. Claude Raines is leader next Sunday night, and she has some very good points to bring before us. Meeting starts at 6:30 prompt. Everybody welcome. Bring all your friends with you.

Mr. and Mrs. Branch Milligan and daughter, Rika and Miss Anna Walsh, of Athens, O, spent Sunday with Mrs. J. N. Hoffman, 227 S. Burgess Ave.

---

Glendin Barnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Barnes, 21 N. Eureka Ave., who is in service in the navy spent a couple of weeks' furlough at his home, after recovering from the influenza and pneumonia.

A Substitute for Mollie

By IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Harriet found her crying when she came down at 10:30 Saturday morning. There was mail on the little girl's desk by the telephone switchboard but Mollie paid no attention to it or her other duties as operator and general reception lady for the Oriente apartment on Riverside drive.

"It's me big brother, Danny, Miss Baxter," she explained. "He's just off the transport and they've got him out at one of those hospitals in fixed-over department stores, and it's me one chance to see him after two years in France, and that old villain of a Grumel won't leave me off three hours. Dearie says he may be transferred after today and what if I don't see him when he's all I've got?"

Harriet was disturbed and indignant. She thought quickly. There were only two appointments, one at the dressmaker's—that was easy to break—and one at the dentist's. Then the matinee that afternoon with Vera. She could 'phone her, and this was an [illegible] case.

"You go right along, Molly, and forget all about this. I can run this switchboard, and tell everyone about the apartments. Mr. Grumel won't be [illegible], and you'll be back at two, [illegible] won't you?"

Mollie promised blithely, and departed with her blue eyes happy and the [illegible] showing in her rosy cheeks. She was only sixteen. Harriet thought fondly, as she took a new book and prepared for a quiet morning. Then came a call for herself from Aunt [illegible] down at the Biltmore.

"It's Me Big Brother, Danny"

"Of course I know, you're [illegible] dear, but this is [illegible] for your own [illegible] I [illegible] could be glad to have [illegible] for once. Is your [illegible]

The old tried remedies arranged by a skilled physician make up the formula of KE-O-KA.

West High Alumni will give a dance and party at the school building on April 25th. Refreshments will also be served. Admission 25c.

We invite the closest investigation when we say KE-O-KA is in a class by itself. You do not need testimonials. Use it; KE-O-KA talks.

Glenwood Camp No. 7683, Royal Neighbors of America meeting, Friday night, and candidates. Let's have a good turnout.

Aged persons who are infirm. Persons who are just convalescing from flu. Children who are nervous and weekly; all should use KE-O-KA, the great nerve and blood remedy. Call Hilltop 2866.

The following letter is from William McK. Slatter, No. 40 N. Warren Ave., to his grandfather, Mr. Jacob T. Sackman, and Aunt Lena, with whom he made his home while on the Hilltop for ten years.

Monte Carlo, Mona Co., France.
March 11, 1919.

Dear Dad and Lena:

This finds your soldier boy along the famous Riveria of France. Am on a seven-day vacation to this beautiful coast. Like summer. The Government has taken over this section and believe me, it is fine. Best of eats: Best hotel, and all it costs is for some side issues.

This place is about eight hours' ride from Genoa, Italy, and one of the finest rides I ever had on a train.

Will be sorry to leave this place, as it has no comparison in the world, I don't think.

Went through the famous casino at this place where the wealth of the world usually gathers at this time of the year to lose or win money at some one of the many different tables of chance. It is truly a beautiful place. In fact, everything is beautiful. I never knew I would ever see it, yet I had often thought I would like to come here.

Don't know when we will start for home. May be it will be soon, but cannot say.

I am as ever.

The return of many of the 130 soldiers the Tri Mu class makes the active members wish for some good times. Those coming back have not been coming to Sunday School as was generally expected. The class officers are endeavoring to make things as comfortable and entertaining as possible for the returning soldiers. Different speakers will be dated for the class for a few weeks to give a 30 minute talk interesting to young men. Some good many months ago an army officer gave a splendid talk at a reception of Tri Mus. It was enjoyed by all. Many of our best boys fought winning battles in the 37th Division. Five officers led our own Tri Mus and won. But the best officer is Lieut. Col. Simeon Nash. Who could refuse to come to Sunday School when such a splendid character will address us? Colonel Nash will in all probability address the class on Sunday, April 13, unless more important business calls him for that date. Every Tri Mu wants to hear about the 37th Division and your duty is to be present. If Colonel Nash is unable to attend, another speaker will be arranged for.

Chrysanthemums in Paris.

There are plenty of chrysanthemums in the flower shops of Paris this winter season, but they are sold at a prohibitive price, anything between two and ten francs being charged for a single bloom. It is said that they were never more expensive, even during the first years when they became known in France, when the chrysanthemum was regarded as a great rarity.

feed won't bother him a bit. He is really Sir Wilfred Lorimer, but up in Canada he drops the title. Lives on a huge ranch in Alberta and is fearfully rich. His mother and mine are cousins, so I've been having him up here with me, but he needs more diversion than an old woman can give him. Be nice, dearie. By-by."

Harriet heard her cut off with a feeling akin to desperation. That was one of the joys of rich relatives. They called you up and demanded anything at all hours with the idea they were conferring a favor on you by letting you act for them.

At 11:10 came a call from Sir Wilfred himself. Would she kindly give him Miss Baxter's apartment?

"Miss Baxter's out," said Harriet flatly. "Any message?"

"Will she be in for lunch?"

(He had a very nice voice.)

"I hardly think so. She left no message."

"But she expects me," he urged. "Will you please leave word I called up?—Wilfred Lorimer."

The time dragged until noon. Harriet tried to keep her mind on the messages and answers, but her eyes watched the door, and she knew she expected trouble any minute. He had not spoken like the kind who would take no for an answer. Perhaps she might be able to send up to her father. She called up softly and told Jane to prepare a dainty luncheon, for fear of an unexpected guest. He would never know if he were going out West at once.

Then suddenly the outer storm doors swung wide and she knew at first glance it was Sir Wilfred. He was very tall and blond, with humorous brown eyes and a smile that countered any antagonism.

He was terribly sorry Miss Baxter had not come in yet; but possibly her father expected him. He would go up. Harriet announced him, hoping with all her heart that Jane would be a diplomat, and he passed on upstairs. As long as he was leaving for Canada within a day or two it could not matter, and, after all, she told herself it was in a splendid cause.

She bent her head low over her book when he passed out of the doorway a little past two. Evidently her father had liked him. She looked up in relief, just in time to catch his last glance back at her.

There surely was a gleam of unusual interest in his eye that sent the color to her face; but Mollie arrived almost immediately after, and her gratitude swept away every other consideration.

Two weeks later Harriet was due at the Biltmore for Mrs. Devereux's Thursday tea, as usual. It was late when she entered, a slim, attractive figure in her gray velvet gown trimmed in moleskin, with a Persian girdle in dull orange and jade green. She was conscious of someone's scrutiny as she spoke to her aunt at the little tea table, but it was not until his voice sounded behind her that she knew she was discovered.

"You don't mind if I sit here with you, do you?" he asked, happily. "I feel so well acquainted, don't you? You know"—as if he had made a remarkable discovery—"I knew your voice the minute I heard it; isn't that odd? You sing contralto, don't you?"

His journey back to Alberta was delayed for weeks, and Mrs. Devereux, as she said later, with a sigh of thankfulness, never worked so hard in her life as she did helping him win Harriet.

But there at last came the day when Jane knelt in the little dressing room the bridesmaids had just vacated, lacing up her mistress' traveling boots, and as she finished she said a little breathlessly:

"You know, Miss Harriet, I feel just as if I was to blame for all this, and so does Sir Wilfred. I suppose I should be calling you Lady Harriet, but it don't come natural yet, you know."

"What do you mean, Jane?" asked Harriet, amusedly. It all seemed like some strange dream to her, the hurried courtship, the wedding with her aunt in charge, and now the long journey that lay ahead.

"Why, that day when he came for lunch," Jane flushed guiltily, "he made me tell him who you were. I mean who the young lady with the beautiful voice was at the switchboard and so I told him the truth. He'd have found out, anyhow, the minute he heard that Mollie springing her brogue on him over the wire."

"Oh, Jane," laughed Harriet, "I thought it was fate, and it was just you."

MANY NEW HOUSES

Now Being Built on the Hilltop, Foretelling a Revival in the Building Line in the New Future

A revival in the building business on the Hilltop is quite apparent. Those engaged in this line of business report the prospects to be excellent. For the first time in two years can be seen many new homes being erected all over the Hilltop, with the prospects of many more in the immediate future. Real estate men report activity in the buying line, which, as the season advances, bids fair to be the most active season for several years.

Mr. Geo. H. Dial, Sullivant avenue, is building two six-room and bath Dutch Colonials on Sullivant avenue, between Lechner and Belvedere. He also has one about completed on Belvidere, near Sullivant for Mr. O. E. Merritt, formerly of 274 South Richardson avenue. Mr. Dial also has several others in prospect.

J. F. Terrell, Martin avenue, has begun the erection of a six-room modern on Burgess avenue just north of Broad street, the same to be occupied by himself and family.

The Lucas Construction Company is putting up a fine seven-room bungalow at 55 North Warren avenue for Mr. George Matson. It is of woven tapestry brick, with thatched shingle hoof, cement porch and large brick columns. It will be a beauty when completed. Mr. Matson is also having built on the rear of his lot a garage of stucco brick, with capacity for three machines.

The Lucas Construction Company also have under way an eleven-room house on Arlington avenue, for Moore & Hayes, and another house on Arlington avenue for Mr. George Young, of Eldon avenue. They report excellent prospects for the future in the building line.

Mr. C. L. Lucas expects to erect a six-room frame bungalow for himself at 170 Eldon avenue, in the near future.

Mr. John Carter has two modern five-room homes under way on North Ogden avenue.

Mrs. Clara Ditrick, 153 North Warren avennue, has assumed the management of the subscription department of The Hilltop Record. Any courtesies given her will be appreciated.

Dr. Jay D. Smith, prominent surgeon of Akron, was the guest this week at the home of Dr. Whitehead during the annual session of the State Medical Association.

A new "Signograph," advertising the Calorie Pipeless furnace has been installed in the window of the Prior Hardware Store. It is very pretty, changing its colors into four different hues.

Misses patent leather, white top Shoes, $3.50. Charles Houx Shoe Store.

The family of Frank Harper, 87 North Terrace street, are visiting relatives in New Lexington, Ohio, this week.

Rev. Harry James, South Warren Avenue, who left a few days ago to work with Stevens Evangelistic Party

Westwood Lodge No. 770, K. of P., will confer the Second and Third Rank this Thursday evening.

NOT THAT KIND OF AILMENT

Mary Frances Had Mother Unnecessarily Alarmed Concerning That Note From Teacher.

The kindergarten teacher of a certain school sends home notes to the children's mothers whenever she finds that any of her children are ill or nearly so. Recently she discovered "cooties" in some of their hair. She warned all of the children of the pest, and then sent notes to the mothers of the afflicted ones.

Mary Frances came home all excitement over the event. She was disappointed because she had not been one of the honored ones. And mother, much amused, told all the neighbors of her little daughter's grief. A few days later she was on the veranda talking to the women who lived on each side of her home when they saw Mary Frances rushing up the street from school. She was waving a note and shouting jubilantly: "Oh, mother, I've got them in my head, too. Teacher wrote you a note."

Horrified, mother rushed Mary Frances into the house and away from the interested neighbors. She found a fine comb and was ready to begin the searching process when she happened to see the note again. Rather curious as to how the teacher would word such a delicate epistle, she began to read it. And this is what she read: "Mary Frances has a slightly decayed tooth. I think that you had better have it attended to before it begins to ache."—Indianapolis News.

"Marseillaise" Author.

A committee has been formed in Paris for the purpose of erecting a monument at Strassburg to Rouget de l'Isle, the author of the "Marseillaise," says the Paris Daily Mail. The presidency of the committee has been offered to Baron de Dietrich, a descendant of the mayor of Strassburg, in whose house the famous song was sung for the first time. He is an officer in the French army.

Mr. W. L. Peck has opened up an up-to-date shoe repair shop at 2344 West Broad street, corner Oakley avenue. Mr. Peck has had a great deal of experience in this business, and has installed the most modern machinery, enabling him to do a strictly first-class job. We wish for him abundant success. See his advertisement elsewhere in this paper.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavorers of the Hilltop Church of Christ were entertained at the home of Mary Johnson last Friday evening. The first hour was devoted to business. The rest of the evening was spent in games. Refreshments were served. Those present were as follows. Helen, Faith, Norma Johnston, La Rue, Marie Slicker, Charlene Taylor, Lucille Hall, Bernadine Bigham, Arthur Jones, Jack Fink, Walter Baker, Vance Miller, Harold Wilkins, David Sword, Charles Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Miller, Mrs. M. A. Johnson and hostess, Mary Johnson.

Sarah Murry's new discovery—a sure cure for rheumatism and skin trouble. Free from alcohol. Call and get medicine, 312 Clarendon avenue, or call Hilltop 3109.

William Fox presents a 1919 extravanza "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves." A children's play that everyone can enjoy. At the Empire Hilltop Theatre, Saturday afternoon and night.

The Leaders' Class of the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church will hold its next meeting Friday, May 9. The class will be entertained by a wrestling match between Robert Earl and Fred Ault. All members are urged to be present.

Mrs. E. J. Barnes, 21 North Eureka avenue, has just returned from Kingston, Ohio, where she was called by the sickness of her mother, aged 89 years, who has been sick with pneumonia.

It is said that Kenneth Smoke and Ray Carter are planning on going snipe hunting Saturday night.

The Rev. Victor G. Flinn of Port Washington, Ohio, is visiting Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Shields, 2503 West Broad street.

Memorial services will be held at the Confederate cemetery, Camp Chase, on Saturday, June 28, under auspices of Robert E. Lee Chapter No. 514. Speakers for the occasion will be announced later.

Physiology Teacher—"Robert, you may explain how we hear things."

Bobby—"Pa tells 'em to ma as a secret and ma gives 'em away at the lodge club."—Boston Transcript.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the St. Paul United Evangelical Church will hold their regular monthly meeting at the parsonage on Friday afternoon at 1:30, May 16. A large attendance of the membership is desired.

Car Fare Referendum Petitions

The petitions for a referendum vote on the street car fare proposition, which are being circulated, are fast being filled. Councilman M. W. Westlake says scarcely a person approached refuses to sign the petition, and some voters are even hunting up bearers of petitions in order to get a chance to sign. Women who voted at last fall's election are eligible to sign them. The measure will probably be voted on at the regular primary election next August. All women within the voting age can vote on it then. The petitions must be in the clerk's hands by May 20th. Anyone not having signed and wishing to do so, should get a hustle on themselves and hunt up a petition bearer. Five hundred petitions have been put out, and 500 more will probably be used.

Lodge and Society Notes

The next meeting of the Sunset Literary Club will be on Wednesday, May 14th, at 2:15 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Austin Hutt, 2323 West Broad street. Dr. Ada Wright will speak on "Our Medical Women in the Great War."

The newly elected officers will take charge in the fall. They are: President, Miss Minola Haines; First Vice President, Mrs. C. V. Williams; Second Vice President, Mrs. Malcolm Grove; Treasurer, Mrs. W. M. Simpson; Secretary, Mrs. Carl C. Hutt; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Charles W. Lentz.

The Bay View Literrary Club will hold its final meeting for the season next Monday night at the home of Mrs. T. A. Bartiel, West Third avenue.

Westwood Temple, Pythian Sisters, will hold a pie social May 14 in their hall, 2265½ West Broad street. A splendid program has been prepared. Come and have a good time. All officers are requested to be in their places at 7 p. m.

If it is true that the Italian government has decided to tear down the Cafarelli palace and other incumbrances belonging formerly to the German embassy, and open the Capitoline hill to thorough evacuation, it is news of the utmost importance to the world of scholarship, art and archeology, especially if the work is intrusted to so competent an expert as Senator Lanciani, remarks the New York Sun.

No one can foretell what treasures may be buried beneath the former German embassy and in the adjoining soil, but there must be much. The Temple of Jupiter stood on the Capitoline on the cliff, more than 100 feet above the road. The first temple dated from the sixth century, B. C., but it was rebuilt at least five times. Despite the wreckage of ages, the pilings by successive barbarian invaders and the still more destructive looting by the men of the middle ages, who not only carried off marbles, ornaments, statutes and columns to use in their churches or palaces, but also actually burned much Pentelican marble for lime, there must be a vast mass of remains deep below the present surface.

You are cordially invited to the Special Service at Glenwood M. E. Church Sunday evening.

Dr. Wykoff will preach on the subject, "THE CROOKED MADE STRAIGHT."

The Special Music will be a Duet by Mrs. Cannon and Mrs. Leonard entitled, "MY TASK?"—Ashford.

Centenary Stereopticon Pictures will be exhibited at the Epworth League service at 6:30 p. m. It will be worth while to come early and see these pictures.

$100.00 REWARD

The Speedoline Company will pay the above reward to anyone who can prove that Speedoline will not do what we claim for it, or that it will in any way injure the finest motor, or carburetor.

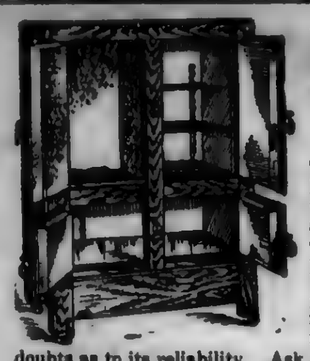
It is guaranteed not to contain any acids, ether or any chemicals that may injure a motor or its parts. Speedoline increases power of motor, saves 25 to 40 per cent of gasoline, removes carbon, increases mileage, prolongs life of motor. What Speedoline users say for it every day:

Columbus, Ohio, March 5, 1919.

Dear Sir:—I have just finished a test of Speedoline and can truthfully say it does all is claimed for it. I made a run with one gallon of untreated gasoline in the tank, and ran 16.7 miles when it stopped. I then made a run over the same road and under the same conditions, with one gallon of gasoline treated with Speedoline, and ran 25.9 miles before it stoppepd, making a gain of 9.2 miles on a gallon, the engine also running much smoother and with more power with the treated gasoline.

The test was made on a Maxwell touring car. Will gladly recommend Speedoline to any motorist.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) W. H. RANKIN.



Columbus, Ohio, May 3, 1919.

Dear Sir:—I have given Speedoline a thorough test and find it does all that you claim for it. I find that it not only increases the miles per gallon, but makes easier starting and smoother running.

I heartily recommend its use not only for economy, but for the added satisfaction you will get from your car.

Yours truly,
(Signed) W. G. BARNHART.

Jewelers say that the war-time custom of brides buying their own wedding rings has come to stay. ## A Tonsorial Genius

By GERALD ST. ETIENNE

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

There it was again! Mildred tiptoed to her door and opened it quietly. The soft strains of the violin descended from the room above—rich, soothing notes forming the most beautiful [illegible] she had ever heard. The violin was in the hands of a genius—some undiscovered wonder—Mildred felt sure, and Mildred Cushing, prima donna, was naturally a judge of music. With the last note Mildred realized that she had left her room and was standing before a door on the floor above.

The music had so entranced her she had not been aware of her own movements. In the hope that the musician would not become aware of her presence, she backed from the door, misjudged the stairway and with a cry of fright, followed quickly by one of pain, pitched to the landing below. Her ankle twisted under her, her head banged against the wall and everything went black.

Fifteen minutes later she recovered consciousness, to find herself propped up in a chair in her own room and a strange man applying damp cloths to her head. It was the musician, she could tell by the gentle touch of his hands. When her eyes opened he was smiling down at her.

"I knew you would soon come around," he said, in a rich, even tone, much in keeping with his appearance. "You are not badly hurt, are you?"

"Just my ankle," she breathed, painfully. "It hurts terribly."

He had her slipper off, was bandaging her ankle and apologizing for not noticing the swelling, before she could offer a word of protest. As [illegible]'s fingers worked gently about the sore spot, Mildred sank back and admired his carefulness. He seemed to charm the pain a trifle.

"The pain will keep me awake tonight," she fretted, as he prepared to leave.

Without a word he opened the door of her dumb-waiter and then turned to explain. "My room is just above," he said. "The sound is sure to come down here. I will play an air that I guarantee to put you to sleep. Now are you satisfied?"

"That will be beautiful," she smiled in spite of the pain. "I do so like to hear you play. I will tap on the wall when I am ready for the music to begin."

Fifteen minutes later she tapped on the wall. He had been waiting for the signal; the music started at once.

"Sweet and low, sweet and low,
Song of the summer breeze."

The violin in his hands seemed to spell out the words. Mildred closed her eyes mechanically. Sleep was not so easily won. The music took her mind off the pain of her ankle though, many other thoughts crowded into r brain to keep her awake.

This new venture of hers troubled r. In two weeks she was to begin ork on her first movie production, nd she wondered if a triumph await- d her there. She was going to make a triumph if it was at all possible. he had begun work on it already.

An idea of the part she was to play n the first picture had been given her. and she was staying at the rooming house to get atmosphere. She had found points to successfully create types in opera by living as the characters had lived, as nearly as possible. So why wouldn't it work out in movies? she asked herself.

What kind of a leading man would she have to put up with? She wished now he had been a clause in her contract. The thought of being supported by some film idol, who looked upon acting for its commercial value only troubled her.

She was almost convinced that this was the kind she would have to endure. Oh, for a tall, handsome man, with ability and a real sense of the artistic —a man like she felt this musician was! The soothing notes of the violin got in their work gradually.

"While my little one, while my pretty one sleeps," Mildred dozed off to sleep.

Next morning, bright and early, the musician called to see how the ankle fared. That call led to another and so on, until by the time Mildred was able to walk without a limp they were fast friends. As their acquaintance grew, Mildred found herself analyzing his character.

There was a certain restraint about him that she could not understand, but she wondered if somehow he had gleamed who she really was. To put off the true scent, she made frequent mentions of returning to her "work," and alluded to the "shop" more than once.

His musical ability, though, was the most remarkable thing about him, next to his good looks, of course. His name, she had learned long before, was Wellington Brand.

Mildred could just picture him before a large audience, playing his way into fame. After his first big success she could picture herself receiving him with open arms and kissing him in pride.

Then he would be on a footing with her, and she would have no reason to be ashamed of kissing him. Never before had she felt so interested in another's talent. Hers was more than interest, she knew it, but did not acknowledge it even to herself.

But Mildred was to get a terrible shock. The scenario writer had started his hero out in a barber shop and many of the scenes lay around there, so when Mildred reached this stage in her search for atmosphere, she went out looking for a barber shop. Just as she reached one in that district the sound of a violin greeted her.

Heavens! There stood her genius, arrayed in a barber's coat, playing his favorite air while apparently waiting for a customer to appear. Mildred's faith in her own deductions of human character faded right there. A lump rose in ther throat and a burning sensation assailed her eyes. She disagreed with the scenario writer.

A barber a genius? Never! No man with both talent and common sense could content himself with shaving other men's faces. To think that she had discovered that he was worthless just when she had begun to care!

Three days before the appointed time Mildred appeared at the motion picture ready for work, but the leading man was not there.

"You'll have to select another actor," she told her director, in true prima donna form. "My first picture cannot be held up."

"But, my dear Miss Cushing," the director told her, "Mr. Linton is a real star, the only one who is good enough to work in your pictures with you. He has been on location for nearly a month just to put atmosphere in the picture. He has been playing his violin at a barber shop in the tenement district, and we can't drive him back here. I believe there must be a lady in the case. You never can tell how romances will find those actors on atmosphere jaunts."

"What does he look like?" Mildred cried eagerly. "Perhaps he is my barber musician! Oh, if it only is!"

"That's me," a familiar voice interrupted. It was Wellington Brand. No, it wasn't. The director introduced him as Harry Linton, leading man.

Once their hands had met in welcome the director knew there was no starting on that picture for at least an hour. It is hard to say which had the most to tell the other or how just surprised they were.

When the director returned he took one look and then called out frantically: "Camera! Quick! Here's a scene for a feature!"

MAY DIG ON CAPITOLINE HILL

Remains of Temple of Jupiter Are Known to Underlie the German Embassy in Rome.

If it is true that the Italian government has decided to tear down the Caffarelli palace and other incumbrances belonging formerly to the German embassy, and open the Capitoline hill to thorough evacuation, it is news of the utmost importance to the world of scholarship, art and archeology, especially if the work is intrusted to so competent an expert as Senator Lanciani, remarks the New York Sun.

No one can foretell what treasures may be buried beneath the former German embassy and in the adjoining soil, but there must be much. The Temple of Jupiter stood on the Capitoline on the cliff, more than 100 feet above the road. The first temple dated from the sixth century, B. C., but it was rebuilt at least five times. Despite the wreckage of ages, the pilings by successive barbarian invaders and the still more destructive looting by the men of the middle ages, who not only carried off marbles, ornaments, statutes and columns to use in their churches or palaces, but also actually burned much Pentelican marble for lime, there must be a vast mass of remains deep below the present surface.

It is difficult for us of modern city life to realize how many Romes there were. More than 3,000 years of varied existence, periods of building followed by wreckage and degeneration, and then renewed building upon the ruins, after erosion had been long at work has made of Rome a city of many strata. In spite of the great research of the past two or more centuries it is still a mine of marvelous possibilities.

This ONE Register Heats Your Entire Home

Have It Explained During Demonstration Week

Study this picture of the one Register used on the Caloric Pipeless Furnace. Notice how its openings are divided into two channels—the circular inside and the square outside. These two channels are separated by a double insulated wall all the way to a foot from the bottom of the furnace.

When a fire is kindled in the Caloric, warm air starts to rise through the center channel of this one register. It is against all laws of Nature to allow empty air spaces, so when the light warm air rises, the channel of this register sucks heavier cold air down to the purifying and heating chamber, replacing the air which has been sent upward. This cold air is freshened and heated, sent upward, and the process becomes continuous so long as there is heat in the firebox.

More Heat — Less Fuel

PIPELESS CALORIC FURNACE

The Original Patented Pipeless Furnace

More Comfort — Less Work

This same circulation of the air is taking place through your entire house. The warm air rises to the ceilings and through doors, transoms, stairways and passageways, travels to the furthermost corners of every room on each floor. Every time the warm air enters the room it replaces cold air which is sent down to the Caloric to be heated and made pure. This is so simple that it sounds like mere theory, but 50,000 Caloric-heated homes were kept warm all over last winter, when old style furnaces and stoves caused parlors and spare rooms to be shut off, to keep the rest of the house warm. We know that the Caloric makes good. It has been used by enthusiastic owners for years, heating homes throughout, and saving many dollars on fuel bills.

Demonstration At Our Store This Week

Come in and let us show you what the Caloric Furnace is doing in thousands of other homes. We will study your heating problem and advise you whether or not you can profitably use a Caloric. Come in and talk to us. No obligation—no trying to sell you—merely demonstrating this remarkable method of heating.

A notable event of the Hill Crest Baptist Church, was the holding of its first annual meeting on May 2d. A bountiful dinner was served at 6:30 to about one hundred and seventy-five, and with a very pleasant social time. Following this a program was given consisting of stereopticon views, reading the report of the church for the past year, by the clerk, Mrs. T. M. Robbinson; solos by Miss Beeman and Mr. Evans; old plantation songs by the choir, led by Mr. Knox.

A gift of one hundred dollars in gold was presented to Pastor Cowley and wife, by Attorney Ballard in behalf of the church and congregation, as a token of their love, loyalty and appreciation of his work among them. Pastor Cowley responded in a touching manner, showing he appreciated the gift, also the spirit and co-operation of his people.

The church, with her numerous blessings of the past year, are enthused and determined to do more and better work in the Master's vineyard in the year before her than in the preceding one. After prayer by Dr. Colbourn of Linden, and singing "God be With You Till We Meet Again," adjournment was made for one year.

M. M.

Mrs. Anna Mott of 71 Eldon avenue, entertained the Pomeroy Home Club Tuesday afternoon with a strawberry shortcake party. Mrs. Albert Young assisted the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Milligan of 77 Eldon avenue, are visiting in Cleveland.

Mr. and Mrs. Loff Jacobs of Pomeroy, Ohio, visited Mrs. Anna Mott and daughter last week.

FIELD DAY

Exercises to be Observed by the Public School Children—Hilltop Schools Will Take Part

Thousands of Columbus school children will participate in the near future, in field day exercises demonstrating physical education work in the schools. These events will be open to the public. One group which comprises the schools of Bellows avenue, Chicago avenue, Dana avenue, Franklin and Highland avenue schools, will hold their field day exercises on the grounds of Dana Avenue School, on Thursday, June 5th. Highland Avenue's part in the program will be that of the 4th, 5th and 6th grades, will be dancing, patriotic songs and saluting the flag, also a special drill by 6th grade girls. The program will be completed by competitive games by children from the different schools. A brass band will assist in the music. It is earnestly requested that the parents and patrons of the schools be there.

West Broad Street School will observe field day later in June on their home grounds—the date of which will be announced later.

West Broad is also planning for a play to be given about the sixth of June.

Mother Earth will put Spring on the throne to replace King Winter and all his little ice fairies Friday at 3 p. m. at West Broad Street School Auditorium.

Eighty pupils of the Bellows Avenue School will take part in the "Spring Fantasy," a fairy playlet of songs and dances, given under direction of Miss Cora Mae Humphrey, teacher of dramatics at the school.

The play, "Arms and the Man," given by the West High Senior Class, which was presented last week, will be repeated as a benefit for the Athletic Association of that school on Thursday evening, May 22, in the School Auditorium. The admission will be 25 and 35 cents.

Lodge and Society Notes

Washington Chapter, Order Eastern Star, sent an invitation to Robert Morris Chapter to be present at their annual inspection, Thursday evening, May 15th. The invitation was accepted and an enjoyable evening is anticipated.

Glenwood Park Orchestra

There are probably a good many Hilltop people who are not aware of the new large Hilltop orchestra, which is supplying the music at Glenwood Shelter House. The orchestra, which is under the leadership of Mr. George H. Dial, is at present composed of 12 pieces, but could use more—especially first and second violins and viola. Anyone playing standard music on these instruments should get in on this orchestra. Also persons having other instruments who can play standard music are invited. The orchestra meets for practice on Friday evening of each week at 7:30. Call Mr. Geo. H. Dial, Hilltop 3097.

Alpha Kappa Holds a Banquet

Who says the Hilltop isn't up-to-date We now have a first-class young men's social club on the Hill. This has just recently been organized with twenty young fellows as charter members of the club. The club will be known as the Alpha Kappa Gamma, with rooms at 2277½ West Broad St. Already there are a number of young men on the waiting list for admission into the club. We need not be surprised to see these young men climbing telephone poles, fighting policemen, scrubbing sidewalks, etc., on their initiation night.

Just to start things with a flourish the "Alpha Kappa" held an organization banquet Saturday evening, May 10, at Guyette's Restaurant. Covers were laid for twenty. Speeches were given by the officers and members of the club, and a delightful musical program was rendered. The members were greatly entertained with an exhibition dance given by Messrs. Dickerson and Marsh. An excellent speech was given by the president, Roy B. Hawthorne, setting forth the plans of the club for the summer months. Albert Burgoon, as manager of athletics, talked about a baseball team for the club. The club members entertain high hopes for the good times to come.

Those present at the banquet were: Roy Hawthorne, Dana Marsh, Ernest Cady, Kenneth Dickerson, Eldon Lewis, Loren Corder, Herschel Ferguson, Charles Shelby, Kenneth Burgoon, Clarence Vanmeter, Albert Burgoon, Arlie Crabbe, Arthur Yerke, Ralph Kimes, George Chambers, Ralph Reed, Joseph Wyman, Riley Welch, Charles Calland, Myron Mann.

The Annual Picnic

At the last meeting of the Hilltop Improvement Association, Wednesday evening, May 7th, a committee consisting of Messrs. Dolby and Seiller, was appointed to arrange for the annual Hilltop outing this summer. It was also decided to have a Fourth of July celebration in the nature of welcoming home all Hilltop soldiers who have been absent during the past year and a half. Messrs. Herbert Gibson and William Barnhart were appointed a committee to arrange for the same.

Miss Edna Kuch, reader, had a part in the program given by the W. O. W. at the Chamber of Commerce, Tuesday evening. She will give a program at the South Side Settlement House next Tuesday evening.

Referendum Petitions

Signatures on referendum petitions on the ordinance granting the Rail-Light a fare increase to six tickets for a quarter had passed the 9000 mark Monday, according to Charles F. Offenbacher, chairman of the committee in charge of the petitions.

The required number of signatures is 7200.

Offenbacher Monday secured 300 petitions from the printer and expects to have them in circulation Tuesday. This will make a total of 800 petitions in circulation.

He Fooled His Friends.

When the Americans drove the Germans out of the St. Mihiel salient the job was done so quickly and cleverly that a lot of booty fell into their hands. There was one private at Thiaucourt who took a chance, says Stars and Stripes, the soldiers' newspaper, but he could not resist the temptation.

When his mates first saw him they were uncertain whether he was the kaiser or the crown prince as they rushed forward to make the capture. He was riding a German officer's horse, he had a German officer's helmet, and on his chest was pinned the iron cross, all left by German officers in their rush to safety. The squad of Americans bent upon making an important capture were tremendously disgusted to find that it was only Private Jones of the infantry.

Worry Will Not Help.

Boxes Installed for Gathering News

With enlarged facilities for getting out the Hilltop Record, we expect to give our readers a much better paper in the future, and are now in position to publish any and all suitable news we can get hold of. In order to produce a more newsie paper we must depend largely on our readers and friends, for such news and contributions. We have previously used the phone and the personal call, but now we hope to be assisted also in another way. Several boxes for the collection of items will be installed within the next week or so, about the Hilltop. The first four will be as follows: One at the Hilltop Confectionery, 2105 West Broad, corner of Whitethorne and Broad; another at the confectionery of M. J. Partach, 2759 West Broad, corner Hague and Broad; then another at the Hilltop Pharmacy, 2235 Sullivant avenue, near Clarendon; and a fourth at the Home Confectionery, 2700 Sullivant avenue, corner Warren avenue. We invite any one having news items or contributions for the Record to use these boxes. Please write plainly, on one side of the paper, and be sure to make names very plain. We also ask each one to sign name of writer—not for publication, but that we may know of the genuineness of the article. We do not divulge name of any contributor. These boxes will be visited at different times by our representative, who will collect the items, the last collection being made about 10:00 o'clock Wednesday morning. Be sure and have your items in by that time. We will probably install other boxes at other Hilltop points in the near future.

We also invite all to use our phone, Hilltop 701, (or 1653 evenings) to send in news items; or drop them in the box at our office, 2354 West Broad. We will not increase the price of subscription on the paper, though our expense is largely increased, but we do appeal to the people of the Hilltop to send in, or give your subscription to us—50 cents a year or 25 cents for six months. Mrs. Clara Ditrick has taken charge of the subscription department and will be glad to call on anyone wishing to subscribe. Send in your items and subscriptions and help to make the Record an up-to-date newspaper. All items should be in our office by Wednesday noon of each week.

Marriage of Miss Hood

Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Hood, 58 North Burgess avenue, wish to announce the marriage of their daughter, Effie, to Sergeant Homer Frederick Schug, son of Rev. and Mrs. John Schug, of West Easton, Pa. The marriage was quietly solemnized at the parsonage of Rev. Richard E. Shields, Friday evening, May 9th.

The bride and groom will leave in the near future for Harrisburg, Pa., where they will make their future home.

MOTHER LOVE

We all have known a mother's love—but sometimes we forget
Th' tender care, th' thin gray hair, th' cheeks th' tears have wet—
Ah, there's no higher proof of grace—as high as yonder star—
To be th' lad, to be th' man, your mother thinks you are.

Th' world is wide, we drift away, we break those early ties;
The dear old mother's voice is faint—th' teardrops in her eyes—
"Be good and true me son," she said—her words come from afar—
What would you give to be th' man your mother thinks you are?

Th' sun may bring its blessin' down, th' clouds may hang above;
But sun nor cloud can never change a mother's constant love.
Oh, boy upon th' highway broad, your life to make or mar,
God help ye, lad, to be th' son your mother thinks ye are!

Memorial Baptist

Morning theme: "The Preacher and His Preaching on the Day of Pentecost."

Evening theme: "Lost Crowns." Two best choirs. Evening processional.

Memorial Baptist Church is being greatly blessed, not with great congregations, but deep increasing spiritual life and broadening conception of Christ and the real work of the church. Some say not during the past twenty years has it attempted greater things. The financial income will be doubled this year. Its missionary offering will be more than doubled. Last week it bought a new $400 piano. Discipline is also exercised. Six members were excluded last week for non-attendance at services and non-payment towards divine kingdom extension. No pay, no pray. Quality is preferred to quantity. Any person is privileged to grunt and grumble and gad about or live a churchless life, but not expect to retain very long membership in this church. Purity and power are resultants of one another. There is a demand for clean cut, consecrated Christians in all churches.

FOR SELF AND WIFE

By Inda Forrester

(Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The night clerk at the Barclay house was sleepy that night. It was about 11:50 when the boat train got in, and the bus met it on time, more from habit and precedent than any actual gain in patronage.

Few guests ever wandered to the island after the first spring rush up the river. A rambling tramp steamer from Seattle or Vancouver would sometimes bring a few belated passengers up, who, finding themselves marooned at Barclay's, with no chance of getting any farther up the river, would take the next steamer down.

But tonight there was an expected guest. Reservations had even been made for her, special privileges requested, and a new fire built in the little low-ceiled north room next the office. And on the old canvas-bound registry was written in a bold, splashy hand:

"Craig Fallon and wife."

Fallon had arrived on the river boat the day before, a big good-looking youngster who had spent the past two years up around Nome, and had finally taken a steady position, he told Jimmy, the clerk, with a trading company.

"Soon as I was sure I sent for the young lady I'm going to marry," he added confidentially. "Cute as way up here from Nebraska. Miss Kendall's her name. Who's the minister here?"

"I don't know where you'll find any, unless it was Sandwiches," Jimmy meditated in friendly fashion. "He's got a little shack over the south shore, if you can catch him to home.

"He's out with the Injuns most of the time teaching them. We call him Sandwiches 'cause he hands 'em out a feed before he tries to give you any dose of religion. He was the worst one up here when he first come out, and then he got a sudden light. That's the way he puts it. Says the Lord shone on him, and he's walked straight ever since. Wish a lot more were like him."

Fallon had not returned when the bus drew up before the hotel, and Chuck handed down the lone passenger, a girl in a brown cloak and veil. Chuck tried to see past the veil, but failed, and had to be content with a glimpse when she threw it back at the desk and asked rather tremulously if Mr. Craig Fallon was there.

"Well, miss, he is and he ain't," Jimmy told her, trying to break it to her gently. "He came and engaged the rooms and th n he went after a minister, and that's the scarcest article we have up here. Only one in the whole district, 'cep in' the priest down the river, but he's gone after Sandwiches. Guess you had better get to bed and make yourself easy. He'll be back."

That was the end of April Day after day passed by and the little bride-elect waited. Rosalie Kendall she gave her name. Anakeang Island got used to seeing her when she walked for hours along its lonely shores, gazing over at the far-off mainland or up the vast Yukon in silent questioning.

There was no mystery about her She told Jimmy's mother, the landlady all about herself. She had gone to school with Craig Fallon and they had been sweethearts before he had gone away. She had waited for him to send for her so they could be married.

"Oughter hev married him before he started out," advised Mrs. Barclay. sagely. "Never let them outer your sight. Ain't any stability in any of 'em, not a one. I had three husbands and I know what I'm talking about. Here you are, stranded dead op this forsaken dab of earth in the middle of nowhere and land knows where he is. You may stay here till you're as old as I be before they ever find his bones."

The words struck Rosalie oddly. There was the old fearlessness of pioneers in her blood, and she had a good part of the money that Craig had sent her for her outfit, right with her.

"Get me a guide and supplies," she said suddenly. "I'm going after him."

They found her Chakomo, a silent, rather dumpy Indian who made his way unerringly to the house of the minister, twenty-four miles up the river on the south shore. And arriving there, they found it buried under mud and debris. Chakomo shrugged his shoulders at sight of it.

"River rise too much," he said grimly. "Mebbe kill."

He struck at the pile of earth with his tow lilly, and Rosalie turned away with a shudder.

"We go on," she ordered.

"No go on. Go back," said Chakomo, starting for the boat. She tried to run after him to call out, but the utter hopeless weariness of the fruitless quest swept her, and she stood by the ruins, her hands pressed across her eyes. And here Sandwiches found her when he made his semiweekly trip after supplies cached in the shack.

He was like a scarecrow, she thought, as she watched him in the gloom, striding up from the landing, his head thrown back, his voice ringing out in an old gospel hymn. "Pull for the Shore, Sailor." And there in the mass of wreckage he found her, a slim, wide-eyed girl from "below," her hands clasped before her tightly as she waited to see whether he was friend or foe.

"I'll bet two cents to a collar button," said Sandwiches, "that you're Rosalie! There's a young man two miles from here that's been singing about you in his delirium for about three weeks. But I never thought the Lord would bring you down the river and set you right here for me to find."

Later that night, in the Indian tent where she found him, Rosalie was married to Craig Fallon, with a couple of Indians as witnesses; and Sandwiches, having finished his work, smiled down at them in the brilliant May moonlight that shone in through the lifted fly.

"He trailed me all over here trying to get me to tie this knot, and couldn't locate me," he explained. "I'd gone up the river to be with some Siwashes that had the measles, and when I got here he'd come down, too, and was out of his head. All he did was beg me to marry him to Rosalie right off the bat, and I'm mighty glad to do it, ma'am; that's all I can say."

They heard him singing all the way down to the water's edge where his boat was waiting and Craig's arms reached hungrily for his bride.

"You must have heard me calling for you," he whispered. "Know what Sandwiches kept telling me?

"'Many waters do not quench love.'

"'Love is stronger than death.'

"I reckon I've said that a million times, dear, and here you are."

The Clinging Vine

By S. B. HACKLEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"You were so late I had begun to be uneasy, sweetheart. You'll have to stay at the office an hour yet? Well, it can't be helped. Come as soon as you can, dear."

Commonplace words, but the voice, at once full and clear and gentle as the touch of a butterfly's wing, thrilled Buell Sargent, the inadvertent listener in the parlor opening off the reception hall of the Delbert house. The woman at the phone softly reascended the stairs. Buell sighed.

"Must have been talking to her husband. A woman with a voice like that's sure to be married!"

All the way from the cattle ranch in Idaho middle-aged Penelope Withrow, widowed by law of one husband, and on the eager lookout for another and more worthy one, had wondered why her twin brother, Buell, was so silent.

She would have laughed in unbelief had anyone told her Buell's silence arose from the fact that he also had matrimony in his head—that he had visions of a tender, gentle sort of creature who would pet him when he came in at evening—a woman who, unlike his strong-minded, independent sister, would look to him for guidance in everything.

"I've got just a few in my house," Mrs. Delbert had told him; "Carey Arden, a young law student, and a young married couple, the Retters; Mrs. Ibsen, a nurse, and Esther and Gayle Perrin, sisters, who cook their meals in my kitchen."

That evening when Mrs. Delbert introduced Buell to the Retters he rejoiced secretly. Mrs. Retter's voice was not the voice he had heard at the phone! And that night he dreamed some one was calling him "Buell, dear heart," in a voice that was velvet and gold, and the call of the mourning dove.

He Lay Quite Still.

Next morning, when he stepped on the piazza with the milk Penelope had sent him for, he heard the voice of his admiration again. The door opened and a young woman of twenty-three, tall and fair and beautiful, stepped out.

Buell almost dropped his bottles. She must be the Miss Perrin who was a stenographer uptown. A girl like that, with that voice! His breakfast tasted like enchanted food.

When he went down in the hall that evening he met her going out with a young Adonis. Buell looked in the hall mirror. The broad-shouldered man with the tanned skin and keen blue eyes he saw there looked unhappy.

Presently he turned to see on the stairs a little woman with a serious, delicately molded face, regarding him with wistful brown eyes. In feature she was not unlike the Hebe who had just gone out, but she was older by ten years.

He flushed a little when she turned and asked him if he had seen Mrs. Delbert. Buell felt a tingling in his veins. She spoke in the voice that for twenty-four hours had held him. He forgot the young blonde, and made futile efforts to prolong the conversation.

"Esther Perrin is very good," Mrs. Delbert remarked at the next morning's meal; "too good, I think sometimes. She embroiders and keeps herself and Gayle, her sister. She markets and cooks and does their laundry, and never asks Gayle to spend a penny. But Gayle is to be married in June and has to buy her trousseau, and Esther is bashful and hasn't admirers or marrying notions."

No admirers! Here was one, thought Buell. After that, when at dusk Esther slipped out of the kitchen to watch from the hall window seat for her sister, to her embarrassment she generally found the big Idaho man ensconced in the hall.

Gradually, however, she came to love to see him there, and to listen to his talk about the ranch, the horseback gallops, and auto trips and outdoor fun. "I'd love it!" she thought to herself. "But he—he thinks I'm the old fashioned clinging woman he likes, and I'm not that. Maybe I can pretend to be—. He—he is so—so dear—it surely isn't wrong to pretend a little!"

"She's afraid," Buell said to himself when evening after evening Esther refused to go out with him and his sister, pleading she had work. "She's afraid of Penelope, the timid little thing! Well, Penelope sha'n't scare me off from marrying her if she'll let me, and I'll protect her and think for her the rest of her life, the little 'clinging vine' of a woman!"

One evening when the young law student, Mrs. Delbert and Buell came in the hall after a play they'd attended together, they found Esther sitting there. The young lawyer spoke of the coming suffrage election. Buell didn't believe in votes for women; Carey did, and argued vehemently. Mrs. Delbert sided with Buell. Esther listened for a long time in silence. Then with kindling eyes and glowing cheeks she spoke. Her words came in a rush; swept Buell's arguments aside like straws. Only the sense that he was regarding her in angry disapproval checked her.

In the darkness of her room she flung herself down. "O Buell—Buell!" she breathed. "I can't get—I couldn't keep silence. I thought some time you'd tell me you loved me, but you won't now—you won't now!"

Buell spent a sleepless night. He couldn't understand how a woman like that could say, when he'd insisted that a woman was represented by her husband: "I would not vote as my husband if I did not think as he did!" He wanted his wife to think his thoughts. Would she love him if she didn't?

The spring dragged to mid-April. Buell lingered on more in the hall at evening and was as cross that Penelope told him she would be glad when May first came and they returned to Idaho. On the last evening of the stay of the brother and sister, Penelope and Mrs. Delbert, tired of waiting for Buell, who had gone uptown, set out for the theater together, asking Esther to tell him when he came in they'd left his ticket on the hall table.

At ten o'clock, when he had not come, Esther grew uneasy. A few blocks away on a dark street were some heaped-up piles of lumber, a fine hiding place for robbers, and Buell often came home that way. Taking a little flashlight, she went to Brille street. In a few minutes she was picking her way behind the lumber. Then in the glare of her light she saw his white face.

He lay quite still in the rubbish, his pockets turned inside out. She repressed the scream that rose to her lips, and knelt by him to lift his head in her lap. He opened his eyes.

"Somebody struck me," he murmured dazedly, "I thought I was done for."

Then he recognized her. "Esther—Esther! You ought not to be here!" He rose, swaying dizzily. She put her arm around him and helped him to the house.

A little later he lay on the couch in his sister's sitting room in a changed frame of mind. Esther had bathed and bandaged his head, and with the touch of her fingers he'd concluded "it does not matter whether a woman thinks entirely as you do or not, just so she loves you."

"You'll marry me and go home with me, Esther, won't you?" he asked her when she was through.

"I—why Buell!" the full voice trembled. "I can't be the clinging vine you like!"

He sat up, holding to her, and smiling whimsically, laid his head on her shoulder.

"I'm the 'clinging vine' tonight, Esther." Then he added humbly: "Please forgive this stubborn fool, sweetheart."

Esther didn't answer but she kissed him very tenderly, and he was satisfied.

"Congress Gaiters" Again.

There has been a very decided revival of the old "congress gaiter," with its elastic insert at the sides, which were very generally worn more than a century ago. The explanation rests in the fact that American shoes are now being extensively worn by the natives of Japan. The more rapid adoption of the Western styles of lace and button shoes is made difficult by the native custom that requires that shoes be removed before a person enters a home or inn. In some cases it is even required that the shoes be removed, or at least covered with cloth protectors, before entering shops, theaters and similar public buildings. This custom has led to the quite general adoption of the old-fashioned but convenient "congress" boot by those who wear occidental footwear during business hours.

"Le Doughnut."

The younger children of the French peasants have taken very kindly to corned beef and chewing gum of the Yanks, but cornmeal mush is beyond a Frenchman's conception. Perhaps, however, the chef-d'oeuvre of the American culinary art the masterpiece that has won its way into the heart of the entire population, is the doughnut. There is no possible translation for the name of this savory morsel, and so the native term has been adopted, and time and again I have heard youngsters who were hanging round a mess kitchen implore the good-natured cooks, "Monsieur, un doughnut, please! Monsieur Jimmy, pour quand les doughnuts!"—Frances Wilson Huard, in the Youth's Companion

Mr. L. C. DeBloom, 139 North Terrace street, will be a candidate for one of the four city councilmen to be voted on next fall.

Misses patent leather, white top Shoes, $3.50. Charles Hoax Shoe Stores

Memorial services will be held at the Confederate cemetery, Camp Chase, on Saturday, June 28, under auspices of Robert E. Lee Chapter No. 514. Speakers for the occasion will be announced later.

The Carlile & Kerr Co.'s store has been improved by the installation of a series of individual rooms on the second floor of their store, where various suites of furniture may be displayed to advantage. The rooms are finely finished and present a beautiful appearance and will be a great aid to purchasers by giving them the "room effect," which is so desirable.

We were watching a little two-year-old boy climb up a chair—as children are wont to do. The first two times he tried it he fell back kerbang and hit his head a resounding whack. But he never uttered a cry—just got up and went at it again. That boy will succeed in life unless some friend persists in "making a big fuss" over the little fellow every time he gets a bump.

From the time we are laid in our crib by the nurse to the time the undertaker reverently puts us in our last resting place we are bumped about in the world. Sometimes the bumps are spiritual; sometimes they are physical.

But, whichever they are, the important thing is—keep going. The man or woman who stops to shed tears will get shoved to the side of the road by those coming up who push on even when their eyes are blinded with tears.

And our reaction to bumps will depend a great deal upon the way we are taught to receive them as children.—Wisconsin State Journal.

SOCIAL EVENTS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week, and Others to Come

Sunset Club Members Entertained

Mrs. Austin Hutt, retiring president of the Sunset Literary Club, entertained the members and guests at her home, 2333 W. Broad, on Wednesday, May 14th. Dr. Ada Wright gave a very instructive lecture on "Our Medical Women in the Great War." Dr. Ida Wilson also told of her hospital war emergency work, after which delicious refreshments were served. There were forty-five present, with members.

The guests of honor were: Dr. Ada Wright, Dr. Ida Wilson, Miss Stella Wilson. Other guests were the Mesdames Howard Whitehead, Noah Binns, C. D. Cunningham, James Myers, G. W. Wyoner, J. Hamilton Cromwell, C. B. Mitchell, B. Forney Jones, G. H. Langley, Fred Postle, Mrs. Catherine, Mrs. Woodruff and Mrs. D. B. Ong prevailed at the tea table.

Pleasant Evening

The Christian Endeavorers and Pastor's Helpers' Class of Highland Avenue Friends Church surprised Margaret Curran with a handkerchief shower Tuesday evening at her home, 29 North Wheatland avenue, the occasion being her birthday. Those present were Mr. William Link, Roxa Wood, Scot Clark, Edith Clark, Daisy Walcutt, Earl Friend, Ollie Friend, Roy Skipper, Katherine Skipper, Mary Loffer, Ethel Clark, Laura Link, Warren McVey, Lillian Raver, Nettie Rienhart, Leota Link, Tillie Skipper, Mabel Wells, Elmer Wills, Viola Wills, William Hetzer, June Clark, Helena Stuart, Anna Work, Olive Tomlinson, Delia Haldy, Ruby Wells, Madge Skipper, Beulah Clark, Eugene Walcutt, Hazel Dixon, Minnie Veyhl, Verna Wulcutt, William Veyhl, Irene Skipper, Ralph Walcutt, Esther Skipper, Alfreda Veyhl, Martha Skipper, Ethel Marie Walcutt, Margaret Skipper, Maynard Friend, Guy Clark, Bobbie Friend.

Margaret Curran's father presented her a frame he made of 1,022 little pieces of wood, with a memorial for her brother, Lester Link, in it.

The members of the staff of Mr. J. G. Smoot, of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, were entertained at the home of Mr. E. L. Ware, on 25 South Ogden avenue, Wednesday evening, May 21. A very enjoyable time was had. Light refreshments were served. Those present were Mr. J. G. Smoot, J. H. Carmichael, C. E. Raether, Harry Van Auken, A. T. Case, J. W. Bower and C. H. Eversole.

Mr. Ware expects to move to Waverly, Ohio, in a few days, where he will probably take up farming in the fall.

A Reception to New Members

A reception will be given to the new members of the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church, next Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock. The Church has received thirty-seven new members since January 1st, and all members and friends are invited to this "Get-together Reception," at which an informal program of music and speeches will be given. Refreshments will be served. It is hoped that all will become better acquainted in this way. All members will wear a badge furnished by the committee to introduce themselves, and the new members will be given a distinctive mark to show who they are. The date is May 27th, the time, 8:00 P. M. Come out and bring your friends.

Miss Maybelle Butler and Mr. Bliss A. Brown, were united in marriage, Tuesday evening, May 20th, at the home of Rev. E. B. White, of the Burgess Ave. U. B. Church. The couple will be at home after June 1, at 192 S. Ogden Ave.

The Misses Grace and Ruth Curran are visiting in Jacksonville, Florida, with their brother and family and also at the Walkill Farms at Green Cove Springs.

The "Justamere Club" was entertained at the home of Kenneth Smoke, 34 South Warren avenue, on Tuesday evening. A very delightful time was had by all. Those present were: Misses Dorothy Postle, Mabel Dunn, Ruth Ellison and Mildred Negus, and Messrs. Kenneth Hill, Charles Chambers, James Russell, and Kenneth Smoke.

The American Legion Society

On May 8th, 9th and 10th, the organization of the American Legion was effected in St. Louis. This organization consists of all men who participated in the great war. At a meeting in Memorial Hall Friday night next the society will be organized in Franklin county. And it is intended to follow this a few weeks later with an organization on the Hilltop in which it is hoped all Hilltop boys eligible will respond and become members. For information see Mr. C. B. Turner, who can tell you all about the new organization.

Arrangements have been made to show some of the best Paramount-Artcraft pictures at the Empire Hilltop Theatre on Thursday and Friday of each week. Pictures featuring the following stars will be shown: Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, William Hart, Marguerite Clark, Wallace Reid and Charles Ray.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of B. of R. T. will have a bazaar on the second floor of the Southern Hotel, for the benefit of the Railroaders' Widows' Home.

Grocery Store Burglarized

Burglars got into the grocery store of Mr. John Houdashelt, 2744 Sullivant avenue, Tuesday night. They gained entrance by removing the glass in the front door, without breaking it. The only positive evidence of what they took was between fifty and a hundred pennies, two cakes and some cigars. They may have taken other articles, but nothing definite is known. There is no clue as to who the burglars were. Mr. Houdashelt thinks they intended replacing the glass in the door and thus cover up their job, but were frightened away.

Miss Margaret Wintringer of Chicago, a prominent prohibition and W. C. T. U. worker will speak in Broad Street Church of Christ on Monday evening, May 26 at 8:00 P. M. Miss Wintringer has been abroad as a newspaper correspondent during part of the war, her boat was chased by submarines. She was in seven Zeppelin raids and has a remarkable story to tell. She is on her way to Europe again and while there will report to fifty American periodicals.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Benham of Troy, Ohio, were the guests of Mrs. Benham's brother, Will Bradfute and family of 345 S. Ogden Ave., Monday and Tuesday of this week.

The Glad Girls' Club met at the home of Miss Mary Gaver, 455 S. Warren Ave., Thursday, May 15th. Light refreshments were served, and a pleasant time was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Geo. Minnear, 107 S. Wheatland Ave., has been shut in for a couple of weeks with rheumatism.

Mr. Wm. McK. Stalter, 40 N. Warren Ave., has returned from Italy, where he was with the A. E. F., a member of 332d Regiment, 83rd Division.

SKY-PILOTS ON THE HILL

A Series of Sketches of The Hilltop Ministers We Meet on Our Streets Daily

"Pigeon Roost Road" is a country thoroughfare down in Highland county—called so, because of the great flocks of wild pigeons that used to roost in the trees in the locality in the early days of Ohio.

During those panicky years of the early 90's, one traveling along this road might see a small red haired, barefooted boy, trudging along from the country school, stopping occasionally to club a squirrel in a tree or chase a chipmunk along the rail fence. Following him for about a mile, you'd see him turn in where stood a log cabin, about four miles southeast of Hillsboro. This cabin was the country home of a father, mother and eight children—five boys and three girls—all sturdy, husky country youngsters. The red haired boy being of an attractive nature, you became interested in him, and as you pass that way, often you keep a lookout for him. Sometimes you'll see him driving his father's ox team, and also hauling logs, other times doing various heavy work which gives one a thorough training in the "school of hard knocks."

A little later you'll find him in a "town" school in Hillsboro (the family having left the farm), then in a shop making his living at fourteen years of age, and at sixteen with his sleeves rolled up and a leather apron on, he is handling the sledge and pumping the bellows in a carriage blacksmith shop, where he stays for eleven years—during part of these years, playing first base on the ball team and quarterback at football.

At the age of nineteen he's converted in a revival meeting at the Hillsboro U. B. Church, becoming very active in the church work and serving as Sunday school superintendent for four years. In 1908 he's married to Miss Mary North of Hillsboro. In the fall of 1915 he moves to Westerville, entering the Martin Boehm Academy and afterward Otterbein University.

On April 1st, 1916, he is sent to Columbus, to the Hilltop to affect the establishment of a United Brethren Church. With two lots on Burgess avenue, near Sullivant, containing nothing but a mortgage, a church is started, and dedicated on August 27th of that year, with a church membership of eleven.

After three years of his pastorate, the church has grown to 135 members and are arranging for a more commodious building.

Rev. E. B. White, the subject of our first "Sky Pilot" stories, lives with his family, consisting of wife and four children, at 374 South Harris avenue. A man much loved by all who know him, and with the promise of a great and useful future.

May 19th, 1919.

I suffered with extreme weakness for ten days at a time, I could not even sweep my house. A feeling of distress about the heart made breathing difficult, and oh I was so tired. I would fall at times and become helpless. About four days after beginning the use of Ke-o-Ka I was better, I found my strength returning, and now I am sleeping and resting well. If you who suffer only knew the help that has come to me you could not say too much for Ke-o-Ka.

MRS. MARTHA BRANDON,
216 West Frambes Avenue.

Mrs. Prescott Gillilan, daughters Frances and Sarah Irene and son Howard, left on last Monday for an extended visit to Mrs. Gillilan's father's home in Fruitland, Maryland.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Vanmeter of S. Oakley Ave., spent Sunday with Rev. W. H. Mitchell, at Kirkersville, Ohio.

If you are suffering with rheumatism, use Ke-o-Ka. Call Hilltop 2866.

Mr. Crist Michels, corner Broad and Wheatland, has repaired and repainted his two houses, making them look like new. His friends say the appraisers will probably get busy now and increase his taxes.

The Women's Society of the Hill Crest Baptist Church, will meet in the home of Mrs. Fred Rogers, 73 S. Richardson avenue, Thursday evening, May 22d. (Tonight.)

It has been suggested that every home on the Hilltop ought to put out at least one flag on Memorial Day this year. If that could be done it would be a very appropriate observance of the day.

Doris Mary Stewart, Reader, pupil of Miss Anna Lee Johnson of the Wallace School and Conservatory, will give a series of readings at West High School, Tuesday evening, May 27th, at 8 o'clock. Auspices, The Young People of Chicago Avenue Church of Christ.

SECOND CHOICE

By R. Ray Baker

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Sadie Marshall came out of the cloakroom with a little skip in her walk and a lot of happiness in her eyes, and went behind the counter to prepare for the big rush of bargain hunters enticed by announcement of the "mammoth yellow tag sale at Miller Brothers' dry goods store."

"What's the excitement?" inquired Tillie Edmonds, offering a stick of gum which proved acceptable.

"Can't tell you," demurred Sadie, as she stripped the wrapping off the gum and placed the delicacy in her mouth. "It's a secret, but—gee! I'm happy!"

Tillie scowled. She felt like reclaiming the gum, but it was too late, Sadie was chewing it recklessly.

"Oh, all right; keep it to yourself," snorted Tillie, and proceeded to turn her back on the other girl and display unusual energy in dusting some bolts of muslin.

But Sadie couldn't keep it. "I'll tell you," she said, "if you promise not to tell anyone else;" and Tillie turned with the scowl still on her forehead, but her ears wide open. "I'm—I'm engaged to one of the finest young men in the world."

Tillie's face was radiant with smiles. She seized both of the other's hands and pumped them up and down for a full minute, while she showered congratulations on her.

"Good! Fine!" she beamed. "When you going to leave us, and what's the gentleman's name? Is it that one I saw you walking with in Central park, feeding the squirrels, a couple of weeks ago?"

The light of happiness in Sadie's eyes lost some of its brilliancy, although it was by no means dispelled.

"It's a Secret."

"No," she said, somewhat less enthusiastically, "he's not the one, although he asked me only last Sunday. That's Mr. Piper, but he's not the one I'm going to marry, although I have to confess I like him an awful lot. My future husband's name is Jasper Jewels and he's just loads of money and drives a motorcar and—everything."

Tillie sniffed.

"I'm kinda sorry," she said. "I liked that Mr. Piper real well, what little I saw of him, and I get suspicious of these fellows who have lots of money. How do you know he's rich and owns an automobile?"

"Well, I've ridden in the car with him," declared Sadie, "and as for his being rich—why, he told me so himself, and you ought to see the clothes he wears! He's spick and span, always, I tell you. Mr. Piper, as I said, is nice and has been very good to me, and if it hadn't been that Mr. Jewels bobbed up—"

Then the bargain hunters began to arrive, and there was no time to talk or think matrimony for the rest of the day. About the time the five o'clock whistles were blowing, a blonde young man, garbed in a blue and white striped suit of a cut and shade that bordered on the radical, entered the white goods department, and Sadie introduced him as her "intended." He had an easy grace of manner and a winning smile that quite captivated the saleagirls—all except Tillie, who simply said: "How'y'do? Glad to know you," and continued shoving bolts of cloth back on the shelves.

Sadie clung to his arm as they left the store and entered a big green touring car that stood at the curb. Those few saleagirls who were able to scramble to the window did so and stood agape as the machine whirled away.

After having dinner at a restaurant Sadie and Mr. Jewels took a ride in Brooklyn before going to the theater. While on the ride, Sadie was presented with a ring containing a dazzling white stone. Then, just in time to see the beginning of the performance, they drove up to the theater.

The play was a good one. It had enjoyed a long run in the theater and still was drawing big houses. Its Sadie's enjoyment of it was considerably interfered with by her conscience which was awakened by the presence of a young man seated across the aisle, three rows down. The young man had dark-brown hair and wore rather plain, but neat clothes. Evidently he was in the company of two others, who sat on either side of him, for he could be seen conversing with them frequently.

"Mr. Piper," mused Sadie. "How in the world can he afford to come to this show? He works somewhere in a factory in Brooklyn. I forget just where he said."

Her conscience was bothering her because of the treatment she was according her own heart. She knew that she really cared more for Mr. Piper than for her present escort, and she also realized that it was the lure of wealth that had caused her to accept Jewels' offer of marriage.

Her acquaintance with Mr. Piper dated six months back, to one day in late summer, when she was canoeing with two girl chums on Otsego lake. None of the girls knew anything about the management of a canoe, and they nearly paid dearly for their rash adventure on the water. They were about half a mile from shore when the canoe overturned, and if it had not been for Robert Piper, who, with two other young men, paddled up at the right moment, it is unlikely that any of the girls would have escaped with her life. Robert at once began being attentive to Sadie and the affair had become quite serious when she met Jasper Jewels one night at a dance.

Just how the alarm started was never ascertained, but as the curtain descended at the close of the second act the cry of "fire" spread through the audience. It was taken up from the orchestra seats and the boxes to the balconies and galleries and, without stopping to learn the extent of the danger, or if any existed, the greater part of the audience went into a panic, and those who did try to maintain their composure were carried off their feet by the frenzied mob which swept in the fury of terror toward the exits.

Startled like the rest, but so dazed that she scarcely knew which way to turn, Sadie sprang to her feet, reaching out an arm to clutch her male escort. But he had fled up the aisle. Helpless, the girl stood there, buffeted back and forth, until a strong arm grasped her and she felt herself lifted and carried swiftly away, while cries of terror and pain were raised repeatedly on every hand.

It seemed like hours, but it was only a moment later that she realized she was again on her feet and was surprised to see that she was standing on the stage, which was free of the panic-stricken crowd. Beside her stood Robert Piper.

"Come, let's get out of here," faltered Susie. "We'll be burned up."

Piper laughed.

"I guess not. There isn't any fire. It's a false alarm. If the orchestra had only been on the job it could have stopped the panic; it's been done that way many a time."

The next day Miller Brothers' sale continued. After the mad nightmare at the theater, however, the battle for bargains seemed to Sadie like a very calm and sedate affair. Nevertheless she was kept so busy that she had no time for words with Tillie until late in the afternoon.

"Well, Mr. Jewels coming after you again this evening?" Tillie inquired during a lull, as she leaned up against the wall, uttered a sigh of relief and placed a stick of gum in her mouth.

Sadie's lip curled.

"No," she retorted; "but Mr. Piper is. I decided to marry him after all, and let Mr. Jewels go, even if he is rich and owns a motorcar. I'll take my chances on the poor factory hand. See, here's the ring Jasper gave me last night. I'm going to send it back."

Tillie took the ring and held it up to the light. An expression of scorn crossed her face as she placed her arms akimbo and stopped chewing gum long enough to say:

"Some jewel, Sadie, some jewel. Must have cost all of a quarter. Pure glass and brass, that's what it is. So you're going to take a chance on the poor one, are you? Why, you poor deluded kid, I've been investigating things since I met your used-to fiance last night, and I've found some interesting facts; and one is that your second choice is the best you could have made. I thought that Jasper person looked kinda suspicious, and I was right. Do you know who he chauffeurs for? Well, I'll tell you. The fellow that owns the big green machine is Robert Piper, who also owns a factory over in Brooklyn; and he's all to the good, that fellow is."

GRADUATION DAY IS GIFT DAY

Yes, it is the greatest day in the life of the boy or the girl. They stand at the threshold of life, ready to assume its's greater responsibilities. Could there be a more opportune time for a gift in commemoration of this event?

Mothers and Fathers should do it as a duty. For around the gift is woven so much of unforgettable romance. Friends will do well to give Graduation Day presents—it is a sure token of deepest regard.

Rings, of course, make the best gifts for this occasion. And nowadays, rings come in so many wonderful designs and patterns that there is a ring for every type of person and for every occasion. Or, perhaps, it is a watch—or a piece of handsome jewelry. If it be a ring then you must surely see our line of W. W. W. Gem Set rings. We recommend them because they are fully guaranteed—which is not always true of gem set rings. If a stone is lost, the manufacturer replaces it with another. That's how sure they are of the setting. It is a thing to remember.

Which One Would You Marry?

By LILLIAN HALL CROWLEY

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Jane, dear, I wish you wouldn't spend so much time with Jim Higgins. He's a rattle-headed young fellow and not at all the steady-going man that Walter Brewer is."

"There's nothing wrong with Jim, mother; he hasn't settled down, that's all."

"Well, it's high time he did settle down. My opinion is that he never will be serious. When he was a little boy he played truant from school—going fishing and wandering around in the woods when he ought to be studying. Remember the time when he and the Kettering boy almost killed Bud Martin's cow?"

"Yes, mother, but don't you understand? The boys were playing that a wild animal was pursuing them in the dense forest and Jim meant to shoot over the cow's head. It was only buckshot anyway, and although the cow was terribly frightened, she only suffered a skinned knee. Bud exaggerated that story."

"That's no excuse! You never heard of Walter Brewer doing things like that. He always went back and forth to school as good as could be, never fighting or getting into mischief. His mother never had a bit of trouble with him and he is just as good a man as he was a boy."

"People oughtn't to keep on remembering a boy's pranks," said Jane.

"I wish, dear, you'd take Walter instead of Jim."

"Don't worry, mother. I'm not taking either of them just now. I like them both, but I'm not thinking of marrying. Anything you want at the store?" asked Jane putting on her hat.

"Nothing, dear." The mother sighed as her gaze followed her beautiful young daughter as she went out the door.

Mrs. Seymour had lost her husband ten years before, when Jane was eleven years old. She had had to be both father and mother to her only child and she felt the weight of her responsibility.

What if her daughter should marry the wrong man? How could she guide her so as to avoid heartache for the present as well as the future? She liked Jim Higgins well enough if he only would not come to see Jane so often. He was so light-hearted and care-free that Mrs. Seymour feared he was thoughtless and selfish. He was never serious.

Jane was easily the prettiest and sweetest girl in town, and as such had her choice of Randolph's eligibles, but she was in the full enjoyment of her youth and freedom and had not looked very far into the future.

As she walked gracefully and vigorously down the street many an eye rested on her with pleasure and admiration.

When she neared the business part of Main street she noticed a group of excited men in front of the office of the Weekly Star. She hurried on to discover the cause of the excitement. In the window was hung the president's declaration of war against Germany.

Jane was thrilled to the very soul. Her country at war! Here was work for her to do—something better than bothering about beaux. "They will want nurses for the Red Cross," she thought. "I must find out at once when I can begin work."

Every one she met was full of the spirit of the war. The president was right. Every man and woman must uphold him by helping in every possible way.

When she arrived home, expecting her mother to oppose her plan of work, she was overjoyed to find her beloved parent filled with the same spirit of patriotism.

"You'll just have to help, Jane, dear; it's in the blood. Both of your grandfathers fought in the Civil war and your father was in the Spanish war. All the women of our family helped, too."

Several days went by with Jane making plans for her work of nursing, while her mother was organizing the first local Red Cross workroom. Everything else was subordinated in every way to their work. Mrs. Seymour spent the largest part of the day in the workroom, while Jane ran errands and routed out the workers.

Jane had been very busy with her plans—then one evening Walter Brewer called. Mrs. Seymour, after greeting him most graciously, left the two young people together while she went on an errand.

"Jane," said Walter, when they were seated in the cosy living room, "I've been waiting to ask you something for a long time, but I hesitated until I got another promotion from the firm. I have been with them three years, and this is my third promotion and I see my way clearly now to rapid advancement. I love you, Jane, and want you to marry me."

"But—but—aren't you going to enlist, Walter?"

"No, I'm not, Jane. I shall let the fire-eaters enlist if they want to. You see I would jeopardize my place with the firm. The chances are that they would not keep my job for me."

"But our country?" gasped Jane.

"I figure it this way," Walter went on, a little surprised at Jane's attitude: "Ours is a meat packing business, and we need lots of tinned stuff for our army. I can do just as much for my country working hard in the office as I can by enlisting. There's a lot to be done here as well as in France."

"I see," said Jane; "and if you stay here while the other boys are gone you may have a better chance of advancement."

"That's it," eagerly replied Walter. "I knew you'd see it the way I do. Now will you marry me, Jane?"

"No, Walter. I see it all very plainly, and my answer is that I can never marry a slacker." Walter started. "Yes, a slacker," said Jane, the bright color hot in her cheeks, "for you are only fooling yourself about helping your country in the packing plant. Men over age can take your place—or married men with families to support. I'm disappointed, Walter. I expected more of you."

She marched out of the room and Walter stunned by the unexpected blow, dazedly left the house. The happy evening he had looked forward to had turned out the wrong way for him.

Next day, as Jane was about to leave the house to join her mother at the Red Cross rooms, there came a ring at the door bell.

She opened the door. There stood Jim Higgins with a broad smile on his handsome face and a merry twinkle in his blue eyes.

"May I come in a minute?" he asked.

Surprised, Jane opened the door wider, but did not speak. Why was Jim calling during business hours?

Jim closed the door. Then taking Jane's unresisting hands in his and looking down into her soft brown eyes, he said:

"Jane, dear, I couldn't go away without telling you that I'll have something to ask you when I come back—if I come back—but it isn't fair to say it now. You won't forget, me, dear?"

"Where are you going, Jim?"

"Why, I've enlisted, of course, just as soon as I knew we were in the war."

"Oh, Jim, you've enlisted? You've enlisted! Oh, how proud I am of you—oh, Jim—and Jimmie don't wait to say what you have to say—say it now, Jim, for I am going over, too."

"Jane, my darling."

"Jim, my big, splendid soldier!"

Kindly Switzerland.

The treasures of human kindness which Switzerland has showered on prisoners of war during the last four years has placed Europe more than ever in her debt. The king of England has not been slow to express to the president of the Swiss confederation his deep appreciation and gratitude for what she has done, an acknowledgment of benefits received which will be pleasing to the Swiss people in England. One of them, who remembered 1871, remarked that it would have been strange if Switzerland had not shown herself kind as before; "for," she said, "I remember as a child my parents taking every bit of bread in the house to give to the poor, famished soldiers of Bourbaki's army. We were only a small community, but nobody dreamed of keeping anything in their home which could relieve those soldiers."—Christian Science Monitor.

Honor to English Woman.

Florence Nightingale was the first woman to carry mercy to battlefields. After her work in the Crimean war, Queen Victoria of England presented her with a cross of red enamel; it lay in a box on a pillow of white satin—whence comes the emblem of the Red Cross. Henri Dumant, the Swiss physician, to whom the Red Cross society owes its inception, has said: "Though I am known as the founder of the Red Cross and the originator of the convention of Geneva, it is to an English woman that all the honor of that convention is due. What inspired me was the work of Miss Nightingale in the Crimea."

Make the Most of Yourself.

It pays to make the most of yourself, to develop your powers, to do the best work of which your are capable. Whether it increases your earning capacity or not, it enlarges your power of enjoyment, widens your influence gives your spiritual nature a wider expansion, and transforms the world before your eyes. Making the best of yourself is one of the things that always pay.—Girl's Companion.

We Invite Attention

to our splendid display of "SIMMONS" brass and iron Beds. Right now, when almost every Columbus home is preparing to accommodate Centenary visitors, and an appeal is being made for 8,000 more rooms, if you have an extra bed room that needs furnishing, it will pay you to buy that extra bed you have wanted for a long time. The Centenary has established a price of $1.00 to $1.50 per night for rooms, and it lasts three weeks. This extra money will almost furnish the extra room if so applied.

This Week

we offer special prices and special terms of credit to encourage the purchase of Beds and Bed Room Furniture before the final rush comes. Stocks are now full, and it will be impossible for anyone to get more from the factories before the Centenary, excepting that which is now in transit; and even that may be delayed. Come and investigate, whether you are ready to buy or not.

MEMORIAL SERVICES

Will be Held at St. Aloysius Church, on Friday for Soldiers and Sailors--- Other Meetings

Memorial Services will be held at St. Aloysius Church, Friday morning at 8:30, for the soldiers and sailors who sacrificed their lives for humanity. The services will consist of a Solemn High Requiem. Soldiers from the United States Barracks will attend and all returned soldiers and sailors are asked to be present in uniform. A special invitation is extended to the Hilltop boys.

St. Aloysius' Service Flag has eighty stars—five gold stars—and these five boys are buried in France:

James L. Fisher, Marine. Killed in action at Chateau Thierry.

Sergeant Curtis G. Bender, Rainbow Division. Killed in action.

Jerry Sullivan, Co. F, 333 Inf., 84 Division. Died of pneumonia.

Corp. Wm. Scully, 308 Trench Mortar Battery. Killed in action.

Thos. A. Scully, killed in action

There will be a field day and picnic for Hilltop women on Wednesday, June 14th, at Glenwood Park. All women are invited to come and bring your baskets and spend the afternoon and evening. There will be running races, baseball games, throwing games and jumping. Also there will be a field day for the Elementary School June 14th. Prizes will be awarded to winners. Pennant to school getting highest number of points. There will be a twilight base ball league for girls on Mondays and Wednesdays at 6:30.

Municipal Service on the Hilltop

The installation of service on the Hilltop from the municipal electrical plant is being rapidly pushed forward. Already a large number of business places and houses are in service and others being made so as fast as possible.

The service is now being rendered to the district extending along Broad street from Whitethorne avenue to Hague for about a square on either side of that street. A construction gang of twelve or fifteen workers are being kept busy on the work.

Improvements at Glenwood

Many improvements are being made on the property of Glenwood Methodist Episcopal Church. The interior of the church is being handsomely decorated and the woodwork refinished. The church lawn has been laid off by a landscape gardener and is being beautified with shrubbery and flowers. The parsonage has been treated to a new coat of paint. These improvements are adding greatly to the attractiveness of premises, while the interior decorations are beautiful, indeed. This church has been leading in the Methodist Centenary movement and is one of the churches to go over the top in raising its quota of the Centenary fund. Before a congregation Sunday evening that completely filled the church, including the galleries, Dr. Wykoff, pastor of the church, announced that $32,918 had been subscribed to date with subscriptions still coming in. A great service is planned for next Sunday morning which will be in the nature of a memorial, recognition and welcome service for the soldier boys whose names were on the service flag of the church. The home guards are also especially invited and all are requested to come in uniform and sit in a body. The veterans of the Civil and Spanish-American wars are also invited and other patriotic orders. The Spanish-American wars are also invited and other patriotic orders. The church, handsomely decorated, will be thrown open again on this occasion. The parents and friends of the boys are cordially invited to this service.

The Ladies Aid Society will hold a lawn fete Thursday night, June 5th, with ice cream and cake on sale. The public is cordially invited.

George Welsh in the roaring comedy-drama, "I'll Say So," at the Empire Hilltop Theater, Saturday.

Mrs. Govro, from Miami, Fla., arrived last week at the home of her mother, Mrs. Rowlands, 95 South Terrace, to join her husband, Capt. Ned Govro, who has recently come from France after two years' service there. Capt. and Mrs. Govro will make their home with her mother until the new house he is building on Fourth street near Eleventh avenue, is completed.

The Columbus District Epworth League's Convention will be held at Neil Ave. church Friday, June 6th, beginning at 3 p. m. Afternoon session will be taken up with the business part. Banquet and election of District officers at 6:30, for which reservations must be made by Sunday, June 1st.

Saturday, picnic at Epworth Fresh Air Camp, leaving North Columbus at two o'clock. Come on, Glenwood let's be sure and go.

Special Meeting This Evening

A special meeting of the Hilltop Improvement Association has been called by President Millikin for Thursday evening, May 29 at 7:30. The meeting which will be held in Glenwood Shelter House, will be addressed by D. E. Weigle of the American City Bureau, New York City, on the subject, "The City of Tomorrow." Mr. Weigle has been engaged in civic advancement work in a number of American cities and is well qualified to discuss the problems of community development. He is at present at work in Columbus in the Chamber of Commerce Expansion Campaign.

The members of the Association will also consider recommendations concerning the Hilltop to be included in the prospectus being prepared for the Expansion Campaign.

William Wilson, 27, of 175 S. Oakley Ave., suffering from a stab wound in the back, told the police he was attacked by his father, Henry Wilson, 69, when they quarreled over a photograph.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Doughman of 378 S. Warren avenue entertained as their guests Saturday evening: Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Rollins and daughter, Madaline, Mr. Hugh Rollins, Mr. and Mrs. Horton Williams and son, Billie, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kay. A delicious lunch was served and a good time enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Patterson spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Doughman of 378 South Warren Ave.

The Brownie Band will be given by request at West Broad Street School on Friday, June 6th, at 3:30 and 8:00 p. m.

SKY-PILOTS ON THE HILL

A Series of Sketches of The Hilltop Ministers We Meet on Our Streets Daily

In the year 1886, when the good old U. S. was enjoying peace, during President Cleveland's first term there took place in the little town of Bowmanville, Ontario, Canada, an event which, had it been permitted to continue, might have tied up the industrial affairs of that town, and probably startled the civilized world.

In said town, at the large store of Couch, Johnston & Crydeman, two parties might have been seen sometimes inside the store slyly talking and conspiring in a suspicious way, at other times maybe surveying the place from the outside, foretelling that there was "something doing." At last in an unexpected moment, while he is alone, the two suddenly tackled the manager of the concern. In a surprised attitude he asks their mission, which is responded to by "We're on a strike." "A strike for what?" he asks. "We've got-a-have five cents more a day," answered the "spokesman" of the bunch. With forebodings of a business "tie-up" and a discomforted public, their grievance was taken up and after due consideration, and taking a chance at facing bankruptcy the raise was granted, and the two 15-year-old boys—Fred Couch and J. Norman Johnston—who delivered parcels, etc., on Saturday at 25 cents a day, were now to receive 30 cents.

The latter named boy is the subject of our story today, whom our good friends of the Hilltop Church of Christ have chosen to pilot their little gospel barque along the road to glory.

After spending his boyhood school days in Bowmanville, Canada, he came to Columbus in 1890 and went to work in the woodworking shop of the old Columbus Buggy Company at $2 a week. After spending three years at the bodymaking trade, he entered Hiram College, near Cleveland; in 1893. He graduated from there in 1899. Was married in 1896 to Miss Mabel Warnock of Elyria, Ohio, a school teacher, and also a graduate of Oberlin College.

On entering his ministry, he became pastor of the Church of Christ at East Palestine, Ohio, and after that at Coshocton, where a new brick church was erected during his pastorate. Later he served at Fostoria and Norwalk. In July, 1917, he became pastor of the Hilltop Church of Christ, which had at that time 114 members. The congregation, which now meets in the I. O. O. F. hall at 2367½ West Broad street, has purchased two lots on South Burgess, corner of Olive, and are planning to build a church home.

Rev. and Mrs. Johnston, with their four daughters, live at 90 Eldon avenue.

During the war Rev. Mr. Johnston did his "bit" by donning overalls and helping build service trucks in the factory of his brother—Armstrong & Johnston, auto manufacturers; this in connection with his pastoral duties.

Reception

A large crowd attended the reception for new members held at the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church Tuesday evening of this week. Orchestra music was furnished. The musical program included selections by the Men's Quartette and the choir and the following rendered solos: Mrs. Daniel Jerman, Mrs. C. C. Cook, and Mr. Harry Biddle. New members were each given a beautiful white carnation to designate them. All the members were given name tags. The refreshments, consisting of ice cream, cake and coffee, were served by the Ladies Aid Society of the Church. Brief speeches were made by representatives from each church organization while the pastor told and interpreted his dreams of "The Future of Our Church." Mr. W. H. Deems was chairman of the committee. Responses to the welcome to new members were made by Mr. Albert Jordan, Mr. C. J. John and Mr. A. L. Wagner. Large bouquets of spring flowers beautified both church and auditorium and basement. The church has received thirty-eight new members since January first.

Charles Ray will be featured tonight and Friday at the Empire Hilltop Theater in "The Claws of the Hun."

Ainus a Primitive Race.

Despite the fact that their village is on the banks of a river and only a few miles from the sea, the Ainus do not love the water. A native sometimes goes from early childhood to the grave without a bath, unless he accidentally falls into the river. Their faith is of the vaguest kind, their god a wooden stick or a bear cub, which is eaten as well as adored. They have no written language, no alphabet, no numbers above a thousand. When the Ainus finally vanish from the Yezo there will be no record of their one-time rule, except a few crumbling huts on the banks of the Sara.

A large covered spring wagon drawn by two horses passed along Broad street this week, with a sign on the wagon top reading "Oklahoma to Coshocton." It contained the father, mother and about three children, also a dog and reminded one of the old "overland days" that "used to be." We remember on one occasion a wagon load of emigrants wending its way westward bore the inscription "Kansas or bust." Some time after it was said the outfit was seen returning with the inscription: "Busted by Gosh."

I suffered with extreme weakness for ten days at a time, I could not even sweep my house. A feeling of distress about the heart made breathing difficult, and oh I was so tired. I would fall at times and become helpless. About four days after beginning the use of Ke-o-Ka I was better, I found my strength returning, and now I am sleeping and resting well. If you who suffer only knew the help that has come to me you could not say too much for Ke-o-Ka.

IS THIS YOU?

A plague on your old-fashioned ways
And preaching doctrines stern;
We come to church to be amused,
And do not want to learn.
From thoughts of judgment or of sin
We find our spirits shrinking;
We want to rest on Sabbath days,
And not be set a-thinking.
To hear the music people come,
And not to praise and pray;
Let there be nothing to offend
And drive nice folks away.
All preaching for our ages should be Made brief and bright and breezy;
That sermon surely is the best
That makes religion easy.

—London Freeman.

GRADUATION DAY
IS GIFT DAY

Yes, it is the greatest day in the life of the boy or the girl. They stand at the threshold of life, ready to assume its greater responsibilities. Could there be a more opportune time for a gift in commemoration of this event?

Mothers and Fathers should do it as a duty. For around the gift is woven so much of unforgettable romance. Friends will do well to give Graduation Day presents—it is a sure token of deepest regard.

Rings, of course, make the best gifts for this occasion. And nowadays, rings come in so many wonderful designs and patterns that there is a ring for every type of person and for every occasion. Or, perhaps, it is a watch—or a piece of handsome jewelry. If it be a ring then you must surely see our line of W. W. W. Gem Set rings. We recommend them because they are fully guaranteed—which is not always true of gem set rings. If a stone is lost, the manufacturer replaces it with another. That's how sure they are of the setting. It is a thing to remember.

NOT REALLY GIRL'S FAULT

Elderly Lady Was a Little Extreme in Condemning the Enunciation of Her Granddaughter.

In the subway they sat—a young girl of fourteen or fifteen and a grandmother of the "children should be seen and not heard" school. There are few such nowadays. Your up-to-the-minute granny hopes so much to be mistaken for one of her grandchildren that she outdoes them in good fellowship and slang. But this was a woman who in bearing, looks and speech might have been in a stage coach instead of the subway. The young girl was talking and the grandmother, with dignity and assurance, was interrupting.

At every other word it was: "More distinctly, dear; I can scarcely hear what you say." And, "Enunciate more clearly, please. I missed that word altogether. I'm afraid you'll have to take lessons in distinct utterance." And, "That time I heard nothing at all. Do you know I think enunciation is the most important thing that a person, young or old, can possess? And it can be cultivated. Oh dear me, yes. You never have any difficulty in hearing me speak, do you?" "No, grandmother," replied the young girl quietly and with the air of not daring to differ with that grandmother of hers had it been a case of black being white.

But the young girl's face reflected what was on most of the passengers' faces—the knowledge that not her own enunciation was at fault but her grandmother's hearing. She wasn't different, after all, from the up-to-the-minute grandmother in wanting to retain her youth—only she showed it differently.—New York Post.

That Dreadful Man in Russia.

A Russian woman, who has spent several years teaching and lecturing in the schools and universities of our country tells the following story in remarking on how little some Americans know concerning Russia and her history:

"I was in a large city of the Southwest recently. A reception was given in my honor and I was being received by the society people of the town.

"'And oh, madam,' a carefully dressed woman trilled to me, after being introduced, 'I wonder if you have had the opportunity to meet personally in Russia that dreadful, dreadful man, Mr. Bolsheviki?'"

The Hoodlum

By IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

They named him the Hoodlum when he first came to Blue Meadow farm, a long-legged, knock-kneed, wild-eyed colt, with nothing but a pedigree to make people admire him.

"I can't take him over with me," Dacre wrote back, "and he's all gold, believe me, Aunt Sally. Just keep him till I get back, and don't let anybody but me break him. It won't be long."

That had been nearly a year ago, and still the Hoodlum ranged freely without a saddle on his back or a bit between his teeth. It seemed as if he had become almost a symbol, to Miss Sally, of Dacre's safe return home. Dacre had been her favorite since his mother had died in his babyhood, and had given him into her care when she was only twenty. He had grown up at the farm, and it had brought all of the horror of war close to her heart when she had heard that he had gone into the aero service.

But the Hoodlum took life easily. He was a handsome colt, rich bay in tone, with darker mane and tail, and white feet. He would come at Miss Sally's call, clear from the river meadows where he loved to graze, to the lane bars for some sugar or an apple from her hand. And when she drove along the road toward town, the colt would race, with mane flying, trying to catch her before the carriage turned the bend in the road, to whinny anxiously after her departing figure.

Then Betty had come unexpectedly and the Hoodlum took second place in interest. Betty was seventeen and adventurous.

"I only hope she won't prove a thorn in your flesh," Mrs. Sewall had written. "She seems very cheerful and willing, and I suppose you can put her to some use. It's splendid of you to keep her for me until Will and I get back, for we never could have taken her clear to the islands with us."

They were Miss Sally's second cousins, and Betty's father had recently been appointed on a commission to the Philippines, which meant Betty's being a guest at Blue Meadows, for at least three months. She was slim and big-eyed, with freckles and smooth braids of brown hair wound trimly about her head.

"Just forget I'm here at all, Cousin Sally, and I'll promise not to get into one bit of mischief," she declared, the first day of her arrival. Then, seeing a photograph on the table in an oval, flat silver frame, she asked interestedly, "Any one I know or should know?"

"That's Dacre, your third cousin, Dacre Kincaid."

Betty sighed and smiled approvingly.

"He's a darling in that uniform, isn't he? He'll be home before long, then, won't he; almost any day?"

"We hope so. I haven't heard in months."

Betty took her cue from the note of reserve in Miss Sally's tone and asked no further questions, but learned all she wished to know about Dacre, from his babyhood up, from old Aunt Selah, his nurse. Perhaps Hoodlum told her something also.

At any rate, they became extremely well acquainted after Jerry, the stable boy, gave her Hoodlum's story. Every day found her on her way down the mulberry lane to the river meadows, with plenty of "coaxers," as she called them, to tempt the colt, and one day she carried an old saddle of Dacre's on her shoulder, and a bridle.

It was early in the spring when Dacre returned. He had been wounded and detained for months at a base hospital. Miss Sally was in a perfect flurry of excitement after the telegram arrived saying he had left New York and was on his way South, but Betty happened to be staying over the week-end at Juniper Hall, nearby, with two girl friends, and missed the news.

It was quiet and natural appearing around home when she came back. Miss Sally had gone to the station to meet her hero and excepting for the big service flag with its one star in the upper bay window there was no special sign of preparations. Betty went to her room, whistling happily, and changed her pretty tan silk gown for one of brown corduroy. On her way out she paused to look at the face in the oval silver frame, and a curious look came in her brown eyes, a look almost of tenderness.

"You know we've grown to be almost acquainted, haven't we, boy?" she asked it. "I approve of you and of everything I've heard about you. You're the nearest to a hero I've ever had, only you don't know it. I've told a friend of yours all about it, though, and he understands perfectly. Wonder if you ever will."

She went down the wide center hall buoyantly, out through the garden and down the lane toward the lower meadows just as Miss Sally's well-known carriage started homeward. Dacre leaned back on the old plum broadcloth cushions luxuriously, and his eye sought every landmark and beloved spot as they neared home.

Suddenly he saw a horse approaching at a gallop, with a girl in brown riding cross-saddle, a girl with brown braids bound closely around her head under her cap. She leaned forward and waved as she drew near.

"Hello, Cousin Dacre. Welcome home from Hoodlum and me."

It did not occur to him then, not with the first surprise of her face dawning on him and her voice in his ears, just what lay under her words, but two weeks later, as he waited for her at the foot of the wide veranda steps with Hoodlum and Marigold, his own new riding mare, Aunt Selah came by and unburdened her mind.

"I done tole her ovah and ovah she ain't got no right ter ride dat colt, and she say she gwine ter ride it all she like. She broke him in all by herself, Marse Dacre, and dat colt he jes' feed outer her han' like a lam' when she call him. You have ter tell her jes' what's what or she gwine ter do anything she feels like 'round his place."

Dacre laughed, watching Betty's figure as she stepped through the long window of the library that opened on the veranda.

"I think Hoodlum knew what he was about, Auntie Selah," he said. "I think he recognized his future mistress and I bow to h's judgment."

Mr. H. L. Gain, 62 N. Burgess avenue, returned from a business trip to New York, Monday, accompanied by his daughters, Miss Zelma and Mrs. Losha Gain Grove, who have been in the east for some time.

Two Maximilians.

Maximilian, the brother of Franz Joseph, was the most famous Maximilian. At the instance of Napoleon III he was offered the crown of Mexico. He accepted the offer and landed at Vera Cruz on May 28, 1864. Another Maximilian was Robespierre, the most ingnified and famous of the republican leaders of the French Revolution. Before the Revolution Robespierre had gained distinction as an advocate, but he had to struggle with poverty. At the beginning of the Revolution he was one of the members of the Jacobean club which was composed of blood-thirsty revolutionists.

Social Readjustments.

A young man called on his father in the city jail Sunday evening, the Wichita Eagle says, on a very important mission. When he faced his father with only the iron bars between them he said, "Dad, gimme them shoes, I got a date." The father, who had been arrested for drunkenness, removed his shoes and handed them through to the boy, who in turn removed his work shoes and gave them to the prisoner. The father evidently had been wearing the boy's Sunday shoes when he started out on his spree.—Kansas City Star.

Mr. Daniel Weygandt of Grove City, while driving his machine north on Oakley avenue last Monday afternoon, collided with an eastbound machine at the corner of Broad street. No one was injured, but Mr. Weygandt's machine was damaged considerably.

Elm Hall Camp N. 226, W. O. W., was entertained by the degree team and officers of Arbor Vita Camp on Tuesday evening of last week. Two candidates were instructed in the mysteries of the W. O. W., after which a social time and refreshments were indulged in.

Mrs. Anna Miller, who has been living at 61 South Oakley, will leave Thursday, May 29, in company with her son, Vance, for Canton, Ohio, where they expect to make their home.

The Baptist Northern and Baptist Southern Conventions have with great enthusiasm recommended that the Baptist Denomination during the coming five years raise one hundred and sixty millions of dollars for missionary work round the world. This exceeds the amounts of any other denomination by many millions. The Northern Baptist raised six millions during the past four months. Going some, sure enough.

AUTOMOBILES

And Other Vehicles — Their Great Numbers on Our Highways a Big Problem to Prevent More Accidents

Since the awful accident at Hague avenue and the Big Four crossing last Saturday, in which four lives met a tragic end in an automobile, we have heard many remarks about safety at grade crossings, overhead crossings, etc. It would be a splendid thing if all grade crossings in this and other places could be abolished, and probably that will be the case in the not far distant future. But while we are waiting for that, why could not some effort be made whereby persons driving autos or other vehicles might be impressed with the thought of more carefulness. No doubt there are many careful drivers of machines, but one can notice every day most anywhere, some careless driver who will take a chance at getting by most anything to gain a few seconds of time with the result that he is successful one, two, and perhaps many times; but there comes a time when a crash results because of his "chancing," and someone suffers, if not loss of life or personal injury, it may be to their machine or vehicle. We do not wish to say how we think this could be accomplished, but if moral effort could not suffice, should there not be some legal method whereby "speeding" and undue carelessness could be made to pay a penalty for such acts?

There are hundreds of Hilltop auto owners and thousands of Hilltop people who are not auto owners. All are vitally interested in the automobile because we come in contact with it more times than probably any other thing. Even the little child playing in front of its home is vitally interested in it.

The Ohio State Journal of Monday morning says editorially, as follows:

AUTOISTS AND THEIR MACHINES.

Four people were killed on Saturday in trying to run their automobile across a railroad track in the face of a coming train. There is so much of this awful experience that something ought to be done to prevent it and no way presents itself except to attack the carelessness of the autoists. It does seem if they were careful that these calamities would not occur. The sight of a railroad crossing should make a man watchful in the extreme. In considering the question of responsibility, we are reminded of an article we read in the December's Atlantic, on "The Human Soul and the Scientific Prepossession." In that article occurs this remark: "We need not go back to the primitive man who assumes that the river which drowned his friends bore him a grudge." Then he quotes Aristotle to the effect that the murdering thing seen from the outside . . . the embodiment of an idea and purpose. Thereupon we hasten to find our way toward owe to know the carelessness of the chauffeur and place the blame upon the nervousness of the automobile .but rather places upon him a double duty of watching the villainous personality of the machine. Some may think this is the mere fondling of a whim: but no, it is becoming more and more the scrutiny of science.

One never meets with a great accident but what he feels that there is some force in the material that has it in for him. It was the way we felt when our gas stove exploded in our face. We were careful, but the monster element within was more careful to do its worst. When someone from an autoist is knocked to pieces by a railroad train, the first thought upon realizing his situation is, "where was I when this thing happened?" Our idea in thus speaking is to remind every man in command of an auto that there is a devil in the machine, that will run into the biggest train of cars that ever was if he is not wached. But the true idea is to recognize the angel in the machine and treat her fondly.—Ohio State Journal.

Ellison Kaufman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Kaufman, 128 N. Park avenue, won the prize—a gold watch—for selling $4,050 worth of War Savings Stamps through the Public School. In addition to this he sold several hundred dollars worth of stamps. He is thirteen years of age, and graduated this Spring from Mt. Gilead Public School, where he has been attending. While there he made his home with his uncle and aunt, Attorney and Mrs. W. M. Kaufman. The watch was presented at the New Southern Hotel in Columbus, last Monday noon.

Funeral of Mr. Donovan

The funeral service of Mr. Milton Donovan, who was killed last Thursday night, took place at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church last Monday afternoon, Rev. Richard E. Shields, the pastor, conducting the service. A very large audience was present.

Mr. Donovan was born in Lincoln county, Ohio, February 9th, 1886. He was married December 22, 1910, and at that time moved to the Hilltop, where he set up in the baking business where he remained for some time, and recently sold out to go into the taxicab business for himself.

He is survived by his widow and two children, a daughter, Doris, aged six years, and a son, Joseph, aged two years; his father, Mr. T. M. Donovan of this city and also four sisters and two brothers.

His business connections made him many friends, whose sympathy goes out to the bereaved family. Mr. Donovan was a member of the Royal Order of Moose No. 11.

Mrs. Orpha E. Haller of Detroit has been visiting the past week with Mrs. Jerman, 41 Clarendon avenue.

Sergt. Newton Miller and wife R. J. Miller and wife and little son of Akron, spent the week end at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Miller, 89 South Terrace.

Miss Mary Babbitt Walton, assisted by Mr. Carlisle Moffitt, baritone, will present a number of her pupils in a piano recital Thursday evening, June 12, at eight o'clock in the Glenwood M. E. Sunday School room.

The following pupils will be heard: Geraldine Elliott, Martha Postle, Louise Rucgg, Marianna Pritchard Bernadine Allison, Eldora Allison, Harold Fraser, Dorothy Stringer, Randolph Taylor, Martha Gould, Fern Culp.

All the public schools in the city will observe a Music Festival on Wednesday and Thursday, June 10th and 11th. The children of the 5th, 6th, 7th grades, and West Broad of the 4th and 8th grades will take part.

Children's patent Mary Jane Slippers, $1.98.

Died

Funeral services for Harry L. White, aged 19, sailor, son of Frank A. White, 130 South Harris avenue, who died at New Haven, Conn., took place at his home at 2 p. m. Tuesday. He is survived by his parents, three sisters and a brother. Burial at Forest Grove Cemetery, near Plain City.

Ladies' White Fabric Pumps & Oxfords, high & low heel, $3.50 Charles Houx Shoe Store.

Hilltop Births

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Mitchell, 86 South Richardson avenue, May 30, a girl.

To Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Spangler, 86 North Ogden avenue, May 14, a boy.

Don't forget the annual Hilltop picnic.

Among the beautiful floral decorations at Glenwood church last Sunday morning was a basket of scarlet roses, sent in memory of the heroic dead represented by the gold stars on the service flag. Also a vase of pink and white peonies as a greeting to the old veterans of the Civil War. The returned soldiers will receive a cordial welcome and will find flowers, smiles and words of greeting at every service.

Misses Dorothy Wells and Helen Parrett, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Wells and Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Parrett, will give a recital at the Christian Church, Mt. Sterling, Ohio, on Friday evening, June 6th at 8:30 p. m.

The following officers were installed at Glenwood Epworth League service last Sunday evening: President, Ernest Purdum; First Vice Pres., Norman Mack; Second Vice Pres., Ruth Marshall; Third Vice Pres., Martha Gould; Fourth Vice Pres., Joseph Wyman; Secretary, Goldie Six; Treasurer, Ralph Reed; Pianist, Cecile Six.

Sky-Pilots on the Hill

A Series of Sketches of the Hilltop Ministers We Meet on Our Streets Daily

Rev. Richard E. Shields was born in Hope, Ind., to which place his father, a shoe merchant, had moved with his family from North Carolina. After attending the common and high schools, he entered Moravian College at Bethlehem, Pa., where he took a full course, and then a two years' course in the theological seminary, receiving in the former the degree of B.D., and the latter that of B.A.

While in college he was quite active in athletics, playing for six years on the basket ball team, weighing but 118 pounds when he began playing that game. But the "pros." said he had "the voice of a lion," yelling for the ball. He was captain of the basket ball team two years. In other colleges activities he was president of the Y. M. C. A., also editor-in-chief of the college publication. He was very active in mission work, teaching English in the Bethlehem steel works shop.

Volunteering for service in the mission field, he was sent to West Indias in 1916. Before going, however, he was married to Miss Elocesa Smith, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who had just graduated from Vassar College. They went to Antigua, British West Indias, staying there three months teaching in a large colored mission. After that they left for the regular mission field, at Santa Domingo City, the oldest city in the western hemisphere, where they remained for some time.

Leaving there, Mr. Shields took up the work as assistant pastor in the Woodward Avenue Presbyterian Church at Detroit, Mich., where he remained till he was called to take the pastorate of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church on the Hilltop, last December. He also spent one summer in New York City, in vacation Bible School work, teaching children of the streets Bible stories and truths.

Since his coming to Hoge Memorial last December, the church has been quickened in church life and religious work. Thirty-eight new members have been received since January 1st, the benevolences have more than doubled and over $300 more than the necessary requirement was raised for the New Era Movement.

In Millikin Bros.' grocery ad. on page 2 we overlooked "open till 10 o'clock Friday" line which was intended for Decoration Day. As they are open ALL day Friday.

Mr. Demas B. Ulrey, spent Sunday afternoon at Lancaster, Ohio, where he delivered the Memorial address for Mt. Pleasant Lodge, K. of P., to a highly appreciative audience of Lancaster citizens.

There will be kindergarten exercises Friday at 9:30, at Glenwood Recreation House. These exercises will close the term. The program will consist of songs, games, etc., also folk dances under the direction of Miss Cherry.

"Riders of the Purple Sage," William Farnum's most popular picture at the Empire Hilltop next Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church will give a lawn fete on the church lawn this (Thursday) evening. Ice cream and cake will be served.

Mr. Otto Schucraft, son of Mrs. Schucraft of 95 S. Warren avenue, recently returned from France where he spent fourteen months in service with the A. E. F. He was in many engagements, taking part in the St. Mihiel drive and the Argonne Forest battle for which he was highly commended by Gen. Pershing, Foch and his superior commanding officers. He relates many harrowing experiences, having endured many hardships. He assisted in carrying many wounded comrades from the scene of conflict and sometimes was without food or water for many hours.

His many friends are glad to welcome back such a brave citizen, and will be pleased to learn he received only a slight injury in all his service.

Boy Scouts

You have all read of the drive in America for 1,000,000 associate members of B. S. A. Now to become a member puts you under no obligation whatever. The cost is $1.00 per year and not forced to enlist for another year. But if you don't get your money's worth don't enlist the second year. You can go to your nearest Scout Troop and visit with the boys. Have a talk with them, telling of the things you used to have to do to amuse yourself when a boy. You will be made to feel young again and the Scout needs advice from an older man. Mingling with the boys of tomorrow will make a boy of you in your advanced years. Well do you remember the white signs painted on side walk for sale of Liberty Bonds. It read, "Come Man, Buy a Bond." That was the work of Boy Scouts. Now the slogan reads, "Come Man, be a Boy Scout."

See some Scout of your district. Hand him a dollar with an application he carries. Tell him you wish to be a "kid" again. If the Scout can't take care of you, ask him who can. Think it over, join the ranks of business men and boys. This drive is for 15,000 in Columbus and let's show Columbus that the Hilltop can supply at least 1000 of these. "Come Man, Be a Boy Scout" drive ends June 14th.

A Field Meet at Glenwood Park

On June 12-13, under the auspices of Glenwood Recreation Directors, a field meet will be held at Glenwood Park. Anyone from the 4th to 8th grade in schools is eligible to enter. Arrangements have been made to issue prizes for individuals, and a pennant for the winning school. If this meet proves a success it will be an annual event, so it is up to the West Siders to make it successful. After the meet on Friday, 13th, an old fashioned picnic will be held at the park. Music will be furnished and refreshments will be sold. Come and bring your supper! Make this a community affair. Remember the date, June 13th.

CHURCH DOINGS

Interesting Topics to be Given by Hilltop Pastors at Next Sunday's Services Other Church News

Glenwood M. E. Church

9.15 A. M.—Sunday School, C. W. Walton, superintendent. Classes for all ages. Orchestra music.

The Sunday School and congregation will combine to observe Children's Day at 9:15 a. m. An interesting program has been arranged and the Sunday School will have charge of the exercises. In connection with the program Dr. Wykoff will give a short sermon appropriate to the occasion. The congregation should note that this will be the only morning service held and so should plan to come early.

6:45 p. m. Epworth League. Topic: "Why Go to College in War Time?" Leader, Kenneth Dickerson.

7:45 p. m. Sermon by the pastor, subject, "The Jealousy of God."

You will be cordially welcome at these services. There will be baptism of children at the morning service and parents are urged to present their children for baptism at that time.

Hoge Memorial Presbyterian

10:30 a. m.—Morning Worship and Sermon: "The Moral Equivalent of War." Children's sermon: "Seeing a King."

7:30 p. m.—Happy Hour Service, Sermon: "Purposely Fools."

These Sunday evening services are brief, but inspirational and helpful. The singing is all that is implied in "The Happy Hour." Come out and bring your friends.

St. Paul's United Evangelical

Sunday School at 9:15 a. m.
O. C. Gatrell, Superintendent.

Public worship at 10:30 a. m. Subject of sermon, "Possibilities wrapped up in a child."

Children's Day exercises at 7:30 p. m. A fine program is being arranged. Come and worship with us.

Prayer meeting Wednesday evening
Intermediate C. E. 6:30.

7:45—"Do We Know God Better Today Than Fifty Years Ago?"

Prayer meeting Wednesday, 7:30. We are studying "The Most Misunderstood Chapter in the Bible."

Our services are just one hour in length. Don't be a one-timer Christian who only goes to church once a week. Be loyal to Christ. It's just as cool in church as at home.

Burgess Ave. U. B. Church

Meeting for worship at 10:30 a. m.
Intermediate C. E. at 6:30.
Gospel service at 7:30 p. m.
Prayer meeting Wednesday evening
A Cordial Welcome Awaits You

Memorial Baptist

Sunday morning, Children's Day services. A splendid programme. Everybody invited.

Wanted—Two hundred and fifty dollars offering from school towards the salary of a former pastor in Africa.

Evening—Sermon by Dr. Robbins. Theme: "Three of Life's Important and Encouragement Questions." Two best choirs. The best congregational singing. The pastor does not believe in short sermons and services because it is nice and hot. People will attend church if the weather is hot if they get the sincere milk of the Word and the "Meat" the great doctrines of the Bible. Wednesday nights the most interesting and largest prayer meetings in the city. Come and see and hear.

St. John's English Lutheran

St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church (Burgess Avenue).

Hilltop English Evangelical Lutheran

Sunday School at 9:15.
Morning Service, 10:30 a. m.

A telegram has just been received by Mrs. O. D. King, of 356 Clarendon avenue, from Major Harris of Washington, D. C., of the death of her brother, Second Lieutenant Charles A. Watson, who died somewhere in France on May 21, 1919. He went over with the 166th Rainbow Division was later was transferred to the Military Police. He had been gassed and wounded.

Mr. and Mrs. Schoonover of 163 N. Warren avenue, with friends, spent Friday near Dublin. They report a good catch.

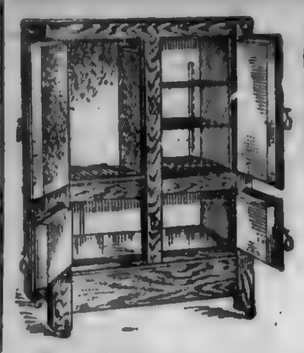
Mr. Becker of 249 South Warren avenue, met with an accident on Tuesday in which he had the end torn off a finger of his right hand. He will be unable to use the member for some time.

Hoge Memorial Sunday School will picnic on June 20th. The place—well, they say you'll have to find out when you get there.

The cantata, "The Brownie Band," will be given at West Broad Street School, Friday afternoon and evening, June 6.

The same play was given the first year the school was opened, seven years ago, and many requests have been made that it be repeated. So the fairies, owls, butterflies, brownies, wee-wees, wood nymphs and gypsy girls, together with the chorus girls and boys, will appear.

Mr. S. W. McCormick and wife and Miss Omer Freeman and two sons, Bernhard and Leonard, of Lima, Ohio, motored home Sunday, after spending a few days with their sister, Mrs. M. C. Long and other friends.



Mrs. W. G. Davis, Miss Nettie Herbert and Mrs. Daniel Jerman were delightfully entertained with a luncheon Tuesday at the home of Mrs. W. H. Palmer, 68 South Hague avenue.

Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Stewart of Dayton, O., spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Chenoweth, 37 South Warren.

Max Chenoweth, who recently returned from A. E. F. service in Italy, with his wife and child, visited last week with Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Chenoweth, 37 S. Warren avenue.

GIBSON Refrigerators

The Wayne "Purchasing Co.," the largest Furniture Jobbers in America, of which we are the only Columbus member—and operating a chain of thirty-one stores, have averaged selling 50 car loads of Gibson Refrigerators each year for the past twelve years; and to-day we are selling more than ever before. Certainly sufficient proof that the line has been entirely satisfactory

"Gibsons" are made in the largest, most modern factory in the world. Nothing has been left undone to improve quality workmanship and finish that money and brains can accomplish, and we confidently believe that they are the very best—quality for quality—that the same amount of money can purchase.

FOUNDED ON FACT

By Peter Hope

(Copyright the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

To the forty-odd children of adolescent age Miss Graham, freshman English teacher in room 124 of the Peabody High school, was the embodiment of wisdom. To their unfilled minds, looking to the nearest pinnacle for a desirable goal, Miss Graham's knowledge, ranging from an easy familiarity with Chaucer to unconscious freedom with dactylic verse was indeed the very highest rung on the ladder of education.

But it was fortunate for the estimable lady that these youthful mentalities did not demand that so superior a being dress in fashions of the minute, not that even passing good looks were an accompanying requisite. For it must be admitted that while Miss Graham was a most excellent teacher of English, she was an abominable dresser, and her straight hair combed straight back sent Mr. Strenly, sole male instructor at the school, scurrying many a morning to his gymnasium, where he worked his classes extra hard in an effort to eradicate the unpleasant impression.

"For tomorrow's assignment," Miss Graham was saying in her usual dry, high-pitched soprano on this balmy June afternoon toward the close of the summer semester, "each pupil will bring to class an original composition founded on fact. It need only be an incident, but it must be true, for any successful writer will tell you that realism is the foundation of all fiction. I shall impose a penalty of forty lines of sesquion upon those who fail to produce this evening's home work at tomorrow's class."

As was her habit after a long speech, Miss Graham crossing her long, thin arms akimbo over her scant expanse of bosom and taking in the entire room with a single glance as if to detect some hidden culprit, sharply asked: "Is there any point not clearly understood?"

As a rule the bulk of her instruction, couched in bookish language, sailed over the heads of her pupils who forbore availing themselves of her offer to further explain, as they had learned their questions resulted only in a repetition of instructions. But contrary to the usual habit, a miss of fourteen, with twentieth century written on her face in unmistakable signs of powder shouting defiance to the unwashed neck below, arose timidly from her seat.

"Miss Graham," came in the self-conscious voice of a child hearing itself in a room where whispering was a penal offense, "may the incident we tell be about love?"

Miss Graham's arms sank limply to her side. It is not on record that any one had ever tried to determine just how long ago she was fourteen, but it is safe to surmise in that day love was not included in the public school curriculum. There was difficulty in answering this precocious pupil, and, of course, ignorance even of such a subject must not be admitted.

"It is only necessary for me to repeat," was the response in the metallic tone of years' habit, "that the incident upon which your story is founded be true."

And fearing lest she be unable to answer further questioning as safely, Miss Graham rang the gong for dismissal. As the children filed from the room in an orderly line she dejectedly sat down, elbows on the desk, with chin cupped in the hollow of her palms and pressed her eyelids with the tips of long, lean fingers.

"May the incident we tell be about love?" sounded in her ears, and eyes tightly shut, again saw this growing child entering girlhood asking permission to write about that which had somehow passed her by.

"Passed me by," repeated Miss Graham mentally. "No, not while memory lasts."

Loud voices of the moment as the boys wrangled over their "mibs" and the less intelligible jumble of jingles which time immemorial has associated with rope jumping, came in through the open windows on the summer breeze. The setting sun, bathing the red walls of the schoolhouse in a wild color tone of blatant blood-red, aroused her from her reverie and sent her hurrying boarding houseward.

The next afternoon, like every school afternoon preceding it, found the forty odd pupils seated in their respective places, all eyes intent upon "teacher and ears equally divided between pupil reading "homework" and whatever else there was of immediate interest. The range of subjects, from "My Trip on a Houseboat" to "My First Party Dress," found Miss Graham professionally attentive, and with abnormal memory with respect to grammatical errors. But it was the romantic girl with her paper entitled "My Uncle's Love Story" which brought the model instructor to rigid attention.

What was it this child was saying? The voice, not yet decided whether it would be soprano or alto, rose and fell in dramatic cadences. "And my uncle loved this pretty lady very much, and the lady loved my uncle. But one day they had an awful quarrel and the pretty lady sent my uncle away mad."

Surely this was not the Miss Graham of but a moment before? Was this woman, standing back of her chair tilted perilously forward, the same composed automaton of years' habit?

The child continued in words unconsciously plagiarized. "And pride kept them apart. Although my uncle cared a great deal for his sweetheart, he would not admit he was wrong, nor would the lady. And as the years passed by they lost track of one another."

The child paused in the rapid reading to catch breath.

"But my uncle could never marry another," she went on, her brow furrowing as she found difficulty in deciphering her own script, "because he loved only this girl. He always says he knows she is waiting for him, too. And he prays every night that some time day they will meet again."

The child sat down and was immediately followed by a stuttering lad who diverted attention from the tears welling in the eyes of their instructor.

After school the authoress of "My Uncle's Love Story" was a very proud little girl as she imparted to her bosom pals Miss Graham's self-invitation to her home that evening. "And," she went on in a theatrical manner at the unusual opportunity that gave her the center of the stage, "she asked me my uncle's name. And when I said 'Robert Devon,'" she added with a grandiloquent sweep of her arm, "I thought she would faint."

Not of no less interest was the scene enacted the following morning for the edification of this same audience with the addition of Mr. Strenly just entering the courtyard on his way to the gymnasium.

"You, Sarah, will be my Uncle Robert and I'll be Miss Graham."

Mr. Strenly stopped.

The super swaggered up, holding imaginary skirts in one hand while with the other she pointed dramatically.

"Bob," she shrilled coming on Sarah, to the danger of Sarah's equilibrium.

Mr. Strenly listened.

"Now you must say," was the whispered prompting, "To find you after all these years, my dear."

Mr. Strenly stared in open-mouth amazement.

And when the words had been properly repeated, Sarah was the recipient of a loud kiss. "Just like they did," was the announcement by way of a finale.

"Did you ever!" ejaculated Mr. Strenly.

GRADUATION DAY IS GIFT DAY

Yes, it is the greatest day in the life of the boy or the girl. They stand at the threshold of life, ready to assume its greater responsibilities. Could there be a more opportune time for a gift in commemoration of this event?

Mothers and Fathers should do it as a duty. For around the gift is woven so much of unforgettable romance. Friends will do well to give Graduation Day presents—it is a sure token of deepest regard.

Rings, of course, make the best gifts for this occasion. And nowadays rings come in so many wonderful designs and patterns that there is a ring for every type of person and for every occasion. Or, perhaps, it is a watch or a piece of handsome jewelry. If it be a ring then you must surely see our line of W. W. W. Gem Set rings. We recommend them because they are fully guaranteed which is not always true of gem set things. If a stone is lost, the manufacturer replaces it with another. That's how sure they are of the setting. It is a thing to remember.

A Matter of Thousands

By H. B. SEARLE

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"It's queer, Card, what false impressions girls can make on us mutts!"

Gene Terrill, who was playing at law until he had opportunity, as his friends surmised, to set himself up by marrying money, had dropped in this noon, when old Ware, who detested him, was out, for a chat with the junior partner of the real estate firm of Ware & Yantis.

"Who's been doing you, now?" Yantis smiled.

"Nobody!" Gene's engaging laugh rang out. "I was thinking of your peach of a bookkeeper. Looks a good, unselfish sort, too, eh? Well—mother's cook's daughter lives next door to them, and she says that Slade girl spends every penny she earns or can rake and scrape together on clothes, and makes her mother keep boarders for their living.

"Mrs. Slade wants to sell the big house, but the girl won't have it until she catches some fellow that won't make her work. The old lady isn't strong, but she does the work for all that household, and the daughter never helps any. But she's pretty enough to do as she pleases," Gene laughed easily, "and I'm not letting her selfishness stand in the way of my being half-way in love!"

Gene had a streak of the knave in him and Yantis knew it, but his remarks made so carelessly and naturally, somehow this time carried the conviction of truth.

The year before Hollister Slade had come to Bromley and installed his family in the handsome old McCord place. Then he had died very suddenly and when his affairs were settled his widow and daughter had found the big house was all that was left to them. Then Holly, the daughter, had secured employment with the Ware-Yantis firm and her mother had filled the house with boarders.

When Holly came back to the office from her lunch, her soft cheeks glowing, her hands full of yellow daffodils that she knew the junior partner loved of all flowers, Yantis rose courteously to open the door for her, but the especial smile for her that for a month had been in his gray-blue eyes was gone.

That evening Terrill managed to overtake the girl and walk with her on her way home. Before they reached her mother's gate the wondering hurt in her eyes had partly disappeared and she asked him in with a semblance of cheerfulness.

"Terry, you've made a fair start," he congratulated himself. "Card won't pay her any more attention if he once gets it in his hard head she's as rottenly selfish as I made her out—and if he lets her alone I fancy I can get her heart turned in my direction and the ceremony safely over before that occurs."

"That" meant an old man's death. It had been a month since Terrill had saved Josiah Barnett, old and feeble from the onslaught of a reckless chauffeur in a city a half day's journey from Bromley. Terrill had given the old gentleman his name and address, but the incident had almost passed out of his mind, until a few days before when Barnett had sent for him.

"I've got just one living relative," he told Terrill. "Her father, my cousin died a year or so ago. I can't remember where, but I want you to hunt up the daughter. I can't live more than three months, the doctors say, and though I never saw the girl, she'd just as well have the forty thousand I've got to leave as anybody else. I've made my will, and if you don't find her before I'm gone, keep up the search afterward until you do."

All the way home that evening the click of the rails sung in Terrill's ears, "I have bequeathed my property to my cousin Holly Slade!"

As the spring days passed Yantis grew pallid and thin, and, to old Ware's wondering consternation, irritable.

To add to the anguish of believing the girl he still loved, heartless and unworthy, Yantis came to realize that Terrill intended to marry her. He wondered amid his pain. Gene was not a man who would marry a poor girl.

Then, late in April, Charlotte Dentler, seventeen years old and plain and reputed heiress to $80,000, came to visit her cousin, Mrs. Theodore Olevant.

Holly did not think it was necessary for Gene to go autoriding every morning and every evening with the homely Charlotte, but somehow she did not care. She had not cared very much for anything all spring. She had given a listless consent when Gene had asked her, with fervent protestations of love, to marry him, but she had not been moved.

"It does not matter," she told him when he asked her to keep the engagement a secret. Nothing mattered!

One sultry evening, near the end of the third week of Charlotte's visit, Yantis moodily strolling in the town's park came suddenly upon a couple of young people sitting on the soft turf in a secluded corner. They did not see him, and he was backing softly away when he heard Gene Terrill's persuasive voice.

"I've Got Just One Living Relative."

"You're sure you're going to run away and marry me tomorrow evening, Charlotte dear? You'll not fail me, sweetheart?"

"Oh, I'll not fail you, Gene darling!" the girl answered.

Yantis caught his breath. Had Gene been playing fast and loose with Holly?

It was Yantis' evening for hearing conversations not meant for him. As his steps took him unconsciously toward the old McCord place, and he slowly passed the high privet hedge, voices came softly to him from a rustic bench beside the hedge.

"Oh, mother darling," the voice that two months back he had thought the sweetest in the world, was saying, "it worries me so your always being so tired! It's cooking for those dreadful boarders! Can't we give them up and give up the big house? We could make out on my salary.

"The boarders pay, Holly. I want to put by some for father's stone, and I—I can't bear to sell the house in which he lived last, dear."

"I know, darling, but it breaks my heart to see you working so hard."

"When you are married to Gene, dear, things will be lighter," the older woman answered soothingly. "Both of you can stay with me then, and I won't try to keep boarders. I'd rather send the announcement of your engagement to the papers, tomorrow, don't you think, dear?"

Yantis walked on silently. "I'd rather like to have that liar here in o.

hands one minute," he thought angrily.

Next morning on the corridor floor by his office door Yantis found a thick white envelope. It was addressed to the society editor of the town's paper and contained an announcement of the engagement of Holly Slade to Eugene Terrill. Mrs. Slade's name was in the upper left-hand corner, but the envelope was not sealed. Evidently Holly had brought it to the office to mail.

The next day the papers told of the runaway marriage of Charlotte Dentler and Eugene Terrill. At noon Yantis came to Holly with a thick white envelope.

"Forgive me," he said, "I forgot to send out the mail yesterday afternoon. I hope it won't inconvenience you?"

Holly seized the envelope and the intuitive knowledge that he had kept it back to save her mortification came to her.

Her answer was an indistinct murmur, but the red blood flooded her face and the eyes she raised to Yantis' were full of an indescribable relief and thankfulness.

In the late afternoon, at the exact moment that Mrs. Theodore Olevant was telling Gene Terrill's mother, with a degree of malicious satisfaction, that it was a mistake about Charlotte's fortune—it was her stepsister who was the heiress—Cardwell Yantis was speaking to Holly, putting on her hat in the cloakroom.

"I'd like to walk home with you this evening if you'll let me," he was saying. "I've something I'd like to tell you."

She looked up at him and her heart gave a great leap. The old smile was in her eyes.

Tri Mu News

What is so rare as a cool place in June? Nothing feels better than to drop into an ice cream parlor and get something refreshing when you're all fagged out. But it isn't always necessary to go to an ice cream parlor for that. The place referred to is the basement of Glenwood church, where new decorating is being done and things will be more attractive.

Now for the time to get that "something refreshing" and free of charge. In Glenwood basement on Friday night, June 13, at 8 p. m. Tables will be set for 100. Plenty of girls and guests of Tri Mu. The members of the class are requested to be there without fail; pick you a girl, eat with her and take her home. Members of the class will be principal entertainers.

Members of the Tri Mu class regret the news announcing the death of a member of the class, Harry White, killed in an accident while in the Navy. One of our good fellows gone to a land where accidents never happen and all are at rest. Relatives of the deceased kindly accept the floral offering and deepest sympathies of the Tri Mu class.

The soldiers of the Tri Mu class turned out in uniform for the Memorial exercises in Glenwood church on Sunday. Twenty-five of the returned were there and enjoyed the praise given in an address by the pastor. Praise was given to the fallen dead and those who have returned. The attendance in the class was fine and a cooler place can't be found than in the Tri Mu room. Come out next Sunday and bring the attendance up to standard again. Also start the talk and plans for a summer camp at a decided point.

The Brownie Band wil be given by request at West Broad Street School on Friday, June 6th, at 3:30 and 8:00 p. m.

Don't forget the annual Hilltop picnic.

Nearly a thousand people witnessed the two performances of the "Brownie Band" at West Broad street school last Friday afternoon and evening. About one hundred dollars are the proceeds, which will be used in the purchase of pictures, records, lantern slides, etc., for the school.

The West Broad street school will hold its Field Day exercises at the building, Friday afternoon at 1:30.

Annual Picnics

The Bible School of the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church will picnic on June 19th at Glenmary Park. While this is called the Bible School Picnic it is also for members of the church as well as all friends and parents of all children who attend the school. There is a very interesting program being planned. The "kiddies" will eat ice cream and have races and games while the young men will challenge the married men to a game of baseball. It is sufficient to say that the married men will win! However, the game will be interesting just to see how the young men can play. Of course the older men are more experienced and will no doubt (?) carry off the honors. The school invites all to go. Take the whole family and enjoy the day's outing. Round trip tickets sell to children for 20 cents and to adults for 35 cents.

The annual picnic of J. R. B. class was held at Smith's Park, Tuesday, with plenty of good eats for dinner and supper, proving that there are some splend'd cooks among the J. R. B. girls. Many games were enjoyed during the afternoon and evening. Those present as follows: Miss Egy. Mesdames E. Williamson, Fr., W. R Draper, Eisennecker, J. H. Williams and son, H. H. Williams and son, Stanley Colburn and son and daughter, Stanley Hock and daughter, Arabella Carter and daughter, Evans, Seiller, Barnhardt and son, C. E. Walton, Milliken, Gibson and daughter, Leonard, Mann, C. C. Clevenger, B. J. Dildine, A. V. Allen, E. Scoles, C. Fleming, Earle, Mossman, Gregg and daughter, Watson and daughter, Hanger and son, Holman and son, Kline and daughter, Fox and son, Crawford and Bon Durant.

Municipal Service

The installation of municipal electric service on the Hilltop is going steadily on. About 75 places have already been accommodated and others are being made ready as fast as the force can do so. Service is now given on streets two squares north of Broad and one square south of Broad. The service is said to be considerable cheaper than what has been heretofore charged for electric light and power.

Tri Mu Class

Sunday, June 8th, was a fine day. At least twenty-five members of the Tri Mu class thought so, and ventured to Sunday school. Owing to Children's day, no class was held, but any Sunday hereafter, class will be held in our cool room in the basement.

It is hoped that on Friday, June 13th, will be a real hot day. Then in order to get cooled off, Tri Mus will fall in the basement of the church at 8:00 p. m. for the short and sweet entertainment. Be there on time and enjoy the evening with your old friends, a "get acquainted" committee will be there to introduce you to each other. Herberts' Apollo orchestra will furnish the music and a fine time is assured.

Headquarters for young men's Caps. Chas. Houx Furnishing Store.

The Hilltop fire department was called to the home of A. Lee Ditrick, 65 Guilford avenue, on Thursday of last week to extinguish a small blaze which started in the basement, caused by "waste" being placed to near heat used in vulcanizing an inner tube. Prompt action with the hose by the ladies of the Crochet Club, who was being entertained by Mrs. Ditrick, soon put out the fire. Master Harry Kuechler, a Boy Scout, also rendered valuable assistance. The damage was slight.

L. M. Seiller wishes to announce that he will close his store at nine o'clock every Saturday night.

Earl H. Hill, who returned a few weeks ago from service over seas and has been visiting relatives and friends in the city, spent last Thursday with his sister, Mrs. L. R. Watts and brother, J. A. Hill, both of N. Harris avenue. He returned Wednesday to Toledo to resume his duties with the Lasalle Koch Co., where he was employed before entering the service.

Rev. J. G. Smith of Murray, spent last Wednesday and Thursday with his cousin, Mrs. James A. Hill, 166 N. Harris avenue. He was joined by his wife and little daughter, Eva, Friday morning, and left for Cincinnati to attend camp meeting.

A Series of Sketches of The Hilltop Ministers We Meet on Our Streets Daily

Dr. William F. Wykoff was born in Jefferson county, Ohio, his father being a farmer, and an elder in the Presbyterian church. His first schooling was received in the public schools of Richmond, Jefferson county, where he spent most of his boyhood days, being converted at twelve years of age. He also attended the Richmond College in the same town. Later, entering Mt. Union College, Alliance, Ohio, he finished that course and graduated, receiving a local preacher's license at eighteen. He did a large amount of work in that locality.

He took a post graduate course in philosophy at Grove City, Pa., where he received the degree of Ph. D., pro merito. After that, the degree of D. D. was conferred upon him by the Mt. Union College, where he was assigned as pastor in the First M. E. Church of Alliance. He was united in marriage to Miss Margaret B. Bright of Salineville, Ohio. After being pastor at Alliance he filled the pulpits of churches at Cleveland, Ohio, Akron, Ohio, Louisville, Ky., and Shelbyville, Ind., thus having a great opportunity to study church life in three cities. While he was pastor in Louisville, Ky., he preached to the Grand Army Post, during the first year. The second, he delivered the Memorial address in Cave Hill cemetery to 15,000 people and again next year to 20,000. He was invited to give the Memorial address as long as he was pastor there.

Coming to Glenwood M. E. Church on the Hilltop in the fall of 1917, he has seen an addition of 250 new members taken into the church; also a great gain in the financial affairs of the church, one of which is the establishment of a tither's league of members.

He was chaplain of the Ohio House of Representatives.

Dr. and Mrs. Wykoff have one son, Leward C. Wykoff, attorney-at-law in Cleveland, and a daughter, Ruth, at home.

Wednesday's Storm

During the storm Wednesday afternoon a large oak tree which has been a landmark standing on the hospital grounds at the end of Belvidere avenue, was blown down, the trunk being broken off about 15 feet above the ground. Fortunately the wind being from the east, blew the tree to the west, parallel with the fence, else it might have broken a lot of wires and also stopped traffic on Broad street.

While the storm was raging, hail stones fell in very large quantity east of the Hilltop, damaging gardens and young plants considerably. At one place it is said the hail piled up from a down spout of a house to the depth of a pile six inches deep and about 24 inches across. Some of the hail being as large as a nickel. Some places also reported panes of window glass as being cracked by the storm.

Miss Helen Southard entertained the Orient people at Orient, Ohio, M. E. Church, Friday evening, June 6th, with a program of readings, etc. They were well pleased with the evening's program and entertainers.

L. M. Seiller wishes to announce that he will close his store every Saturday night at 9:00 o'clock.

The Glenwood Home Missionary Society will have a picnic luncheon at noon, Friday, June 18th, at the shelter house, followed by a business meeting with annual election of officers.

Sunday evening, 7:30: Topic, "Be Not Afraid, But Talk About Christ and His Church."

Citizens and Christians already all round the world have become deeply interested in the marvelous climatic pronouncements that will become historic of the seven thousand and more delegates of the Southern and Northern Conventions when it was unanimously and enthusiastically voted that while they would maintain fraternal relations with all evangelic denominations they do not believe that organic unity with other denominations is desirable or possible, and that while they would co-operate in combating evil in the world with those of other faith, they would not have anything to do whatsoever with "The Inter-church Union World Movement," yea, not even send delegates to any convention to consider farther the matter, believing all such efforts are futile, failing eventually in the promotion of organic union of Christians.

These two great Baptist bodies at Atlanta, Georgia and Denver, Colorado, representing eight million of Baptists in the United States also voted unanimously that they would raise during the next five years ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIVE MILLION DOLLARS FOR THEIR BENEVOLENT OBJECTS IN EDUCATIONAL AND MISSIONARY WORK. This is the greatest amount of money to be secured by any sect in the world during the space of five years and marks a new epoch unparallelled and unknown hitherto. Baptists are great sticklers for the Bible. They are not pussyfoots, and they are to follow the simple, unadulterated Word of God until Christ comes again and changes the Scriptures if He desires. They do not believe in federation of churches, while willing to co-operate in all good works. You know a dog and cat get on best when not tied together: so Baptists being leaders in numbers and wealth can best work for the advancement of the Divine Kingdom when not entangled with other sects. NO MONGRELIZED GOSPEL, OR MUSHY, SENTIMENTAL UNION WILL EVER RECONSTRUCT EUROPE.

GIBSON Refrigerators

The Wayne "Purchasing Co.," the largest Furniture Jobbers in America, of which we are the only Columbus member—and operating a chain of thirty-one stores, have averaged selling 50 car loads of Gibson Refrigerators each year for the past twelve years; and to-day we are selling more than ever before. Certainly sufficient proof that the line has been entirely satisfactory.

"Gibsons" are made in the largest, most modern factory in the world. Nothing has been left undone to improve quality workmanship and finish that money and brains can accomplish, and we confidently believe that they are the very best—quality for quality—that the same amount of money can purchase.

The Pink Sheet

By R. Ray Baker

(Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

One means of wresting a living from the world that Eleanor Ferguson abhorred above all others was prize fighting. She had never witnessed any pugilistic bouts, but she had heard enough concerning them to form a conclusion that they were brutal and savage and that no one who possessed the vestige of self-respect could bring himself to engage in such an encounter.

Consequently, when she found the man she most admired gazing up at her serenely from a pink sporting page with the cognomen "Kid Gleason" stretched above his head the feeling of disappointment—of well-nigh despair—that swept over her can well be understood.

Eleanor came across the pink sheet while rummaging in the attic for some long-discarded household utensil that she suddenly felt the need of in preparation for the party at which her engagement was to be announced. The pink sheet had been used to wrap something in and she came across it quite by accident.

"To announce my engagement!" The phrase had lost its pleasant sound. Now it seemed more like the knelling of a church bell at a funeral. And the pink sheet was to blame for it all. If only she had stayed away from the attic she would have continued in a happy frame of mind, she thought. On the other hand, it would have been much worse to have become the bride of the man and then have the knowledge of his means of livelihood suddenly thrust upon her—when it was too late.

"A prize fighter!" she wailed, and she seated herself crosslegged on the attic floor and buried her head in her arms and wept. "Anything but a prize-fighter! Why, he must be the most brutal of brutal beings. He can't possess the slightest shred of human kindness or sympathy. They never do. All they think of is knocking people senseless and collecting money for it. Sometimes they kill their opponents. He's a savage, that's what he is. He told me he clerked in a store, but he was afraid to tell the truth. He's just a common savage, with a lust for blood the principal part of his makeup."

Eleanor's lack of definite knowledge was easily explainable by the fact that he lived in Jackson, which was 60 miles from her home city of Kalamazoo. He came over every Saturday night to spend the week-end and she saw nothing of him on the intervening days.

When he had casually remarked that he clerked in a store she had taken it for granted he was telling the truth. At that time she could conceive of no reason for his falsifying, but now she could comprehend his evident reluctance to discuss his work.

"That settles it!" she fumed as she left the attic with the pink sheet in her hand. "There won't be any announcement party. He's coming over tonight, as usual, and I'll meet him at the station as if nothing had happened; but when I get him up to the house I'll confront him with the evidence of his perfidy."

So when Albert Gleason stepped off the interurban car he was greeted with smiles from the girl of his choice, for she concealed her disgust or abhorrence, or whatever her new feeling for him might be termed, and apparently was as glad as ever to see him.

To tell the truth, she experienced some difficulty in keeping that repugnance uppermost in her mind; for Albert was exceedingly good to look upon. Broad of shoulder, with arm muscles that clothing could not conceal, and with red, healthy cheeks and a head of luxuriant, tousled, yellow hair and deep blue eyes and clean, white teeth—yes, he was a good-looking specimen, one that would show off well in evening dress, at an engagement party, for instance.

But—and her forehead furrowed into a frown in spite of herself—he also had the build and poise of a prize-fighter, if she was any judge of prize-fighters, which she wasn't; but she had her opinion of how they ought to look, and Albert filled the bill.

They took a car for the Ferguson residence.

"His last trip up this way," Eleanor said to herself, firmly, as she accepted a seat from a gallant old gentleman who was about ready to get off, and Albert located a strap that was not in use.

Most of the passengers had a hungry look. It was nearly six o'clock and they were bound home for the evening meal. They were impatient, too, for the car was late, the line having been blocked by a fallen trolley wire, and their spirits were low and their good nature all but gone.

Gleason, towering above the rest, swung back and forth as the car groaned around curves and he could not entirely control his feet, which he automatically shifted from time to time to maintain his equilibrium.

On one of these occasions he trod on the feet of a sour-visaged damsel, who occupied three-quarters of a seat, and carried a bulky package of meat on an arm and gazed savagely at the dim lights that were springing into existence along the streets.

"Keep your feet to yourself!" she snapped at Gleason, and the latter doffed his hat and apologized. The operation of being polite upset Albert and he swung across the aisle and sat unceremoniously in the lap of a weazened little man who carried an umbrella and had been glaring in apparent deep-seated hatred at the world in general.

"Get off, you big brute," the object of the unprovoked, unintended assault ejaculated. "What you trying to do, commit murder?"

Albert smiled and apologized profusely, but kept a secure grasp on the strap to avoid incurring the enmity of a scrawny, middle-aged lady who wore big glasses and kept fuming about the "impossible service" and who sat directly in the path of Gleason's surging maneuvers.

The temper of the passengers was not improved by a sudden jolting. At one end and one side the car rose in the air, hung suspended for an instant, then fell with a grinding jar. The impatient crowd gave vent to its feelings in uncomplimentary remarks, and several displayed enough curiosity to get off and investigate, although none of those ensconced in seats risked losing their places.

Soon the trouble, whatever it was, was remedied, and the car prepared to resume its weary journey.

"Ten minutes late already, and a gang of hungry boarders howling for food," rasped the sour-visaged damsel, scowling at the foot which Gleason had trod upon.

"Such rotten service!" growled the weazened man, rubbing the knees that had been bruised by the "brute's" attack.

"Pity they can't get a person home in time to prevent starvation," observed the scrawny lady, glaring out a challenge for anyone to contradict, which no one did.

"Ding! ding!" said the conductor's signal. "Clang! clang!" went the motorman's bell, and the car lurched away. But one of the passengers was missing, and Eleanor could not help noting the fact, for it was Albert.

Her home was only three blocks away and dinner was waiting when she arrived. She was vexed at Albert, although she admitted his desertion might be for the best because it spared her an unpleasant duty.

To her surprise, Albert came puffing into the house when the meal had been under way for perhaps ten minutes.

"Pardon," he grinned, good-naturedly, "but the car we were on ran over a dog and smashed him up pretty badly. The little girl who owned the animal was heartbroken, so I went into her home with her and tried to make the pet comfortable. I've had a little experience in veterinary work, and do you know I actually believe that dog will get well. They say you can't kill a cat, but I'd take my hat off to a dog. That animal lost more than nine lives right there and he still lives."

After dinner Albert and Eleanor went into the living room, while her parents obligingly retired to another part of the house. The first thing Albert discerned on entering the room was the pink sporting page glaring up at him from the table. He greeted it with an exclamation of surprise.

"Why, hello, here's old times," he beamed and clutched the paper, gazing at it with an expression of pleasure in his eyes. "The good old times."

She saw that he evidently was sincere, although she could not understand. It was not the first perplexing problem of the evening. The dog episode was so unlike a savage brute.

"What do you mean—the good old times?" she asked. "Do you mean that you are not a fighter now?"

He laughed. It was almost a roar.

"I should say not. I quit four years ago. I was a successful pugilist, if I do say it myself; but I decided it was hardly the thing. So I got that job as ribbon clerk at Hottstauder's department store. It's not such a big job, but it's—what you call it—ethical. Yep, this paper's four years old. Of course, you never noticed the date. A woman never does."

"We'll soon be there." Wyeth leaned forward at the wheel, peering into the gray mist that hid the road ahead of them. "It's at the top of the hill."

"We haven't passed anyone for miles, Randy. It's awfully lonesome, isn't it? Have you been here before?"

Wyeth smiled down at her, the girl he was most in love with for the time being. How could he tell her how many times he had been up this long hill road before, always with a different girl beside him in the understung gray car? It was usually his first experimental trip, 'way up to the little inn at the top of Mount Shawneen. A girl hardly ever showed her best side down in the city, in the environment she knew well, but take her up here, into the unknown, into the silence of the hills, and she became human again. If he only could find one who would stay that way, with the little wistful, natural woman way. Always taken back after tea at the inn or dinner, they slipped back into the same type he disliked. He wondered if Shirley would.

She had been eager to take the trip with him after his book was finished, partly because he had used the inn as the scene of the story, partly because he had told her how he liked it personally. And she had worked at it so steadily and unselfishly, knowing he was hurrying to get away as soon as it was finished. He could not tell her what an inspiration her very presence had been to him, as he walked the studio floor, dictating to her.

The west window caught the sunset light, and always sent a shaft down to gleam on her bowed head, with its fluffy, red-brown hair.

He wondered whether she would be the one he would ask to marry him. He felt the curiosity of the fatalist who never he had permitted a romance to develop along its own mind, until he found himself at the point where he wanted to test the effect of the glamour of the old [illegible]. Would Shirley [illegible] as [illegible] she were some tender-eyed old palace being framed anew.

"Have You Been Here Before?"

He stopped the car before the broad, low veranda, with its swinging lamps suspended in long chain brackets. Two ferriers bounded to meet him, and the door opened with Marcus' beaming face behind it, smiling welcome to him.

"Oh," breathed Shirley softly, when she saw the great hall in color, with its hunting trophies, and deep rock fireplace, "isn't it splendid here?"

Wyeth placed her in one of the deep chairs before the fire, and gave their orders to Marcus in leisurely contentment. It had been a long run with two breakdowns, and the clock over the mantel showed half-past nine.

"We may be late getting back," he told her, sinking into the chair beside her indolently. "I wish we were never going back, don't you, girl dear?"

Shirley shook her head emphatically. It was curious how out of place he seemed 'way off up here in the hills. He was so emphatically the dilettante type of man, the dreamer and drifter. She wondered where Phil was tonight: if he was thinking of her at all. He surely could not think she had meant all she said. He must understand that after a girl has earned her own living for years she does not leap at an offer of marriage as if it were a life preserver.

Besides he had his sisters to support, and she didn't want anyone in her home but her husband and herself when she married. And he had told her curtly that if she really loved him she would be willing to live in a Sahoon family hut with him.

Wyeth was talking to her, and she had not even listened to him, thinking of the other man and how he would look standing on the great bearskin rug before the fireplace looking down at her now.

They dined out on the glass-inclosed veranda, a blaze burning behind them in the open fireplace. Shirley hardly noted the passing of time. It was all so unreal to her, and Wyeth kept talking, telling her of his own life, dwelling on their happiness together and on how different she was to all other girls he had ever met.

She did not notice the lights of the other car as it swept around the curve of the road, but when the door opened behind her she heard his voice, and bent her head over her plate. He was with a party of men. His laugh came to her roundly every now and then, and she knew he was sitting just behind her and had not recognized her.

"You know," Wyeth was saying, as he put aside his cordial and leaned nearer her, "you know why I brought you here, Shirley. You know, because you read my little confession in the story. And I want to tell you that you alone, of all whom I have brought here, belong to this—to the glory of the open and the silence and the beauty of the hills."

"A little past twelve already," came Phil's voice, vibrant and strong. "We'll stay at Pompon overnight and push on early in the morning? Who's got a road map?"

Wyeth heard, too, and offered his with the quick fraternity of the road, and Phil stood beside him, looking at her. She introduced him, but Wyeth barely heard, he was so busy going over the best route with the other men in the party, and Phil spoke for her ears alone.

"Are you on a honeymoon trip."

"Certainly not," she flashed back indignantly. "I've been helping Mr. Wyeth on his new book, and this is the scene of it. We just made he run up here to look at it, Phil, truly."

"If you mean that, you tell him who I am," I challenged.

Her eyes met his mischievously.

"Who are you, Mr. Hamilton?"

"Your comrade, sweetheart, and husband elect," he responded gravely. "If you don't, I shall."

Wyeth was watching them now, even while he answered questions, and she knew he understood the look on Phil's face. Phil turned around generally.

"I say, Wyeth, you know the road to Pompon, and I don't. I'm sure you'd be willing to make the run up there with Doctor Layton's party, and I'll just take Miss Winthrop back home if you don't mind. We're to be married in a few days, and, naturally, we've got a good deal to talk over, you know."

And Wyeth turned again to the men, feeling that he understood roads but not women, as Shirley passed by him, eager and relieved, her face uplifted to Phil's.

GRADUATION DAY IS GIFT DAY

Yes, it is the greatest day in the life of the boy or the girl. They stand at the threshold of life, ready to assume it's greater responsibilities. Could there be a more opportune time for a gift in commemoration of this event?

Mothers and Fathers should do it as a duty. For around the gift is woven so much of unforgettable romance. Friends will do well to give Graduation Day presents—it is a sure token of deepest regard.

Rings, of course, make the best gifts for this occasion. And nowadays, rings come in so many wonderful designs and patterns that there is a ring for every type of person and for every occasion. Or, perhaps, it is a watch—or a piece of handsome jewelry. If it be a ring then you must surely see our line of W. W. W. Gem Set rings. We recommend them because they are fully guaranteed—which is not always true of gem set rings. If a stone is lost, the manufacturer replaces it with another. That's how sure they are of the setting. It is a thing to remember.

Seasonable Home Recipes

By Hilltop Women

We are starting with this issue of the Record, a department devoted to "Seasonable Recipes" from Hilltop ladies. We invite anyone having one or more household recipes which they think would be of value to our readers, to please send them to the Record office and we will be glad to publish the same as space permits. Write plainly on one side of the sheet and give name of writer. If you do not wish name published, we will withhold it upon request.

Ham and Veal Loaf.

Proportions: 2-3 ham, 1-3 veal. 1 lb. smoked ham, 5 Uneeda biscuits, rolled; 1½ lbs. veal; ½ cup milk, sweet; no salt, as there will be sufficient in the ham; mix thoroughly, bake or steam two hours—preferable to bake. Very fine cold for luncheons. —Mrs. F. P. Sperry.

Strawberry, Pineapple Preserve.

The proportions are: one quart pineapple, peeled and shredded; two quarts hulled strawberries; three quarts sugar. Mix the shredded pineapple with the sugar, let stand two hours, then mix in the strawberries, heat gradually in the preserving kettle and boil about 20 minutes, or until nicely thickened, stirring to prevent sticking. Red raspberries are very nice used in the same way.—Mrs. F. P. Sperry.

Eggless Muffins.

1 pint flour; 2 teaspoons baking powder; ¼ teaspoon salt; 2 cups sweet milk; 1 tablespoon melted lard. Mix flour, baking powder and salt; add melted lard and milk, beat well two minutes. Fill muffin pans 2-3 full and bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven.—Mrs. Smoke.

Rhubarb Chop.

Large 8 cups chopped rhubarb; large 7 cups granulated sugar. Let stand over night. In the morning add juice of 3 oranges and grate rind of one orange and cook 30 minutes, and 10 minutes before done, add 3 cups of ground figs. It will keep for winter.—Mrs. Cliff J. Kohn.

Wrens Like Human Society.

The house wren is one of the most sociable and confiding of birds and on this account they will build their nests in little houses that are built for them no matter how close this is to a human habitation, says the American Forestry association. Furthermore, the wren is one of the most valuable of birds, for it feeds entirely on insects and thus helps to save the trees and the vegetables in the garden from the pests which would eat them. The wren builds its nest of grass or weeds stuffed into any crevice that takes its fancy.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Few Days

Mrs. J. A. Hill, 166 North Harris avenue, gave a surprise birthday party for her son, Martin Bernard, aged 7, Friday afternoon, June 13, from 2 to 5 o'clock. The guests were James Matheny, Freddie and Billie Krull, Georgie Matson, Vaughn Roebuck, Richard Fadley and little Howard Dunn. Refreshments were served, with 7 little candles illuminating the birthday cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Young gave a miscellaneous shower in honor of their daughter, Leta V. Young at her home 64 Midland Ave., Thursday of last week, there was (75) present. She received many beautiful gifts and a pleasant evening was spent.

A very delightful picnic party of a goodly number of the members of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of Glenwood Church was held at Glenwood Shelter House, June 13. It being the regular election of officers the following persons were placed at the head of the different departments of work: President, Mrs. J. H. Bishop; Vice-President, Mrs. Ed. Snigert; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Legg; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Dr. Whithead; Treasurer, Mrs. Hartsough Secretaries of Queen Esther, Mrs. Stevenson; King's Sons, Mrs. J. W. Leonard; Home Guards, Mrs. M. I. Beaver; Mother's Jewels, Mrs. W. H. Kennedy; Mite Boxes, Mrs. H. H. Glick; Temperance, Mrs. Wilson; Evangelism, Mrs. Mayer; Literature, Mrs. Hannowell; Christian Stewardship, Mrs. Hecker.

The past year's work has been wonderfully successful.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor of St. Paul's United Evangelical Church at their semi-annual election of officers selected the following staff for the coming months: President, Mabel Dunn; Vice-President, Cecil Dixon; Secretary, Dorothy Postle; Treasurer, Ralph Dunn; Organist, Kenneth Smoke, Choirister, Raymond Hill. Members of Committees as follows: Prayer meeting, Kenneth Smoke, Ralph Dunn, Louise Negus; Lookout: Cecil Dixon, Raymond Hill, Ada Rhodes; Missionary: Truth Daniels, Ruth Willis, Harold Raines, Marion King; Social: Dorthy Postle, Roma Day, Kenneth Hill.

A birthday party was given in honor of Miss Louise Woerner Saturday afternoon, by her mother, Mrs. C. Woerner, of North Terrace St. It being Louise's eighth birthday. Many amusing games were played and dainty refreshments were served by the hostess. Those present were: Wanda Harper, Lona Elzey, Evelyn Kenton, Martha Geary, Marvel Seeds, Jean Randall, Martha Waymer, Elizabeth Stahl, Jean Paullin, Hellen Reighly, Barbara Seaman, and Louise and Hilda Woerner.

Returning home Tuesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Day of 165 S. Harris Ave., found a very pleasant surprise in honor of Mrs. Day's birthday. Webster on Eloquence.

True eloquence, indeed, does not consist in speech. It cannot be brought from far. Labor and learning may toil for it, but they will toil in vain. Words and phrases may be marshaled in every way, but they cannot compass it. It must exist in the man, in the subject, and in the occasion.

Even genius itself then feels rebuked and subdued, as in the presence of higher qualities. Then patriotism is eloquent; then self-devotion is eloquent. The clear conception, outrunning the deductions of logic, the high purpose, the firm resolve, the dauntless spirit; speaking on the tongue, beaming from the eye, informing every feature, and urging the whole man onward, right onward, to his object—this, this is eloquence; or, it is something greater and higher than all eloquence; it is action—noble, sublime action. Daniel Webster.

SKY-PILOTS ON THE HILL

A Series of Sketches of The Hilltop Ministers We Meet on Our Streets Daily

Rev. R. E. Schwarz was born in Logan, Ohio, March 6, 1871. He attended the Logan public schools and graduated from the high school at that place. After teaching one term in the public school near Carbon Hill, Hocking county, he resigned and engaged himself in traveling for a selection of Catholic books.

He entered Niagara University in 1892, remaining there for two years, when he again went to work for himself, traveling for the Heinz Company, selling the 57 varieties of pickles, etc. After this he again took up college work, including one more year in Niagara University. He then entered St. Mary's Seminary, at Cincinnati, where he took a full course.

He was ordained into the priesthood on January 14, 1903, at the Josephinum, on East Main street, this city, after which he became the first resident priest at Buchtel, Ohio, in 1903, that parish having been a mission. He also served the parish at Murray City till the two named places were divided into two separate parishes, when he took charge of the Buchtel parish alone. While there he superintended the building of churches at both Buchtel and Murray City.

He assumed charge of the parish of St. Aloysius, on the Hilltop on April 14, 1910, the church being at that time heavily in debt, all that has so nearly wiped out that the parish will be out of debt entirely in about a month more. This parish numbers about 200 families, besides a large number of mixed families, where only certain members belong. The parish school, at Clarendon avenue and West Broad street, which has four rooms, taught by four Sisters, is taking care of about 180 children, and is very crowded. Plans are being made for the building of a large permanent church here and either remodeling or rebuilding the school edifice. The parish boundary extends to the B. & O. railroad tracks on the east and south, the county line on the north and the Georgesville road on the west. Rev. Father Schwarz has been 17 years in the priesthood, is loved by his people, and held in high esteem by all who know him.

Died from Lockjaw

James Newton Pennell, aged 5 years son of Patrolman and Mrs. C. L. Pennell, 380 Clarendon avenue, died Sunday evening, June 15, of lockjaw. Funeral services were held at the home Tuesday at 2 p. m. Burial was made at Green Lawn cemetery by the Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Several weeks ago the boy ran a splinter into his foot. The wound had healed before lockjaw symptoms appeared, which developed Tuesday night before his death. Serum was used in an effort to save the child's life.

FORGET THE NON-ESSENTIALS

Their Pursuit Takes Time That Might Far Better Be Devoted to Seeking Higher Things.

A political writer has said that formerly, when our forefathers became dissatisfied, they pushed further into the wilderness; but that now, if anything goes wrong, we run howling to Washington after special legislation. In the same spirit our age is turning to surface conditions for strength and peace, remarks the Unpopular Review. "Poor but free," was everywhere written with chalk or charcoal on the houses of Florence when it was besieged, and in the streets of the city there was kindness, generosity and the absence of thought of self. The insistent phrasing of our moral and social right to all the ease and splendor of the world which we can make our own has its place. We have altogether too much needless and shameful poverty; but we need to remember, nevertheless, that poverty has been the school of some of the finest attributes and the best achievements of the race. Equalizing the outward condition of men cannot be an adequate substitute for the ancient discipline of hardship and self-restraint.

Essentials are few. He who is content with them saves from the pursuits of nonessentials time which he can devote to fitting others to attain essentials; and that, we take it, is about the noblest use that can be made of time.

Has Two Floral Emblems.

Australia is the only country that possesses two floral emblems. Besides the "wattle," she has the waratah, described by her earliest botanists as the most magnificent plant which her prolific soil provides. At one time this national flower figured on Australian postage stamps and postcards. The botanical title of the waratah (Telopea), was suggested by the great distance at which the brilliant crimson blossoms can be seen. Australian black men suck these flowers for the copious honey they contain, and thus in war time they defied their food controller.

WATCHES that go down through generations

We are frankly proud of this store's reputation as headquarters for time-pieces. We have literally timed the community. Our watches are ticking merrily away in homes everywhere. And what is more important still, these watches have kept CORRECT time. They have been something more than looks.

It is just as well to keep in mind that the purchase of a watch should be made with the greatest possible care. Watches are bought, not for one lifetime but for many. A time piece should be handed down from one generation to another—from father to son—indefinitely. And a good watch will give this service uncomplainingly.

We have in stock all standard makes and all in all types designs, from the highly specialized railroad timepiece to the delicate mechanism of the wrist watch for my lady of fashion.

We take more than ordinary care in showing you these watches. We, too, realize that a watch is an investment for the future.

Rings are very much the same—they must last. If gems fall from gem-set rings, the investment can scarcely be called a wise one. We therefore call your attention to the remarkably fine Guaranteed line from the house of W W W.—White, Wile and Warner, of Buffalo. They have a reputation that years of honest merchandising have built up.

When Dancing Was Necessary

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The easy chair placed under the green-shaded light in Mrs. Humphrey's second-floor front ceased to offer attractions after Bob Norris had been in Burtontown two weeks, and Burtontown's "Cinema Palace" ceased to entice. A good magazine story and an easy chair or a moving picture thriller had been well enough for an evening's diversion "back home," where there was not the haunting feeling that such pastimes were the only possible diversions. But homesickness became more deep-rooted when Bob reflected that such were the only possible ways to pass an evening.

Bob had come with the three or four hundred other out-of-town employees to be the human factor of the big Arden plant at Burtontown. And the fact that Bob Norris was one of the most promising men in the plant and that already he had charge of a department did not make conservative Burtontown folk open their arms a bit more cordially to Bob than they did to Nell Talmadge, the quiet little slip of a girl at the telephone switchboard, whose weekly salary was not an eighth of Bob's, or to any of the other Arden people.

Burtontown distinctly resented having the Arden plant people there, and it registered this resentment by refusing to open its doors and by advancing prices for living necessities of all sorts as the demand for them became greater.

"If you don't want to die of homesickness," commented the young man who inhabited Mrs. Humphrey's second floor back, "you've got to learn to dance. It's a necessity. Not that you'll get asked to any of the dances given by the Burtontown people, but the girls in the Recreation association here at the plant are getting up some dances, and if you can dance well, you'll be a drawing card at those dances, and you can at least get acquainted with some of the plant girls."

Bob made some remark about thinking dancing a waste of time—also something to the effect that plant girls "weren't anything to lose one's heart over," but on his way to Mrs. Humphrey's that evening he looked longer and with more interest at the sign in the drawing room window of one of the old Burtontown mansions: "Dancing Lessons; Private or in Classes."

The next evening Bob made a hasty attack upon the front door of this house and consulted the brisk young spinster to whom the shingle belonged.

"No, I don't want to join a class," he told her, "and I'm not anxious to have anyone know that I am being coached. But I do want to get hold of this thing as soon as possible."

Bob Norris worked conscientiously and with intense application. Three nights a week he went to his instructor and he arranged for seances with her in an early morning half-hour gained by rising earlier and lingering for a shorter time at Mrs. Humphrey's breakfast table.

He rehearsed the steps in his mind, and in his room he went through them. He took up the subject as he did any other problem, first "getting at the root of the matter," as he said.

And if fox trotting can be mastered by a systematic knowledge of the steps that make it up, and if waltzing is a matter of scientific accuracy, then Bob would have been in two weeks a master of the dancing. But unfortunately dancing is an art. One must have a soul for it, as for other arts. One must feel it, and Bob did not.

So three weeks after his initial lesson he went to the A. I. A.—Arden Recreation association—dance with a certain amount of confidence. He approached his first untutored one-step with the assurance of a well-crammed undergraduate approaching his final examinations—sure that if he keeps his mind working he will succeed. As for any anticipatory pleasure in the joy of the dance—Bob did not know that such a thing existed.

But he did want to meet some of the girls, even if they were only workers in the office of the Arden plant. He wanted to hear their laughter and see them in some other surroundings than that of the daily drive.

"One thing that is important," the instructor had told him, "is to make your partner think that you are enjoying the dance even if you aren't. A girl doesn't like to dance with a man who appears to be working like a locomotive just to keep in step."

So on that auspicious night of the first A. R. A. dance when Bob found himself dancing with Nell Talmadge, the demure little telephone operator, his first remark was something like this: "I'm so glad you girls got up this dance. There's nothing I like better—pardon me, that was my fault. Yes, I'm a regular dance fan; can't get along without it."

"Neither can I," echoed Nell shyly. "I just dote on the new dances and the music is wonderful. I just feel the rhythm of it, don't you?"

Bob had come stag to dance, but he had not been partnerless, for the "committee" saw that men who had come alone were paired off with the girls who had come unescorted.

By the end of that first dance Bob was weary, mentally weary, and by the end of the second and third when he danced with other girls to whom the committee introduced him he was downright exhausted. With him each step was a matter of going over something he had learned. It was an exact science, in the accomplishment of which he seemed to derive no inspiration from the music or the grace of his partner.

He danced often that night with little Nell Talmadge, and when the time came for a second A. R. A. dance he asked Nell whether he might escort her. Meantime there were extra sessions with the dancing teacher. But they seemed worth while, for they had all made possible knowing Nell outside business hours.

He discovered, too, that beneath that shy but businesslike exterior that he saw in the daytime there lurked a little girl that was full of a contagious sense of humor. Moreover at the close range of the dance Bob could see that her small features were charming and that there was a rosy glow about the faint flush of the cheeks that was not apparent to Bob as he had passed her quickly by as she sat at the telephone switchboard.

Bob thought of the possibility of meeting Nell somewhere besides at the dances, but Nell never suggested that he call. In fact in her rooming house there were no "parlor privileges," and so she had hesitated to extend such an invitation.

"Are you really so eager about coming?" Nell asked one night as Bob was laboriously leading her through the intricacies of a waltz. "Tell me truly. You have [illegible] you were, but I've sometimes feared."

Perhaps not consciously [illegible] wouldn't until I found out [illegible] I had told [illegible] I could [illegible] for your sake. You [illegible] just might [illegible] I was [illegible] Please [illegible] I'm [illegible] feared."

[illegible] I like it [illegible] dancing or rowing with a friend than dancing with him—that is, if he was a friend like you; but, well, you see, I was so lonesome here and a girl I knew told me that the only way to have a good time and to [illegible] was to dance. I went and took private lessons as many as I could afford and [illegible] even if I did hate to dance. [illegible] I decided you [illegible] that would tell [illegible] do it for [illegible]

[illegible] you [illegible] Nell, if I [illegible] spend an evening talking with me and [illegible] just sitting and saying [illegible] well, I'd never feel that I [illegible] through that infernal fox [illegible] But I thought I had to [illegible] chance to make the girls like [illegible] the only girl in the world I want to have like me now is you, Nell."

"Well," queried Nell.

"Well, suppose we get married then. They're putting up some pretty bungalows for the married men in the [illegible] and we could [illegible] [illegible] nights [illegible] and read [illegible] What do you say to that?"

And Nell acquiesced.

L. M. Seiller wishes to announce that he will [illegible] store every Saturday night at 9:00 o'clock.

Irving Wanted Real Thing.

Henry Irving insisted upon everything being real and the genuine thing. The question of expense he never allowed to be discussed. If an artist had to carry an old missal, then an old missal it was; if antiques were necessary in such and such a play, the exact garment or garment of [illegible] was found. Where the priceless collection of old furniture, [illegible] swords, exquisite draperies stored away in the property rooms and warerooms of the Lyceum theater, London, went to is not known.

Here is a little incident regarding the value of things at the Lyceum. A friend of Irving's asked for a trifling souvenir of the old theater, and Irving [illegible] from the wall haphazard, [illegible] engraving, which was accepted with thanks. For curiosity's sake he took the picture to an authority to find out its real worth and it was returned to the owner with a small note, which read: "If you wish to sell this now, or at any time in the future, I am prepared to give you 85,500 for it."

This is to certify that Dead Shot will cure any stomach trouble such as indigestion, if you want to be cured of that trouble. Every bottle guaranteed. For sale by Dr. D. Moses, 147 Lorain avenue.—Adv.

Strawberry Shortcake, Southern Style

One egg, one-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one-half cup sweet milk. Two cups flour, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder. This makes two small layers, or one large one. Mash one quart of strawberries, cover with one large cup sugar. Let stand 30 minutes, then pour over cake. Serve immediately.—Mrs. D. B. Ulrey.

Chicago Jam

One quart of strawberries, 1 quart of cherries, 1 quart of gooseberries, 1 quart of either red or black raspberries, 1 quart of sugar. Put all together and cook about 30 minutes and seal in jelly glasses as jelly.—Mrs. Dellenbach.

Beef Loaf

1 pound of round steak ground fine, 1 pound of fresh pork ground fine, 1 cup of bread crumbs, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon of black pepper, 1 tablespoon of salt. Serve on lettuce.—Marie Kennedy.

Strawberry Shortcake

1½ cups of flour, 1 teaspoon of baking powder, half teaspoon of salt. Mix, taking flour and 1 tablespoon of sugar and a good tablespoon of lard together, stir in half a cup of sweet milk; roll out in two layers and put berries between.—Marie Kennedy.

Ham and Potato Pie

1 cupful cream, or white sauce, 2 cups cold potatoes, 1½ cups cold boiled ham chopped fine, not ground; 1 cup dried bread crumbs browned in a little butter. Butter a vegetable dish, put in a layer of potatoes then one of ham and pour part of the sauce over, and continue until all ingredients are used, putting bread crumbs on top. With a cup of coffee and a dessert this makes a full meal.—F. P. Sperry.

Nature's Laws Supreme.

If the roads had been muddy one day, some of our ancestors would have failed to attend a gathering which they did attend, and had they failed to attend such gathering, would not have met others of our ancestors, and the whole chain of their lives and of the lives of their offspring would have been broken. We would not be the identical persons we are today. So it is true that everything in the world today is as it is, every human being in the world today is as he or she is, because of the millions of details that took place—because of the little "happenings" in the lives of others. The chain of human existence has followed the laws laid down; we are what we are, therefore, because of nature's laws.—Columbus Dispatch.

A surprise party was given on Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Price and Mr. Ellison, 426 Powell avenue, Thursday evening, June 13. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ross Patton, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Tharp, Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Wheeler and daughter, Vera Louise, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cooley and daughter, Martha Jane and Mr. and Mrs. Bliss Brown. A very enjoyable evening was spent and refreshments were served.

The beginning of the artificial eye is a small glass tube with a bulb in the middle which is kept hot and soft during the process. The workman cuts off one end and seals the opening with the blowpipe. This leaves a hollow bulb on the end. He then enlarges the bulb at will by gradually blowing into the tube. This he does at intervals, while applying melted glass of different colors at the end of the bulb. By artistic manipulation he counterfeits the delicate effects of coloration observed in the human eye. He adds special glass to imitate its peculiar whitish opacity, and even reproduces the little red veins. Finally he cuts off the front half of the bulb with sharp scissors, which requires only to have its edges made smooth to form the finished eye.

The Champion K. P.

"And how did you get that medal?" she asked of the decorated hero. "For being the best potato peeler in our company," was the modest reply.

Mrs. Amanda Simpson, 85, widow, mother of Mrs. Hattie Carry, 434 S. Wheatland Ave., died of complications on Monday, June 16. The funeral services were held Wednesday at Oakley Avenue Baptist church. Burial in Green Lawn.

AUTO. THIEVES

Break Open a Hilltop Garage and Steal Mr. Murphy's Machine, But Abandon it After an Accident

Thieves broke into the garage of Mr. Robert Carnahan, 2033 West Broad street, on Tuesday night and succeeded in stealing the $1700 6-cylinder Buick automobile belonging to Mr. Clarence Murphy, 2005 W. Broad, a traveling salesman for the Erner-Hopkins Co., this city. They gained entrance by breaking the lock on the garage door, after which they took the side lights off Mr. Carnahan's machine that stood in the garage with Mr. Murphy's machine, using them to give light while at work, instead of the garage electric lights. They also blinded the windows. Before departing with the machine they stole about 20 gallons of gasoline, even draining Mr. Carnahan's machine of what gasoline it contained.

This is the third attempt to steal Mr. Murphy's machine within the past year, the other times being unsuccessful, as they only got away with a tire and other small articles. Mr. Murphy has been keeping his machine locked nearly all the time, but they took off the transmission and removed the tap. Mr. Murphy has been out of the city since Sunday. No clue has as yet been established. The thieves after leaving the garage turned eastward.

LATER. As we go to press Thursday morning, we learn that the thieves after meeting with an accident by running in some obstruction which tore off one wheel and slightly damaged the machine otherwise, abandoned it, after which it was taken to the police station.

Miss Laura Rodgers of Jackson, Ohio, visited a few days with her sister, Mrs. F. Keller, 100 N. Harris avenue, on her way home from Barberton, Ohio, where she has been teaching school.

Boys' heavy sole tennis shoes, $2.25. Charles Houx Shoe Store.

Mrs. L. F. Smoot and children returned home last Friday after ten weeks' visit with relatives and friends in Staunton, Va., and Lynchburg, Va. They had quite a splendid visit.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Burgess Avenue U. B. church are giving a lawn fete Thursday evening, June 26th at 489 S. Harris Ave., the hame of Mr. Rocky. Ice cream 10c and cake 5c extra.

Miss Fanny Maddy, piano teacher, gave a recital last Friday at the Hill Crest Baptist church. The pupils gave a very good entertainment to quite a number of people who were present. Those in the recital were Helen Coontz, Bess Adele Bishop, Elene Fadley, Dorothy Buell, Evalyn Natross, Roger Gable, Ruth Dowler, Robert Voltz, Ruth Montgomery, Jennie Krull, John Bishop, Helen Caldwell, Lester Wymer, Minnie Veyhl, Hazel Walters and Mabel Wells.

Rev. E. B. White and family are spending a few days at Hillsboro, Ohio.

Children's Day will be celebrated at the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church on Sunday night at seven o'clock. The Bible School has prepared a special program of music and recitation. There will be baptism of infants and the entire program promises to be very interesting. All are given a cordial invitation to attend.

Dr. N. E. Davis, Financial Secretary of the St. Luke's Hospital of Cleveland, was the Centenary speaker at the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church last Sunday night. He took as his subject: "Modern Miracles and Medical Science." Arrangements have been made to have another Centenary speaker next Sabbath morning. This is a rare privilege to hear some of the most excellent speakers of Methodism.

A "Dry" Time

Mr. Elroy Dry and others went fishing out to Big Darby last Sunday. After the usual quiet program of that kind of an affair had been partly gone through with, the waters, fishermen and atmosphere were disturbed by the sudden appearance of a "something" which had been "hooked." With visions of whale, shark, submarine, etc., the bunch bravely stood their ground and attempted to land IT. They could not pull it in. Neither could they get behind it and push it to shore. Finally some natives of that neck of the woods came along with pitchforks and jabbed them through its "gizzard," and succeeded in landing it. Our fishermen then made them a "present" of it, which was a 21 pound catfish—so they said. The band then played and they came home.

Men's fine Silk Caps, $1.50. Chas. Houx Furnishing Store.

Married

A pretty wedding was solemnized last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Young, 64 Midland Ave., when their daughter Leta V. Young became the bride of Mr. Walter R. Furbay, of Mt. Gilead, Ohio. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Guy Furbay of Ridge-Farm, Ill., brother of the groom. After the wedding a dinner was served to the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Furbay will be at home at Mt. Gilead, Ohio.

Mr. Frank E. Todd, 2222 Sullivant Ave., and Miss Helen Grant, 122 S. Oakley Ave., were united in marriage Monday, June 16th, at the home of Rev. C. E. Turley. They are living at her home for the present. Mr. Todd is employed at the New First National Bank.

Men's Kool Cloth Hats, $1.25. Chas. Houx Furnishing Store.

Mrs. Prof. Reighley, 81 N. Terrace, is enjoying the company of her mother, Mrs. Fenton, and her cousin, Miss Blanche Fenton, both of Adams county.

The Woman's Society of the Hill Crest Baptist Church will hold their next meeting at the Sunday School picnic in Skidmore Woods, Saturday, June 28th.

WANTED—Ladies interested in the Nu-Bone corset or Nu-Bone corset work, address Miss Elizabeth Blackburn, 2446 W. Broad St. Bell Phone Hilltop 2893.

Barefoot sandles that wear, $1.50. Charles Houx Shoe Store.

Mr. Mason Morris, of 50 N. Warren Ave., long since discarded the rolling chair and is putting in about 10 hours a day at the bench. Look up his phone and ask him what KE-O-KA had to do with it.

On Saturday evening, June 28th, 1919, the members of Elm Hall Camp, No. 266, of the Woodman of the World, located on the Hilltop, at 2367½ W. Broad street, will give a big lawn fete on Broad street directly opposite Umbenhaur's drug store. The music will be furnished by the Columbian Orchestra, also of the Hilltop. These young men are making good and a very interesting program is to be expected. The tickets are 15c a piece and entitle the holder to ice cream and cake, or other refreshments, which will be served. Come one, come all! Help Boost the Hilltop.

Glenwood Camp R. N. A. celebrated a year of prosperity at their last regular meeting by giving a short musical program and serving a chicken dinner to about 100 neighbors and friends. With the year ending June 27 they have added 18 members to their list, have purchased a beautiful floor cloth, banners and staffs, have good attendance and pleasant times at all regular meetings. All R. N. A.'s are invited to meet with us the second and fourth Friday of each month.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Adams of 154 N. Warren Ave., entertained the former's mother a few days at the beginning of this week.

SKY-PILOTS ON THE HILL

A Series of Sketches of The Hilltop Ministers We Meet on Our Streets Daily

Rev. Herbert A. Handy was born in Mathews County, Virginia, on a farm near the Chesapeake Bay, and close to the historic Hampton Roads. His father was a carpenter, farmer and sea fisherman, working at these alternately. He was also a leader in the Friends church of his community.

Herbert grew up with a tender conscience, and at the age of eleven pressed his way unbidden to an altar of prayer, and though not getting satisfied at that time (because of improper instructions) he was converted shortly after. His father died when he (Herbert) was ten years of age, he being the youngest of eight children—six boys and two girls.

He availed himself of the educational advantages that were presented to him, and for a time worked on the farm, and at pound fishing—which is with a large net used along the coast in Chesapeake Bay.

At the age of seventeen years and eleven months he was definitely called of the Lord to preach the gospel, and from thence went about to prepare for that work. He graduated from the Cleveland Bible Institute, Cleveland, Ohio, in May of 1913, having preached some before that time. After that he took the pastorate of the Friends Church at Newport News, Va., where he served a term of four years. He then spent one year in the evangelistic work, after which he became pastor of the Highland Avenue Friends Church in September of 1918, where the work is going on nicely.

Should boys and girls have their own allowance, in proportion to the means of the parents, as soon as they are old enough to know the value of money? This is what many a parent has said in substance:

"Certainly. An allowance is the best safeguard against the habit of extravagance if the child is taught to spend the money judiciously and to keep a strict account of all expenditures. It is absurd to think that a boy is not capable of buying his own neckties or a girl her handkerchiefs. What if they do make mistakes? They can be taught to profit by them and they must learn to rely upon themselves sooner or later. Children like to be trusted and will seldom betray confidence."—Exchange.

If Robert Burns could have foreseen that the original manuscript of his poem, "Forlorn, My Love, No Comfort Near," all in his handwriting, would sell at auction in New York this year of grace for $60, perhaps he would have felt better—and in that case would not have written the poem.—Boston Globe.

Mr. and Mrs. Schoonover of 163 N. Warren Ave., visited friends in Findlay and vicinity the first of last week.

A telegram has been received by Mr. and Mrs. A. Russell, 158 N. Warren Ave., of the arrival of their son, Daniel, from over-seas at Camp Merritt, N. J.

Mrs. Chas. E. Zinn, 2305 West Broad street, entertained with a birthday dinner Thursday evening, June 19th, in honor of her daughter, Marie. Those present were Miss Grace Curran, Miss Ruth Marshall, Mr. Joe Wyman, Mr. Graham Watts and Mr. Walter King.

By Indirect Method

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The fact is that Kate Perkins did occasionally "listen in" to the conversations that went on over the wires that formed a network before her over the switchboard at the Dawkins plant. What else did those round eyes of blue indicate but an unquenchable curiosity—not a malicious, prying sort of curiosity, but a perfectly open and guileless desire to know as much as she could about as many of the people who worked at the plant as was possible? Otherwise Kate would have found those long hours irksome. Her work would have been a supreme monotony.

As it was, there was nothing monotonous. The switchboard was transformed into the field for the most interesting excursions into the study of human nature. But Kate didn't get this information about her fellow workers with an intent to spread it broadcast or to gossip; she got it merely for her own inner satisfaction and entertainment.

Besides having very round blue eyes, Kate had long black eyelashes that shaded those eyes and a pink and white complexion that somehow did not lose its freshness in spite of the long hours at the switchboard.

The fact is there was quite a lot of feminine appeal about Kate, enough to have secured for her some dozen or so of admirers among the force at the Dawkins plant. Hildreth Jones, right-hand man to the elder Dawkins, was among them. Now Hildreth was no outspoken man enough when it came to business matters, and there was little that indicated timidity about him in the way he "carried on" for the Dawkins interests, but when it came to proceeding with his courtship of Kate he evaded the direct method.

It would have seemed absurd, he reflected, to ask Kate to accompany him to a show when by chance a show did come to the town where the Dawkins plant was located. Hildreth had no false notions of his own social importance.

He felt no concern at having fallen victim to the charms of so humble a personage as the telephone operator If it came to that he would not have hesitated in marrying her, but he was not at all eager to have it known that he had been rejected by her.

Hildreth felt the best way to go about it was by the indirect method. He would first let her know of his regard, let her know also his prospects and the fact of his loneliness in this town so far away from his home. If he could let her know these things in some indirect way he felt somehow she would be clever enough and kind enough to let him know how she felt toward him without actually bringing him to a declaration.

Hildreth was not long in devising his plan and his accomplice was his elder sister. Stella Dawkins did her bit toward carrying out the project, though of course she didn't know it at the time. On arriving in the small manufacturing town in response to the elder Dawkins taking him on as his general manager, Hildreth Jones had been unable to find accommodations in the already overcrowded hotel, and so it was that he was harbored in the old-fashioned Dawkins mansion, given a latchkey and made to feel free to come and go unnoticed and undisturbed by any of the Dawkinses.

Occasionally, of course, Hildreth did see Stella, the only daughter, and less often the stately Mrs. Dawkins, who apparently did not regard the fact that he was so closely associated in business with her husband as a reason why she should extend to him any sort of social cordiality.

"If a letter comes for me from home please call me up," Hildreth asked the housekeeper one morning when he had worked out his plot; but when the letter did arrive the next day the housekeeper was out, and it was Stella's musical but rather formal tones that came to him over the wire. Hildreth took it for granted that Kate was "listening in" at the time. That was the whole point in having his sister write as she did.

Stella informed him that the special delivery had arrived; Hildreth asked her to open it and read it. He rather hesitated in having to ask her to perform this service for him, but it was essential to his plot. The letter was full of sympathy—he had told this intriguing sister of his to make it so.

She assured him that she knew how lonely he must be, assured him, too, that she could tell from his letter that the step he contemplated was partly due to his loneliness, but that, as he was secure in his income, if not from his position at least from the family estate which had now been adjusted, she thought it was quite time that he take the step; assured him, too, that if the person in question felt well disposed toward him she would show her feelings in some way.

This was all the more or less vague, of course, but distinct enough, Hildreth thought, so that Kate would understand as she overheard the reading of the letter.

That evening Hildreth hurried past Kate as she sat at the switchboard. One of the shipping clerks, who ought to have been working at the time, was leaning over the switchboard and Hildreth's feeling was one not so much of jealousy as of annoyance that the young woman whom he had chosen as his ideal of loveliness should permit that particular sort of familiarity.

Stella Dawkins was in the spacious center hall of the old mansion as he entered the house, and he would gladly have passed her as hurriedly as he had passed Kate, but she detained him. He was beginning now to feel especially sorry that he had asked her to read the letter.

The housekeeper might not have taken note of the words she read, but somehow he was sure that Stella Dawkins had made mental comment on every one. Unconsciously he made a comparison between the rather too formal charm of this young woman and the more obvious attractions of Kate.

Strangely enough, however, Stella asked him to stay with her and her mother for dinner that night, instead of going, as usual, to the hotel. After dinner, as he sat rather weary from his day's work in the spring gloaming in the old Dawkins drawing room, Stella sang low-pitched old melodies that in spite of their mellowness were strangely disquieting. When he rose to go up to his room in the wing of the old house Stella rose and stood for a moment before him as he started to leave the room. She held out her hand to him.

"Good night, Mr. Jones," she said. That was all that Hildreth could remember, but in the way she said it and in the expression of her brown eyes there was something even more disquieting than in the music of her voice when she sang.

In the week that followed Hildreth was a frequent guest in the Dawkins drawing room. Meantime, though he made a point to linger rather longer than usual beside the round-eyed Kate, he received none of the encouragement from that quarter that he had expected the letter from his sister would call forth.

Then one day Kate showed him the tiny solitaire that the shipping clerk had placed on her left hand, and, strangely enough, Hildreth felt no keen disappointment.

That night, after she had sung some of the songs that Hildreth especially liked, Stella suggested that they take a ramble in the old garden, where the lilacs had already begun to blossom beside the high stone wall that kept the garden apart from the noise and traffic that had grown up around the Dawkins mansion.

"There is no reason why you shouldn't tell me," Stella was saying to him, and somehow Hildreth felt that he had suddenly been lifted to a state of happiness that had nothing to do with the happiness that he once supposed was lodged within a pair of round blue eyes. "If I hadn't happened to read that letter from your sister I could never have known that you had been drawn to me as I had been drawn to you from the first. Perhaps you would never have told me. But now I am telling you."

It was really rather staggering that this distant, unapproachable Stella Dawkins should be there with him in the twilight telling him of a love that he had never even hoped to possess, but somehow, as Hildreth clasped her tapering hands in his and felt the strong pressure of those delicate fingers, he knew that this was indeed the love that he had been longing for.

WATCHES that go down through generations

We are frankly proud of this store's reputation as headquarters for time-pieces. We have literally timed the community. Our watches are ticking merrily away in homes everywhere. And what is more important still, these watches have kept CORRECT time. They have been something more than looks.

It is just as well to keep in mind that the purchase of a watch should be made with the greatest possible care. Watches are bought, not for one lifetime but for many. A time piece should be handed down from one generation to another—from father to son—indefinitely. And a good watch will give this service uncomplainingly.

We have in stock all standard makes and all in all types designs, from the highly specialized railroad timepiece to the delicate mechanism of the wrist watch for my lady of fashion.

We take more than ordinary care in showing you these watches. We, too, realize that a watch is an investment for the future.

Rings are very much the same—they must last. If gems fall from gem-set rings, the investment can scarcely be called a wise one. We therefore call your attention to the remarkably fine Guaranteed line from the house of W W W.—White, Wile and Warner, of Buffalo. They have a reputation that years of honest merchandising have built up.

The Future Mrs. Tevis

By ZONA FROST

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Patience leaned farther over the balustrade, and frankly listened. Not that she had ever intended to, but when one comes along unexpectedly and hears one's own name used freely and without warrant it is surely human nature to want to know what it is all about. Especially when matters have been at the high point of tension they had at the Quintards'.

Old Mme. Rossiter was calling with her married daughter Milly, and Milly was not in favor of Patience, or her position in the home of her wealthy aunt. She had her own younger sister to marry off, and the marriageable men in the little summer colony at Larchurst were reduced to the minimum. Archie Tevis was the first prize, and Patience had ignored him, with deliberate intent. Yet now she heard their names coupled in the gossip of old madame, who ruled like an autocrat over the other fluttering girls and women of the resort.

"Well, I'm in favor of it," she said flatly. "Archie's my nephew, and he needs balance and family ties, especially now, when his father is getting younger every day. Have you seen Tooker lately, Mrs. Quintard? He's fifty-four to my certain knowledge, and he looks about forty or younger. Been on the other side, all through the war, and it agreed with him. He's fit and handsome, and Archie can't hold a candle to him, I think. If I were a girl I'd make a straight play for the colonel."

Leaned Farther Over the Balustrade.

"Is he back?" asked Mrs. Quintard, pleasantly, "I thought he was in Washington."

"Yes, he's opened up Everglades. Going to make a big stock farm of it, I believe. Crazy over the rural life after too much war. You tell Patience for me to overlook Archie and make Tooker fall in love with her. I'll help all I can."

And here Patience stole back upstairs, along the broad, cool corridor and out on the upper porch. Here she sat in full view from the road, with rose vines and honeysuckles around her, and just as attractive in her white linen smock as she could be, with its knots of black velvet ribbon here and there, and one perky bow, like a Chippewa maiden's tribal feather, pointing upward from her brown hair.

Archie and his father rode horseback slowly, while the colonel lectured.

"You're twenty, sir, and a cub. I've seen lads three years younger than you leading their men through hell, sir, and making good on it. You're afflicted with leisure, and no definite aim in life, and now I hear you've had a serious love affair with Molly Quintard's niece. Who the devil is she?"

"There she is, dad," drawled Archie, provokingly, but with a twinkle in his eye, as he nodded his head toward Patience on the upper porch. No danger that she would take the trouble to lift her head and speak to him. He felt he was quite safe, and Colonel Tevis turned his handsome head toward destiny quite as fearlessly as he had ever looked in the face of danger.

Patience had seen them when they first rode down the hill road, but she had read her book deliberately until she felt the gaze of some one, not Archie, but a compelling gaze that forced her to meet it. And slowly she bowed her head as the two men raised their caps to her, but not before she had felt the color rise to her cheeks.

"Do you blame me, dad?" Archie asked daringly, as he noted his father's silence. "Pretty impressive girl, isn't she?"

"Use a different tone," ordered the colonel, with a smile of intuition. "If she'll have me, Arch, I'm going to cut you flat. She was abroad a year ago with the Leslie Deans of Louisville. I met her in Paris at one of the Red Cross affairs, and if she's been at all decent to you, sir, I can tell you now it was on account of your father. She knows that she can be the future Mrs. Tevis whenever it pleases her to give me the least encouragement. She's the image of her Aunt Molly at her age, and I never loved any other girl but Molly."

"Why not marry Molly now and leave Patience to me," suggested Archie, savagely.

"Because you're idle and not fit for any girl to marry. Go to work and drop this social game here, Arch, and I'll give you a chance to win her from me. Meantime I give you warning."

The next two months Larchurst wondered and pondered just what Patience intended doing with the colonel. He had become her most devoted admirer, or, as Arch put it more neatly, "Dad's got the inside track." Archie had gone to work daily in the city. Doggedly he had taken up the challenge to make good, but evenings he shared Patience's society with the colonel, and when he grouched at his work his father would laugh and tell him to quit if he liked. He was winning, anyhow.

But he watched the boy keenly, and saw that he was holding his own at the office game and had the makings of a good soldier in him, after all. The eighth week he found Patience alone on the upper porch. He was tired, after cinching two contracts for the firm that warranted a steady salary for himself and the surety of his place in the firm, but he had a determination about him that was new and his second proposal was far different from his first.

"I'm not a bit blind," he told her. "I know dad's in love with you, too, and that you can take either of us. I'm just the cub, I suppose; but, Patience, we're both young, and even if we do fight and disagree and have troubles, won't it be worth while to start life together and build?"

Patience smiled up at him from the porch hammock, swinging on long iron chains from the roof.

"Last time you said you could make your father hand you over enough for us to live on until he passed along," she said. "You've grown more the past two months than you ever did all your life before, Arch. I'm going to say yes."

"Who'll ever break the news to dad?" said Arch gloomily, after the most wonderful five minutes of his life. "I just can't tell him that he's lost you, dear."

"I will," said Patience laughing at him. "We arranged the whole thing in Paris, Arch, just to see if we couldn't make you a real husband."

Centenary Scripture Cake

1 cup butter, Judges 5:25; 3 cups of sugar, Jer. 6:20; 1 cup water, Gen. 24:17; 3½ cups flour, I Ki. 4:22; 2 cups of figs, I Sam. 30:12; 2 cups raisins, I Sam. 20:12; 1 cup almonds, Gen. 43:11; 6 eggs, Isa. 10:14; 1 pinch salt, Lev. 2:13; 1 tablespoonful honey, Num. 13:27; spices to taste, I Ki. 10:15. Follow Solomon's advice for making a good boy, and you will have a good cake.—Prov. 13:24. — Mrs. Jennie De Bloom.

Hot Water Sponge Cake

Yolks of 4 eggs, 1½ cups sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, grated rind of half a lemon, two-thirds cup of hot water, 2 cups flour, half teaspoon salt, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, whites of 4 eggs.

Beat egg yolks until thick, add half the sugar gradually, and continue beating with a Dover beater; add the lemon juice and grated rind and the remaining sugar, then stir in the hot water, add flour, baking powder and salt sifted together, stirring only enough to blend thoroughly; beat whites stiff and fold in carefully; bake slowly in unbuttered tin lined with waxed paper.—Mrs. F P. Sperry.

Sunshine Strawberry Preserves

Weigh up equal parts sugar and strawberries, put in stew pan one layer of berries then one layer of sugar, and so on till you have the amount you want; boil 10 minutes then pour on plates and set in sun for three days.—Mrs. Houx.

Pickled Green Beans

Cook beans in clear water; be careful not to cook too soft; then drain and spread out to cool. When cold pack in crock—put grape leaves in bottom of crock; then a layer of beans and sprinkle with salt, then another layer of beans, and so on until jar is full; press down with your hands as you pack them; then put a layer of grape leaves on top, and cover with cold water that has been boiled; put on weight and set in a cool place to Sour. —Mrs. Houx.

George was known to his neighbors as one of those mountaineers who never engage in any form of labor, except as the opportunity offers itself to make "moonshine licker." His wife, Lena, was never idle, and looked upon her husband, the trifling George, as the one grand man, and could never explain to herself why she had been so extremely fortunate as to marry him. Hence she was always anxious to make the most plausible excuse for any of his shortcomings to which her attention was directed. One summer day when the noonday sun was broiling down upon a small cornfield, and Lena was vigorously hoeing, a passer-by inquired why George, who was on the porch attempting to "fiddle," was not hoeing the corn. "Wall, you know," said Lena, "the hoe 'anel, hit don't fit George's han'."—Everybody's Magazine.

The Kind-Hearted Apple Tree.

What a kind heart an apple tree must have! What generous work it makes of blossoming! It is not content with a single bloom for each apple that is to be; but a profusion, a prodigality of blossom there must be. The tree is but a huge bouquet; it gives you 20 times as much as there is need for, and evidently because it loves to blossom. How one feels his childhood coming back to him, when, emerging from the hard city streets, he sees orchards and gardens in sheeted bloom—plum, cherry, peach, pear and apple, waves and billows of blossoms rolling over the hillsides, and down through the levels! This is a kingdom of glory. The bees know it. Are the blossoms singing, or is all this humming sound the music of bees? Such a sight is equal to a sunset, which is but a blossoming of the clouds.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Married

Miss Mildred Kiger, of N. Harris Ave., and Mr. Harold Wheeler, of S Warren Ave., were united in marriage June 25 at the home of Rev. Brokaw of the Oakwod M. E. Church. They are at home for the present at 239 S. Warren Ave.

"Well, Well!"

Oh, boy! They're drilling a well at No. 17 Engine House, right at the corner of Broad and Wheatland. With visions of "town pump," "Rebekah at the well," etc., we await the coming of an abundant supply of sparkling, cold water which will bring satisfaction to the "hot pipes" of many a weary Hilltopper these hot days. Chief Daniels and Councilman M. W. Westlake are the "boys" who've made this a reality. Let's give them a rising vote of thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Emrick, of 500 S. Warren Ave., motored to Buckeye Lake on Thursday of last week and spent the day enjoying the various amusements.

The Docile Sheep.

Sheep are quiet things on the track; but they rush sometimes, and I've seen them flatten a wire fence more than once, says a writer in the Sydney Bulletin. One night a mob rushed over me. They'd been feeding down a slope, and I was crowding them back when a dingo made a stir among them at the top. I stumbled over one jumbuck just as the whole flock started full rip down the hill. A sheep hasn't got very big feet and it isn't very heavy; all the same, it's no matter for congratulation being under a lot of them at once. However, after about a dozen had stumbled over me there came a bit of a break, which allowed the next flier to see the obstruction in front of him. He jumped, and thereafter every one, whether it saw me or not, made a bound at the same place—with the exception of a couple at the tail end, which jumped too soon and landed on top of me.

Gallant Priest.

The witty parish priest of Ballybrack, Father Healy, once had an encounter with Gladstone that resulted in a spirited exchange of pleasantries. According to a contributor in the Boston Transcript, the statesman, in order to tease Father Healy, told him that once when he was visiting Rome he had been offered a plenary indulgence for eight or ten lire. Father Healy immediately rejoined that all he could say was that Mr. Gladstone was being "let off very lightly."

One of the characteristics of this genial priest was his gallantry—a trait that shows he was a true Irishman. On one occasion Father Healy had met at Bray Station a young lady—one of the Dublin belles—in a donkey trap. She was in an exhausted condition and explained that her donkey, on the way to the station, had taken fright and run away with her.

"Faith, then he is no ass," said Father Healy to the pretty girl.

Queered His Chances.

"I thought Jess was going to marry old Gotrox."

"She was, but she broke off the engagement."

"What for?"

"When she accepted him he told her she had put new life into him." Boston Post.

Mr. H. B. Coleman, of this city, will speak at Glenwood Shelter House on July 8 at 8 o'clock on "The Virtue of Home Building," under auspices of the Hilltop Improvement Association. All are earnestly requested to be there that have an interest in the welfare of the Hilltop.

SKY-PILOTS ON THE HILL

A Series of Sketches of The Hilltop Ministers We Meet on Our Streets Daily

Rev. Arthur E. Cowley was born in military quarters, in Newcastle-on-Tyne, England. His father was an officer in the British army.

He was converted at seven years through the Salvation Army. As a school boy he spent a good deal of his spare time on the Newcastle Town Moor either reciting on the temperance platform or at securing temperance pledges. He preached his first sermon when 13 years of age. For years he was known in that part of England as "the boy preacher. He entered Rutherford College, but shortly after was compelled to relinquish his ambitions for an education for awhile and seek employment whereby he could earn a few shillings a week, and thus help to sustain the home of a widowed mother and fatherless children. He afterwards attended the Moody Bible Institute, from which he graduated as the youngest student in its history. He also graduated from Doane Academy, attended Denison University, and is now a Junior at Ohio State University.

On February 8, 1918, he was married to Miss Esther B. Williams, of Newark, Ohio. Mrs. Cowley is a teacher at the Highland Avenue School.

Although but a young man, Mr. Cowley has seen considerable service. He served as associate pastor in Chicago, Was organizer and pastor of the Second Baptist Church at Newark, Ohio. Has been pastor at Hill Crest Baptist Church since last October. This church is becoming famous for spirituality and soul winning.

Anyone interested in the opening of a Kindergarten, starting Monday, July 7th, continuing one month, call Hilltop 2572 before Saturday noon.

Just as we go to press we are informed of the birth, to Rev. and Mrs. Richard E. Shields, of a son, Alan Edwin. He was born on July 3d, at Grant Hospital, and weighs 7 pounds and 14 ounces.

Mrs. J. K. Baldwin and family, of 149 N. Eureka avenue, spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Will Evans at Portage, Ohio.

Jane and Katherine Lee in "Smiles" next Saturday afternoon and night at the Empire Hilltop.

Mr. Walter King, of 31 S. Ogden Ave., has left for Philadelphia, Pa., to study piano under Prof. Constantin Von Sternheigh.

Memorial Service at Camp Chase

The services at the Camp Chase cemetery were attended by a very big attendance last Saturday, June 28. Dr. Durham, from a university in Atlanta, Georgia, gave a splendid address. There were many flowers and an American flag was placed at the head of each one of the 2,260 graves.

Mrs. Jennie Dell, of Athens, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ogg, 135 N. Warren avenue a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Busick and daughter, Bernice, of Grover Hill, O., spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Kohn.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Palmer, of Jackson, Ohio, have been visiting at the home of Mrs. Robert Lane, 247 Midland avenue, and also visited Mr. C. Palmer and family of Lechner avenue.

Young Men's Bible Class

A special classroom for young men above the age of 19 is being installed by the West Side Lumber Company in the basement of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church in which the Young Mens Bible Class of the Bible School will begin to hold meetings next Sunday, July 6th. The pastor of the Church has been released from the Men's Bible Class to teach the young men. The class is being organized along the lines of the most approved methods of Young Men's work and by fall a live and working organization is promised. The class room in which they will meet is located in the north end of the basement. Black-boards, maps and pictures will be part of the equipment. Plans are being considered for a tennis court and other athletic activities are to be on the program. The most vital questions of the young man of today will be discussed in class sessions and any one who does not already belong to some class or organization of this kind is cordially invited to attend on Sunday morning.

HONEST PEOPLE IN MAJORITY

Experiment Made by New York Newspaper Would Seem to Prove Fact Beyond Dispute.

A widely known New York newspaper some time ago had one of its representatives take twelve pocketbooks, each containing a nominal sum of money, some checks that were to all appearances perfectly good, a few papers of legal nature, apparently valuable, and the address of the owner. At different sections of the city, including the Bowery, the East side, the lower West side, business localities, residential sections; all kinds were included—he would slip one of these purses out of his pocket and walk briskly along about his business.

Everywhere he went, someone would either pick the purse up or call his attention to it, but by perseverance he succeeded in "losing" the entire twelve without being noticed.

During the next week nine of the twelve were mailed to him—contents intact! Yet some of us immediately mistrust a man who kicks about a balance of $4.50.—From System.

THE GOLDEN BARRIER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

From his window overlooking the village square Attorney John Stephens had seen the springs of 40 years work their magic spell on the gray grass left after the receding snows. He was the only lawyer in the town, and the secrets hidden under his white hair were the secrets of generations. He knew the stories and lives of his people, and their interests were his.

So, when he saw a dapper, stylish, polished man come up the street from the station he became suspicious, knowing the type that spread trouble wherever they go. He saw the man was coming to the office.

He did enter, greet the lawyer cordially and skillfully state his mission. He wished to engage Stephens to act as the local attorney for his firm at a salary that made the old attorney start.

"Just what do you want in return for that salary?" Stephens asked.

With assurance the other explained, and Stephens, old in the ways of men, read the purpose.

"Mr. Amiens," the old lawyer said quietly, "I have read that in your city there is a firm that offered to sell postholes, and the proposition you have is worse than that. You should be jailed for representing it. My advice to you is to go [illegible] the people here

The other smiled. "Sorry, but I can't accept your invitation. I have other business here. In fact, I was asked to come."

Stephens watched the well-groomed figure cross the street and enter a store over which was the sign, "William Joslyn." With a grunt of disgust the lawyer leaned back.

"So Will is after another scheme to get rich fast," he said to himself, and lapsed into musing.

The romance of the village was centered in William Joslyn and Emma Adams. Emma had inherited the wealth of her father and lived in the old mansion on the hill. William had loved her, and still did; and she loved him—of that the old attorney was certain.

The one thing that stood between Will and her was her money. Whether she knew that or not, Stephen did not know. He sighed over the matter, had chatted with William, but that firm, quiet, old-fashioned and set individual could not see how he could live upon his wife's money and keep his own respect—and he had little money of his own.

Now, so the lawyer mused, he was probably going into a get-rich-quick scheme to get the money he wanted in order to have the right to speak to Emma.

"It's a queer world and there are a lot of queer people in it," Stephens said as he rose from his chair.

That evening he met the calm-faced, patient Joslyn and warned him against investing in the Starr Investment company. Joslyn thanked him for his advice, and then went on to say that he had invested in it—all he had.

"You stand to lose every cent of it," the lawyer said.

"I stand to win, too. I am tired of waiting for my ship. I am going out to meet it," was the quiet answer.

"Tired of waiting," the lawyer said to himself as he went to his office for his evening smoke. "He'll have a longer wait still."

Three months went by, and then came the shock. He discovered that there was a rumor around the village that Emma had invested all her fortune in the Starr company. The old lawyer, getting the rumor straight, immediately set out for the Adams home.

Like some picture of other days come to life she came to meet him, as simple, honest and beautiful as one of her roses.

He asked her anxiously about the situation—whether it was true that she had invested in the firm. She nodded. Stephens looked at her in despair and wrath. "Miss Adams, your father and his father trusted me. Why did you not come to me for advice? That firm is a gang of crooks [illegible] within the law and just a statute or two out of jail. You will lose every cent—and I know it."

She was smiling into her lawyer's eyes, and she said simply, "I am not worrying."

He stared at her, wondering, but when he was on the way home he guessed the reason behind her madness.

"Of all wild dreams of foolish hearts in love! She wants to lose the money so that chump of a Puritan Joslyn will ask her to marry him; and that fool to get rich, so he can, has invested in the same crazy scheme—good heavens!" the angry lawyer stuttered to himself.

Once more in his office, he slammed down his hat and stood in thought—to be aroused by his telephone. He answered it and heard Miss Emma's sweet voice say, an odd note of pleasure in it, "Dear old friend, I just got my mail; and they write me that for several reasons the investment failed and my money is gone."

He dropped the receiver with a groan. "And you want me to get the word to Joslyn! Never, I'll get the money back!"

To plan was to act; and the evening train carried the old lawyer to the city miles away. The next morning he was hot on the trail of the Starr Investment company.

He found them, and grimly held on until he was ushered into the splendid private office of Amiens, who greeted him with the same smooth manner as months ago in the office in the village.

Swiftly the old attorney told his errand and his purpose—to save for Miss Emma Adams the fortune her father had won by hard toil; and as quietly as ever the lawyer spoke the promoter explained why the money could not be reached.

Stephen rose, his white hair ruffled, his eyes aflame, knowing himself defeated. "You and your kind shielded by the law though you are, should be hanged! You—you—"

"Wait," said the other. "We have some sentiment sir, at least. I was in love once myself. Besides, our business is a big one."

The lawyer stood, puzzled by the words, and watching the while fingers searching through some papers.

"What we have done, my dear sir, is so to arrange matters that, in a word, the money Miss Emma invested with us is credited to the account of Mr. Joslyn [illegible] the certified check

Found in Thought.

we are selling Mr. Joslyn. You see, there was a bit of romance in my own life, and I heard the story of Emma and Will while in your pleasant village, and after verifying facts, I thought we might do this. I imagine when the facts come out, there will be a marriage in your town. William's investment succeeded, Emma's failed. You get the idea? And now, would you care to act for us in your village?"

The old lawyer looked into the smiling, inscrutable face. "Act for you? Never! But I'll take your case on the last judgment day! Good day!"

The Entertained Stranger

By E. B. HACKLEY

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The Homer Fergusons, father and five sons, tenants of Joseph Davin, were celebrating what old Homer called "rushin' some thousands o' terbaccer plants in ten acres o' ground," by a dance at the big old house that was the old home of Joseph Davin, now given up to tenants.

Zoeruyda Starr, bashful, olive-skinned, wistful-eyed, slipped out in the yard where, by a bent old iron bench, an immense clump of white June lilies flowered.

"Oh, the pretty, pretty things," she murmured happily as their fragrance met her.

Most of the pretty things of life that should have been Zoe's were appropriated by her sister, selfish Dolly. Cady Starr was not more proud of his office of constable than he was of his showy daughter, and Dolly managed to cajole him into giving her all that he could spare.

To Zoeruyda's surprise, Frank Rector, a newcomer, whom the Fergusons had hired to help in the tobacco crop, rose from the bench.

"Please sit down," he said, as she hesitated; "since I've been here I've been coming out every night to see the lilies open.

"My mother used to love them so. My mother," he answered the sympathetic question in her brown eyes—"I left my mother buried there in upper Ohio, three months ago, and I've been wandering about since. When I get so I can hardly stand doing without mother, I get out somewhere, where there are flowers—and—" he broke off and sat down on the bench beside her.

Zoe raised her timid eyes to his. "Sometimes," she faltered, "sometimes, even when I'm working, I get to thinking I can't stand things, and I just drop my work and run out where we've got a little flower garden, and then in a few minutes I'm all right!"

At the end of an hour Rector rose. "I am ashamed to have kept you," he apologized, "but I—I forgot the dance. It's not—not everybody I can talk to about my mother."

He held out to her a spray of the lilies, and Zoe noticed that across the back of his hand there was a long white scar.

"Young Rector seems to like your pa awful well," Mrs. Starr remarked a few days afterward. "He's dropped in to talk to him three nights this week. But just wait, Zoe, when Dolly comes home, he'll come ever' evenin'!"

"When Dolly comes home Saturday he won't ask me to show him the flowers any more!" thought Zoe, in a sort of resigned despair. "Dolly is so pretty—she takes everybody!"

On Saturday evening, when young Rector stepped upon the Starr porch, he met a vision with silky yellow hair waving about its milk-white face, its dancingly mischievous eyes blue as harebells, its slim, lithe figure enveloped in white organdie, with a blue sash the color of its eyes—Dolly herself.

Next morning there came a letter to Mrs. Starr. Tommy, her eight-year-old grandson, was sick of fever.

"Send me one of the girls for a month, please, mother," Myrtella's letter pleaded.

"I don't see how I can do without Zoe!"

"You can't—you won't," began her mother, then stopped.

"Myrtella—maybe she'd rather have you than Zoe," she ended lamely. But Zoe went.

"He'll never think of me again," Zoe told herself, with wet eyes on her way to her sister's; "Dolly won't let him!"

Soon after exultant letters came to Zoe. "I went buggy-riding with Frank Rector—he took me to the Sunday school picnic," Dolly wrote. "Frank took me to the ice cream supper Friday night, and to the show at town Saturday night."

In the fourth week Mrs. Starr sent for Zoe.

"I've been countin' the days until I could get you home," she told her. "Dolly's no help on account o' bein' so persecuted with beaux. Zoe! After the tobacco's housed in September," she smiled prudefully, "Dolly's goin' to marry that fellow Rector, and all the other girls have been tryin' so hard to catch him!" Zoe turned that her mother might not see her whitening face. "He's goin' to take her out to Ohio," Mrs. Starr went on. "A man there where he used to live's give him a good job."

Two weeks before the day set for the wedding Mrs. Letitia Prince, Mrs. Starr's sister, gave a "big dinner" to the prospective bride and bridegroom and twenty of their friends. Dolly, resplendent in a pale blue silk, bought heaven knows why, with the rest of her wedding finery, sat beside her betrothed at table.

Zoe, meutely pretty in a pink [illegible] her sister's, waited on the table, and once, seeing Rector's eyes on the young waitress' wistful face, Dolly regretted the loan of the pink dress.

While they were seated at table the mail carrier came in, bringing a letter to "The Constable of Davin."

"Arrest on sight," it read, "Roscoe Beni, escaped convict; gray eyes, curling lashes; hair blue-black and thick; scar across back of right hand." Signed, "Warden Michigan State Prison."

A blackness came before Zoe's eyes as she looked over her father's shoulder at the photograph that accompanied the letter.

Starr read the description again, and turned to Rector.

"Ever been in Michigan, Frank?" he asked.

"No!" A hot flush enveloped Rector.

"Sure your name ain't Roscoe Beni?"

"Sure, sir!"

"Well, this here's your picture," Starr's voice rose in wrath, "and this description fits you like a glove. You durn scoundrel, what do you mean, convict as ye are, courtin' my Dolly? Come here a minute and we took ye in and ascertained ye! In the name of the law I arrest ye!"

Frank laid his hand on Dolly's arm. "You don't believe that of me, Dolly?"

"Don't touch me!" she cried. "Go away! Go away! I don't want a convict around me!"

Two hours later Rector, sitting in the jail, but with outraged innocence, was brought a visitor. It was Zoe, her voile dress limp and dusty, her wrist wrapped in a blood-soaked handkerchief.

"I wanted to tell you," she panted, "I'm believing it's somebody else they're looking for. I slipped off and came the first minute I could. I couldn't bear for you to believe everybody was against you!"

Her face went suddenly ashen. Rector caught her as she swayed.

"You're hurt, Zoe; you're hurt!"

"Not much," she whispered against his shoulder, "but I've lost some blood, I reckon. I cut my wrist climbin' a barbed wire fence. I was tryin' to make a near cut across a field. It was so far to walk by the road and I—I didn't want you to think a minute longer than was necessary that I believed wrong of you like the others."

In that instant revelation came to Rector. His bruised heart righted itself.

"I telephoned Lawyer Allen from Mr. Davin's before I came to town," the girl went on tremulously, "and he says send on to the warden the prints of your fingers—they'd be different from those of the man he's looking for."

"Oh, Zoe—Zoe!" he breathed, and his arms tightened about her. Then he bent and kissed the wounded arm.

"Dolly never loved me," he cried, "but you—why didn't I know it before? Oh, Zoe, Zoe, I'm not good enough to ask you to let me love you!"

Two days later a telegram came to Constable Starr from the Michigan warden. "Prisoner not the same," it said. "Release him."

Five hours later there came another telegram from Ohio signed Frank Rector.

"Zoe believed enough in me yesterday to marry me today!" it said.

WATCHES that go down through generations

We are frankly proud of this store's reputation as headquarters for time-pieces. We have literally timed the community. Our watches are ticking merrily away in homes everywhere. And what is more important still, these watches have kept CORRECT time. They have been something more than looks.

It is just as well to keep in mind that the purchase of a watch should be made with the greatest possible care. Watches are bought, not for one lifetime but for many. A time piece should be handed down from one generation to another—from father to son—indefinitely. And a good watch will give this service uncomplainingly.

We have in stock all standard makes and all in all types designs, from the highly specialized railroad timepiece to the delicate mechanism of the wrist watch for my lady of fashion.

We take more than ordinary care in showing you these watches We, too, realize that a watch is an investment for the future.

Rings are very much the same—they must last. If gems fall from gem-set rings, the investment can scarcely be called a wise one. We therefore call your attention to the remarkably fine Guaranteed line from the house of W W W.—White, Wile and Warner, of Buffalo. They have a reputation that years of honest merchandising have built up.

Heathenism in Lithuania.

It is maintained that in certain parts of Lithuania, in isolated corners and secretly, the old rites of the heathen cult are observed even today. Almost every piece of furniture is beautifully ornate. The wood carving of the peasants is of marvelous delicacy and the gift they have for colors has already been remarked by the whole artistic world. In the long winter months such works are carried out by each member of the family, and reputations spread there as rapidly as elsewhere. The ability and the industry of the Lithuanians fathered the following proverb: "A Lithuanian goes into the forest leading his horse and returns from there with the horse harnessed to a carriage."

Had Long Sitting at Whist.

The curious fascination cards possess for their devotees is illustrated by the following story of Lord Granville, of the time England's ambassador to France: One afternoon, when he was about to return to Paris, he repaired to Graham's to have a farewell game of whist, ordering his carriage to be at the door at 4. When it arrived he was much too deep in the game to be disturbed. At 10 o'clock he sent out word that he was not ready and that the horses had better be changed. Six hours later the same message was sent out, and twice more the waiting horses were changed before he consented to leave the table, after losing £10,000.

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Becker of 249 S. Warren Ave. entertained Saturday evening, July 5th in honor of Mr. Albert Peifer and Mr. Starling Smith, who recently returned from overseas, and an aunt from Canton, Ohio. The evening was delightfully spent with music and dancing until the early hour of morning. Guests who gathered at the home were, Mr. Peter Becker, father of Mr. Chas. Becker who is in his 82d year, Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Starling Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ballintine and daughter, Mary, Mr. and Mrs. William Becker, Miss Hazel Becker, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Peifer, Mrs. Nettie Drugan, Mrs. Lizzie Ballintine, Mrs. Clara Thrush, Mrs. L. H. Zellars and son, Harold, Mrs. Carrie Wagner, Mrs. Minnie Matchine, Mr. Ray Kraus and Miss Alice Snider, Mr. Norman Becker, Charlotte Becker, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Roth, Mr. Carl Roth and the hostesses, Mr. and Mrs. Becker.

Miss Edith L. Robbins and her partner, Miss Ethel Greiser, of the School of Music, Bluefield, W. Va., having motored from Bluefield to Cincinnati, will reach Columbus Friday and spend a week with Dr. and Mrs. Robbins, 25 South Richardson Ave., and then after a week continue their trip in auto to New York and thence to Asbury Park, N. J., where they will remain until the first of September. Miss Edith's father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. Robbins will accompany them during the six weeks vacation. Dr. Robbin's pulpit will be supplied by able ministers during his absence after another Sunday.

A play was given last Monday evening at the home of Miss Anna Nowell. Mrs. Russel brought their Victrola over and some of their records which were played and enjoyed by all who attended. The play began at 8 o'clock and concluded at 8:30. Some of those who attended came in late and so the show was shown for the third time. The title was "In the Woods." They had beautiful customs. They charged 1 cent for the admission to get into the show. They made 41 cents which will be turned over to the Baby Camp.

The Fourth was celebrated by whom? Sixteen young people of the Hilltop as follows: Grace Curran, Ruth Marshall, Eda Kimes, Mary Kimes, Ruth Kimes, Norma Merritt, Marie Zinn, Gladys Auer, Graham Watts, Joe Wyman, Ralph Kimes, Glenn Hamilton, Harley Watts, Dana Marsh, Clyde Huston and Kenneth Dickerson.

Where? Along the beautiful banks of the Scioto.

What? Eats. A big picnic supper, lots of ice cream and cake, and a jolly good time.

A play was given last Thursday evening at the home of Miss Dorothy Strong, 90 North Warren Ave.

Dorothy had their Victrola brought out into the back yard. Mrs. Murhead brought over some of her best records which were played and enjoyed by all who attended. The admission to get into the show was 10 pins if they sat on the ground, but if they sat in the grandstand it was 15 pins. The names of the plays were, "The Butterfly Dance" which lasted half an hour, and the other was the "Vampire," which also lasted half an hour.

Miss Francis Oyler, N. Ogden avenue, who attended the state C. E. convention at Cleveland, returned Sunday after visiting several days with friends in Cuyahoga Falls and Akron.

Norval Hood, of Akron, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hood, N. Burgess Ave.

West Gate Lodge, No. 623, F. & A. M. Stated communication Monday evening, July 14th, at 7:30 o'clock.

Brethren of other lodges invited.

John Porter, W. M.

Attest: M. C. Grove, Secy.

Mr. David Russell has been discharged from military service after having served sixteen months with the A. E. F. in France.

He congratulates himself in that he did not experience the extreme hardships and privations that some of his less fortunate comrades were forced to endure, but candidly expresses his preference for civil life.

He is resting at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Russell, 158 N. Warren Ave., for a short time before engaging in civil activities once more.

K. of P. Picnic

The annual picnic of Westwood Lodge, K. of P. was held at Tom's Grove on July 4th. A large attendance was there. Automobiles carried the merry crowd to and from Hague and Broad to the grounds.

The day was spent in enjoying all the stunts that go with a day of this kind. The big events, however, were the races, ball game, etc. Some of the high spots of these events were D. B. Ulrey standing on his head for 5 minutes while contending in the pole race. Fred Postle is said to have lost about half of his shirt, and his wife was compelled to stop and mend it, in the needle threading contest.

Another event was the "pumping up" with a bicycle pump of Charlie Cunningham in the ball game to enable him to have sufficient wind to chase the ball.

It is said that the hot-shot pitching of Dolin, and Tom Hunter was "wonderful."

Dolby, the well-known Hilltop "cop" was on the job at the pop stand.

Charlie Kohn, the manager of the Hilltop Undertaking Company, had to be "pried" out of bed next morning after holding down second base in the ball game. Also N. H. Prior was so near being all in that he walked to work next morning instead of cranking his Ford.

After eating a big dinner, and enjoying supper also in the grove there wasn't enough "eats" left to stay for breakfast, so they thought best to start for home, with the wishes of "many happy returns of the day."

Miss Marie Raether who is connected with the Economy Variety Store, started on her vacation trip, Thursday morning to Hessel, Michigan, near Macinaw Island. We hope she will have an enjoyable trip and catch her share of fish.

Fred W. Postle and family of 48 Eldon Ave., leave Thursday on a three week's vacation. They expect to motor to Lakeside, Chicago, Southern Illinois, and other places before returning.

Patronize the Owl Restaurant at Buckeye Lake on the Hilltop picnic day. Run by Hilltop men—Messrs. Allen and Abram.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Churton and sons, John and Dan, of Huntington, W. Va., who have been visiting at the home of Mrs. Isabel Burnside, 39 N. Ogden Ave., spent several days this week visiting at the homes of Rev. Emannel Breeze, and J. C. Owen at Granville.

The Personal Workers class of Hoge Memorial Church held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. C. W. Finley on Whitethorne Avenue, Monday evening of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones, of Venendocia have been visiting at the home of their son, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Jones, 71 North Ogden Avenue the past week.

Mrs. Fowler of New Lexington, was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Sperry, 45 S. Harris Ave., Sunday, enroute to Grand Rapids, Mich., to visit her daughter, Mrs. Walter Sperry.

Mrs. Rose L. Hensel, 35 N. Warren Ave., chaperoned a house party at Buckeye Lake during the week of the 4th. Those making up the party were: Dorothy Hyde, Zelma Gain, Billy Shigley, Edith Pedrick, Princes Johnson, Ruth Crellin, Hilda Howard, Ruth Emmitt, Charlene Huling, Eugene Hensel, Gilbert Hyde, Harold Sperry, John Ruthford, Russell Forney, Earl Denser, Harry Judy, Edward Fahnley, and Earl Stewart.

Mr. C. H. Nowell, 147 N. Warren Ave., was sent to Lexington, Ky., for a few days the past week to substitute in another man's place in newspaper work.

Henry Lacey Smallwood, 75, died of cancer Saturday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Della Wright, 353 Clarendon Ave. Besides his daughter, he leaves one son. Funeral was held Monday afternoon at the residence. Burial in Alton Cemetery.

Mr. Lacey was one of the oldest residents on the Hilltop at the time of his death, having lived on or near the Hilltop all his life.

Mary Virginia, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Neff, Highland Ave., underwent an operation for the removal of adenoids and tonsils at the O. S. U. last week. She is convalescing at the home of her parents.

SKY-PILOTS ON THE HILL

A Series of Sketches of The Hilltop Ministers We Meet on Our Streets Daily

Rev. John M. Wenrich was born on a farm in Lancaster county, Pa., which is still the richest agricultural county in the United States. When 5 years old he was almost drowned by falling into a walled up running spring.

He was educated in the public schools of his native county; in Allentown Academy, and in the State Normal School at Millersville, Pa. He taught in public schools two years. Attending Muhlenberg College at Allentown, Pa., he graduated with honors from that institution; the same year winning a prize of $21.00 in gold in a competitive examination in natural and revealed religion.

He graduated from the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia, in 1891. In the same year he assume the pastorate of the Straitsville Parish in Fairfield county, Ohio, where he remained for 18 years. From 1909 to 1916 he was pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church, Wapakoneta, Ohio, which he resigned to accept the call as Field Missionary for the District of Columbus. In this capacity he organized the Hilltop English Evangelical Lutheran Church; which has grown to a Sunday School of over 100 in enrollment, and gathered in a communicapt membership of nearly 100. The church organization has secured the valuable and splendid lots at the corner of Broad street and South Terrace, upon which they expect soon to erect a part of their new church.

From 1897 to 1902 Mr. Wenrich was Secretary of his Synod, and from 1908 on, its treasurer, he having been reelected at its recent meeting for the 12th time.

He was married to Jeannette Meyers, of Stoutsville, in 1892, and has one daughter who is an accomplished musician. They reside at 120 Midland auenue.

The new well drilled at No. 17 Engine House is 81 feet deep. The drillers having went into several feet of limestone. It is said there are 42 feet of water in it. The water is fine.

Born, to Mr. nd Mrs. B. E. Johnston, 75 S. Wheatland Ave., on June 27th, a girl.

Miss Mildred Little of Canton, Ohio is visiting indefinitely with her school friend, Miss Marie Adams, 154 North Warren Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Christian of 162 N. Warren Ave., spent from Thursday till Sunday at Springfield, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Matheny, 179 N. Warren Ave., are entertaining the former's cousins, Mrs. Matheny and two children of Sugar Grove, Ohio.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Johnston, 75 Wheatland Avenue is dangerously ill at this writing.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society will meet at the home of Mrs. James A. Hill, 166 North Harris Avenue, Thursday, July 17th at 7:30 P. M. The society will begin the study of a new Text book—"The Path of Labor," which promises to be very interesting.

Mrs. J. W. Ham of 153 N. Harris Ave., is very sick at this writing.

Tri Mu

The red and blue contest is getting to be a hot affair. The blues are in the lead by a small majority. The red men are enthusiastic and want their side to win. A fine entertainment will be given by the losers and the Capt. of each side urges all those who can to be out every Sunday.

Just an explanation in regards to the rules of the contest. Members who had attended in the last eight weeks were put on one side or the other. The object is to get as many of the old members out as possible and bring in new men. The side having the largest number in attendance for the length of contest will be declared the winners. The contest opened June 29 and closes August 3rd. Lets see men from both sides come out and help a good cause. Clyde Huston is Captain of the Red side and Ralph Reed, Capt. of Blue side. Push and pull for your side. Come out every Sunday.

Why You Should Buy a "Gibson" Refrigerator NOW

First. There is nothing better made anywhere, at a similar price, and many not as good that cost more money. Fifteen years continuous selling, with increasing sales each year, is sufficient proof to us.

Second. The high cost of produce makes it more than ever essential to economize and conserve. A half-pint of milk, or "left over," cooked fruits or vegetables that are lost every day, without the use of a good refrigerator will soon amount to more than the first cost of a refrigerator.

Finally: We have just closed the contract for Gibson Refrigerators for 1920, at an advanced cost over this year. Therefore, you can buy a Gibson this year for less money than it will cost you next year.

Why not invest NOW, and economize both in the purchase price and the conserving of food?

The Surrender of Sybil

By LINCOLN ROTHBLUM

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"I often wonder," said Mrs. Baldwin, one sunshiny Saturday afternoon to her husband, "how Sybil manages to retain the friendship of Harvey Pendleton."

"What is my girl up to again?" smiled Mr. Baldwin, with a merry twinkle in his eye.

"Nothing, dad," laughed the girl, who in a demure frock of checkered organdie with its large Quaker collar seemed to personify innocence of any accusation of coquetry. "Just because Harvey has asked me to marry him, and I didn't say 'No,' Mother says I cannot go anywhere with any one else.

"Mother is right," responded Mr. Baldwin, the verdict coming in so mechanical tone, as if of habit, that Sybil laughed again.

"That's the trouble with you men," she affirmed with a determined manner in the wisdom of her years. "As soon as you win your wish, you believe the battle is over. And furthermore," this with a very decided shake of her pretty head which nearly upset the carefully arranged hairdress, "I'm not so sure I really care for Harvey."

Mr. Baldwin frowned. Guilty of having humored his only child from the moment she was old enough to grasp the fact that she could get anything she desired provided she teased long enough, he now found difficulty in restraining those very factors he had so innocently fostered.

"You ought not to keep the young man in disquieting suspense, Sybil, as he has great cares on his mind."

"Great cares! Pooh! Why, I could sell stocks and bonds," the pert braggadocio announced, pointing a well manicured finger at her small self.

"Perhaps." And as Mr. Baldwin gazed with admiring love at his pretty daughter, he thought that, as far as personality was concerned, she would make a most excellent salesman, even if her stock in trade were refrigerators and her territory Greenland. "But in addition to his own business," Mr. Baldwin continued, "Pendleton is also in the government service."

"What is he doing?" cross-examined his questioner, still unconvinced.

Mr. Baldwin sputtered. "I am not at liberty to say."

"Oh, of course," and the highly indignant young lady, with the air of an abused martyr, skipped up the stairway to slip into a charming street costume of tinted voile, which hung in soft folds to her small figure.

A wooden clock over the fireplace, its sides bulging with hideous gargoyles in miniature (Sybil had won it at a war bazaar and insisted on its prominent position), had just struck two when she seated herself at the piano and played the novelty bits of the day in catchy time.

"Where are you bound for?" asked her mother, a feeble note of remonstrance creeping into her voice. The banging melodies she knew from experience were the forerunner of another expedition or her daughter. The superfluous excitement was thus relieved.

"For the matinee at the Studorium."

"Alone?"

"No. With Jean Pritchard."

"Jean Pritchard?" repeated Mrs. Baldwin in amazed ignorance, casting a helpless and hopeless glance of appeal to her husband who sat in aggravating silence. "Who, may I ask, is Jean Pritchard?"

"You may. Jean's a duck of a fellow, just from over there. He's—"

But further details were interrupted by a ring at the bell announcing the arrival of the subject of their conversation, a dapper fellow dressed in extreme faultlessness, whose rapid shifting of eyes did not induce confidence. Sybil sensed a storm approaching, and to prevent hostilities waited but a few moments after the formalities of the introduction and the couple left.

"And she is content to go out with so foreign-looking a person," remonstrated Mrs. Baldwin to her husband. "I do not approve of this treatment of Harvey Pendleton."

"Nor I," he responded, recalling how he himself had danced attendance upon his wife while she made up her mind whether she could love and obey. "Perhaps we'd better forego being suburbanites and move from the village back into town again."

The bell's second sounding ushered in a strapping, bronzed man of compelling appearance. The businesslike severity of his clothes seemed to emphasize rather than detract from his muscular development.

Mr. Baldwin arose with alacrity. "Hello there, Pendleton," and he shook hands cheerily.

"Where's Sybil tonight?" the young man asked as he paid his respects to Mrs. Baldwin.

"Just gone out for a while," was the placating response from the diplomatic mother. "Be seated and spend the evening with us."

"Don't mind if I do. Have had a very strenuous week and am pretty well tuckered out," he added, although his patent vitality belied the words. "Wish Sybil were here."

Mr. Baldwin felt called upon to assist in the conversation to avoid mention of his willful daughter. "Yes, I suppose during this reconstruction period your activities would be greatly increased," he sidetracked with a very knowing look to the young man, who responded to the lead.

"The social unrest does create a little trouble." He paused and seemed to recall the purpose of his visit. "With whom did Sybil go out?"

And to the direct question Mrs. Baldwin was obliged to give a direct answer. "With a Mr. Jean Pritchard."

Harvey Pendleton bounced from his seat. "Jean Pritchard!" he ejaculated. "Where?"

"To the Studorium," came the answer in unison from Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin, too startled to grasp the meaning of the young man's abrupt departure as they watched with amazement a leap that cleared the steps and placed him at the wheel of his car. Anxiously they leaned from the window as the engine responded to his shifting of gears and the car lurched down the boulevard toward the central road with reckless disregard for village traffic regulations.

Pendleton was a careful driver, but as he flew along the road full speed ahead he skimmed the wheels of a milk wagon, skirted the tail of a dog and cut the edge of a curb nasturtium bed. Failing to slow down at the intersection point which had been too aptly termed "The Trap," because of the

The Lesser Evil

By IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Well, of course you'll do as you please, Kathleen. You always have, and far be it from me to try to argue you out of it." Miss Coniston sat back farther in the wing chair by the bay window and spread her skirt carefully. But I'm your mother's own cousin and I shouldn't rest easy in my grave if I didn't tell you what I thought at such a time."

"Why did she ever leave such an idiotic will?" Kathleen interrupted stormily. She sat by the old-fashioned flat-topped desk in the middle of the library floor, both elbows planted on the melee of papers, while she cried plentifully in her handkerchief. It was half an hour since Graham, the family lawyer, had bowed his way out, leaving the only living relative of Mrs. Letitia Lovejoy to digest the will she had left. Everything, with the exception of two clocks, one colonial drop-leaf table, one curate's delight and one silver tea service, went to Kathleen. These were reserved for "my dear cousin, Mary Coniston, in loving appreciation of her care and friendship these many years."

The last paragraph, however, had come like a thunderbolt to Kathleen. She had always known that at her mother's death the estate would revert to her by her father's will, but here was a proviso tacked on, of which she had known nothing.

"Providing that said Kathleen Lovejoy shall marry my beloved godson, Randall Lovejoy Phelps."

"You can't tell me, Cousin Mary, that Randy didn't know all about this long ago and he could have saved me by refusing to marry me, then what could she have done about it? I hate him. I'd rather give up everything, the house and all, than marry him. It's the lesser evil, and I shall write to Mr. Graham and tell him so." Kathleen wiped her eyes belligerently. "I'm not one bit afraid of work, and you know it. I can go back into the motor corps tomorrow if I want to. They're going to keep up all sorts of branches in reconstruction lines, and I shall write an application tomorrow to be restored to service now that I am free from the care of mother."

"Why Did She Ever Leave Such an Idiotic Will?"

Just two days later Randall Phelps sat in Graham's new office up in the Crandall building on Main street and heard Kathleen's opinion frankly expressed by letter. She would not follow the terms of the will. She would never marry Mr. Phelps, or anyone else under the terms of coercion, and she was leaving the house at once that there might be no further trouble.

"Where has she gone?" asked Randall, frowning at the portrait of Daniel Webster on the wall.

"Presumably back to the motor corps." Mr. Graham searched the letter again for verification. "Most unusual but [illegible] like Kathleen. Have you—er—that you had any serious quarrel?"

"Not recently. I haven't seen or heard from her since I got back. Two years ago, just before I enlisted we—we—or, the devil, Graham! I'm not going to have her do this. Give up her home and money for me. I don't want her to marry me on compulsion. What can I do legally?"

"Nothing," Mr. Graham told him dryly, "nothing at all." The terms of the will stood. Perhaps he might win her over by doing something in the same line as herself, first-aid, as it were, in the new building-up work with soldiers.

Randall smiled as the plan dawned on him, and he gripped the old lawyer's hand fervently. It did not need any words of his to prove his own stand on the will.

And not a week later, at the little local headquarters in the town, Kathleen received orders to call at the railroad station for the first consignment of convalescent soldiers to be sent up to the Lovejoy place, under Mr. Phelp's arrangement.

Never did any soldier ordered over the top go with a stiffer upper lip than Kathleen. Sternly she faced front and drove along the familiar roads until the row of tall Norwegian pines came in view, and there was Randall himself to welcome his guests, with Cousin Mary beside him to act as hostess.

They both nodded to her pleasantly, and Kathleen felt hurt and cold as they all passed up the box-bordered walk together. She was to wait there for the two nurses who had brought the men up. But long before they put in an appearance Randall came leisurely down to the car and lit a cigarette before he opened up a conversation.

"You're needed here more than you are running that car, Kathleen."

"A matter of personal opinion, isn't it?" said Kathleen coolly. "You seem to be very pleasantly situated."

"Nothing has been changed. It is still your property," he said gravely. "I am only acting in your interests in the way I think you would aprove of. I'm going to do this all summer. I thought by September you would be tired of running the car, and we could be married about your birthday, the 17th, isn't it?"

"Did you tell Mr. Graham that we were engaged?" Kathleen tried her best to be scornful. It was hard when she saw the new D. S. O. on his breast. Her specialty these days was heroes, and it would be rather nice to have one in the family. Besides, his eyes were disconcerting.

"You gave me to understand we were—two years ago. If you insist, I shall turn the place over permanently as a home for disabled soldiers. I'm one myself, as it is; heart trouble."

She laughed. Down the path were the two nurses, walking slowly and chatting with some of the men. The time was short. He reached in an inner pocket and drew out a small, flat bill-fold she remembered giving him long ago.

Silently he opened it for her scrutiny. Around it was coiled a long curling strand of blond hair, making a frame. On the other side was a letter, the one she had written him that last day:

"I'm sorry I said no. I never dreamed you were really going. Never believe me when I say no, Randy. I'm still all yours until you return."

"Well, that only says 'until,' she faltered. But she knew the fight was over as Randall swung around with a ready smile and broke the news to his guests in this way:

"You boys are all welcome until after the wedding."

Value of Green Vegetables.

Though green vegetables and fresh fruits have little food value, they are universally desired by mankind. The Journal of the American Medical Association says this is explainable by the fact that they seem to be a safeguard to health. The recent studies of C. B. Osborne and L. B. Mendel on the properties of green leaves show that these contain large quantities of the vitamines which, though not food, are necessary to health. According to these investigators spinach contains far more of the vitamine that promotes normal growth than do whole wheat, soy beans, eggs, meats, milk or potatoes.

It Was.

The habitual customer, Mr. Feedwell, would often condescend to chat with the head waiter. One day he said very seriously:

"Look here, I don't often complain, but this pepper of yours is half peas!"

"Oh, no!" said the head waiter indignantly. "I see to that myself. We grind our own pepper."

"But I tell you it's half peas," said the customer, "and I'll prove it! P-e-p-p-e-r—half 'p's.' You see!"

The Pampered Pets.

"Hortense, call up Mrs. De Billion and ask for Fido."

"Yes, me lady."

WATCHES that go down through generations

We are frankly proud of this store's reputation as headquarters for time-pieces. We have literally timed the community. Our watches are ticking merrily away in homes everywhere. And what is more important still, these watches have kept CORRECT time. They have been something more than looks.

It is just as well to keep in mind that the purchase of a watch should be made with the greatest possible care. Watches are bought, not for one lifetime but for many. A time piece should be handed down from one generation to another—from father to son—indefinitely. And a good watch will give this service uncomplainingly.

We have in stock all standard makes and all in all types designs, from the highly specialized railroad timepiece to the delicate mechanism of the wrist watch for my lady of fashion.

We take more than ordinary care in showing you these watches. We, too, realize that a watch is an investment for the future.

Rings are very much the same—they must last. If gems fall from gem-set rings, the investment can scarcely be called a wise one. We therefore call your attention to the remarkably fine Guaranteed line from the house of W.W.W.—White, Wile and Warner, of Buffalo. They have a reputation that years of honest merchandising have built up.

ON THE HILLTOP

many accidents occurring there, he lacked opportunity to avoid the automobile coming from the opposite direction.

With quick sense of his impending danger, Pendleton turned out with a vicious swing. His coup avoided collision, but brought the fender of his machine in clashing juxtaposition with the running board of the car to his right. Both machines raspingly came to a standstill. And from the inclosed side of the other car there was extended a hand—a woman's hand—fingers wildly clutching the air, and as Pendleton collected his wits, he fairly shouted, "Sybil's hand!"

Like a flash he was within the other machine pounding insensibility into the creature forcing unwelcome attention upon Sybil—his Sybil! The struggle was brief but effective. With an ominous click a pair of shiny handcuffs went on.

Despite fright and surprise at the opportune appearance of her rescuer, Sybil's never-absent sense of humor came to the top. "Do you always carry those bracelets around with you, my bold hero?" she archly asked.

But having spoken, she was quick to realize the moment was not propitious for banter. "Yes," he answered sharply, "ever since I've been in the government secret service."

"But—but what has that to do with Jean Pritchard?"

"Oh, he's just a choice specimen of the pretty bolshevik variety of canker worm the government has long wanted to deport."

Sybil gasped. Her own narrow escape arose before her and the gratitude she owed the man with whose love she had toyed.

"But what can you do with him now in this village?" she asked in anxious fear.

"I shall march him straight to the justice of the peace for safekeeping."

"But what will you do with me?"

"The same."

And he did.

Fine Cake

1 cup sugar, half cup butter, 1 cup milk, 2 cups Swansdown cake flour, 2 heaping teaspoons Royal baking powder, 1 cup of milk, whites to 2 eggs, flavoring. Put together in order given, cream, butter and sugar, until like whipped cream, before adding other ingredients. Sift flour several times, then add baking powder and sift into cake. Put into cold oven and use your favorite icing.—Hilltop.

Corn Relish

1 dozen ears of corn, 1 good size head of cabbage, 6 green peppers, 6 large onions, quarter pound of dry mustard, 1 cup of sugar, 1 quart of vinegar, 1 tablespoon celery seed; salt to taste. Boil 20 minutes. Can while hot.—Mrs. C. Fleming.

Curry Pickles

1 gallon vinegar, 4 tablespoons salt, 2 tablespoons black pepper. Put on boil mixture. 2 tablespoons of curry powder, 2 tablespoons corn starch, 8 tablespoons Coleman's mustard. Mix this in a little cold vinegar, then add all together when about to come to a boil and pour over pickles.—Mrs. C. Fleming.

Cocoanut Custard Pie

1 pint milk, 2 eggs, 1 cup cocoanut, ⅔ cup sugar, a little grated nutmeg. Line pie pan with crust and fill with mixture, and bake until custard is done. —Mrs. Merch E. Swanson.

WHY CARRY YOUR GROCERIES

GIFTS FROM THEIR MOTHERS

Maternal Talents That Have Been Reflected in Work of Great Musicians and Writers.

There are numerous instances in history in which parents possessing uncommon gifts are supposed to have passed them on to their children. This is especially the case in regard to musical talents, observes a writer in London Tit-Bits.

The mother of Schumann, for instance, had great musical ability. Chopin received his wonderful gift—and also his delicate constitution—from the maternal side; Gounod's mother was exceedingly fond of music, while the mother of Spohr, the German composer, was an excellent judge of music and a fine critic, without being herself a musician.

Sir Walter Raleigh declared that he inherited from his mother the politeness of deportment which ever distinguished him. Goethe pays frequent tribute in his writings to the character and culture of his mother, as does also the poet Wordsworth.

Sydney Smith believed that he inherited from his mother his rare conversational powers and quickness of repartee. It is well known that the mother of Edward Gibbon, the historian, was a great reader and cultivated the same taste and habit as her son.

The mother of Charles Darwin made herself acquainted with all the branches of natural history and entertained a great fondness for animals. This record seems to show that maternal talents and tastes are frequently transmitted to sons; it is also claimed that the gifts of the fathers usually descend to the daughters.

Keeping Life's Accounts.

The ledger of life must be kept with keen precision and method so at the final auditing we shall not find ourselves bankrupt of power to enjoy what we have so intensively striven for. The accountants (and stenographers who "take down" our thoughts) are a tangible and helpful part of the big book—consequently worthy of their hire, and who can tell what a jumble of our expense account we'd make but for them? Fair, clean pages, clear-cut figures and not so very many foul blots, we hope! It's not such an easy thing keeping our life accounts straight, and we must not let intensiveness mar its serenity and beauty.

The late Bob Taylor, of Tennessee, was called the pardoning governor. An old colored woman came to him while he was Governor.

"Marse Goveneh, I want my son Sam pahdoned," she said.

"Where is he, auntie?"

"In de penitentiary."

"What for?"

"Stealin' a ham."

"Did he steal it?"

"Yes, sah, suah he did."

"Is he a good man, auntie?"

"Lawsey, no, suh! He's powerful worthless niggeh."

"Then, why do you want him pardoned?"

"Because, your honoh, we's plumb out of ham again."

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

A petition is being circulated on the Hilltop to effect the closing of all business houses on Wednesday afternoons of July and August, beginning with Wednesday, July 23d. If the petitioners should be successful in obtaining the signatures of our business men, it would be a general mid-week half holiday, and would probably be enjoyed by all.

Miss Orebaugh, a teacher in our schools is conducting a kindergarten for from four to six weeks during the summer at the Odd Fellows Hall, 2367½ West Broad St. She has a class of 18 or 20 little folks, who seem to enjoy the experiences very much. The hour is from 8 to 11 each morning except Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Fred Bradfute, of Bradfute and Son, grocers, has been confined at home with blood poisoning in his hand, which has caused him a great amount of suffering. We are pleased to state, however, that he is on the improve now and hopes to be regularly at his business soon.

Mrs. Ditrick, who represents the Hilltop Record subscription department, in calling at a Hilltop home recently, was answered at the door by a small girl, whose mother was sick in bed. On being asked the question as to whether they would be interested in the Hilltop Record, replied that they thought not, as they did not have a Victrola.

Mr. and Mrs. Brobst of Findley, O., visited over the week-end with the latter's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. H. Schoonover, 163 North Warren avenue.

Forty theatres in Cleveland started "Elmo The Mighty" serial picture in the past two weeks. Elmo Lincoln, star in "Tarzen of the Apes," plays the leading role in "Elmo, the Mighty," and is shown at the Empire Hilltop Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

At Hoge Memorial Church the pastor will deliver a sermon on Sunday night on the subject "The Expensiveness of Things Cheap" and in it will discuss from the Christian standpoint, matters dealing with present social unrest, living wage, socialism, Bolshevism and other up-to-the-minute things of pressing interest. The service begins at 7:00 o'clock and will last about an hour.

Mr. Ira Russell, who has been with the A. E. F. in France the past ten months, has been honorably discharged from the service and is now at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gustine Russell, 158 North Warren avenue.

He went overseas with a replacement troop. He will be welcomed back to civil life by his many friends and neighbors who always feel an interest in the boys who sacrificed so much for the cause of democracy. His experiences were much the same as his brother Daniel's, who recently returned, and his services for his country are fully appreciated by all loyal citizens.

Hilltop Deaths

Olive Ruth Weed-Martindale, daughter of Tracy and Cynthia Weed, was born in Gallia County, Ohio July 1, 1847 and passed away to Glory, July 10, 1919, aged 72 years and ten days.

At the age of fourteen she gave her heart to God, united with the M. E. Church, and from that time she lived a devoted Christian life. Hers was the "abundant life" which Christ came to give.

December 24, 1868 she was united in marriage to John A. Martindale of Gallia Ewington, Gallia County, with whom she walked for fifty and one-half years. To them were born ten children of which Dr. E. W. Martindale, W. H. Martindale, John, Hoyt and Miss Genevieve Martindale are of Columbus all of whom with her husband four brothers and four sisters and seventeen grandchildren survive.

At the time of her departure, Mrs. Martindale was a member of Glenwood M. E. Church and a life member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

The funeral services were conducted by Dr. Wykoff, at Glenwood M. E. Church last Saturday at 2:30 P. M. Burial at Green Lawn Cemetery.

William Payne, 50, died of complications Monday at his home, 223 South Oakley avenue. He leaves a widow. The body was sent to Kokomo, Ind., for funeral and burial.

Face Unpleasant Tasks.

A man harnesses himself when he does the thing he does not want to do. It's easy for a fellow to be happy when he is pleased with himself and his job. But often the job is hard to work. Sometimes it's disagreeable. Left to ourselves we would let the job slide. The weak man will not force himself to do anything he does not want to do. He thinks he's a free lance and that he shows his independence by refusing to do what he does not like. The very opposite is the fact. That man is biggest and best who does the thing he does not want to do the best it can be done.

There are numerous instances in history in which parents possessing uncommon gifts are supposed to have passed them on to their children. This is especially the case in regard to musical talents, observes a writer in London Tit-Bits.

The mother of Schumann, for instance, had great musical ability. Chopin received his wonderful gift—and also his delicate constitution—from the maternal side; Gounod's mother was exceedingly fond of music, while the mother of Spohr, the German composer, was an excellent judge of music and a fine critic, without being herself a musician.

Sydney Smith believed that he inherited from his mother his rare conversational powers and quickness of repartee. It is well known that the mother of Edward Gibbon, the historian, was a great reader and cultivated the same taste and habit as her son

Miss Minnie Cullison has returned to Washington, D. C., after spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Alice Cullison, 28 South Richardson avenue.

Mr. J. A. Martindale and family wish to express their thanks to all who so kindly and affectionately remembered them in the time of their bereavement, in the death of wife and mother, Mrs. Olive Ruth Martindale.

Miss Margaret Dellenbaugh, 2390 West Broad street, is spending ten days of her vacation in Bellefontaine, and at Russell Point.

The Hilltop Athletic Club will give a lawn fete on the lawn, corner Richardson avenue and Broad street on Friday evening, July 25th. All are invited to attend.

Miss Ines Barnes, 21 North Eureka avenue, spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. Daisy Kuengeat, of Cleveland.

Mrs. Harry Henson and Miss Grace Emrick, from Hamilton, Ohio, also Helen Emrick, of Fort Wayne, Ind., were the guests at the home of Mr. L. W. Muncie, last week.

SKY-PILOTS ON THE HILL

A Series of Sketches of The Hilltop Ministers We Meet on Our Streets Daily

Rev. George William Lose is a Pennsylvania Dutchman, and was born over six decades ago.

He graduated from Capital University, Columbus, Ohio, in the year 1871. After this he taught school a year, and then entered the Theological Seminary of the University at which he had previously graduated, and was here ordained to the holy ministry in 1875.

Since entering the ministry he has served congregations at Cridersville, Shenandoah Valley, Virginia; Fairfield County, Ohio; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Massillon, Ohio, and Sandusky, Ohio.

He has been preaching in Columbus for nearly fourteen years.

Rev. Mr. Lose has spent a large amount of time and talent in literary work of his denomination. For about thirty-five years he has been the editor of the Juvenile publications of the Ohio Synod of the Lutheran Church. He is also the author of sixty book publications, most of them stories for the youth. He is now Co-Editor of the Lutheran Youth publication.

He is at present pastor of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church, on South Burgess avenue.

Annual Picnic

The annual outing of the Hilltop Improvement Association will be held at Buckeye Lake, Wednesday, July 30th. Special cars will leave Broad St. and Hague Ave. at 8:00 a. m. The round trip for adults is 60 cents, children 30 cents. Over $200 worth of prizes will be given.

Miss Mildred Lenhart, of 64 Midland avenue, spent last week in Delaware, with her cousin. She had a fine time at the lake the Fourth of July.

Hilltop Births

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Vining 83 Lechner ave., July 11th, a girl.

To Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes, 283 S. Wheatland, July 8th, a girl

To Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Smith, Whitethorne avenue, July 7th, a boy.

In the Margin.

Occasionally one finds omissions, sometimes of quite common words, and takes pleasure in writing them neatly in the margin of the dictionary.

Often there is more satisfaction in finding the dictionary lacking than there would have been in finding the desired word in its place; in any case it serves small purpose to make these rubrics, but the inclination is irresistible.

Talking of faults recalls the anger of the autocratic Scottish parson who, when his meanings were disputed by reference to the first dictionary makers, asked his argumentative parishioners the despotic question: "Am I not as good an authority as Doctor Johnson?"

This was merely an extreme way of expressing dissatisfaction with one definition or accent.

Its Resources.

"After July 1 won't men envy the camel?"

"Why so?"

"Because the camel has its own storage supply."

I suffered with extreme weakness now I am sleeping and resting well. If you who suffer only knew the help that has come to me you could not say too much for Ke-o-Ka.

216 West Frambes Avenue.

Mr. Lyon at Glenwood Church

Mr. C. C. Lyon, war correspondent for the Scripps-McRae publications, spoke at the Glenwood M. E. Church Sunday night, July 13, on his famous topic "Face to Face With Hindenburg, and the Overthrow of Kaiser Bill."

He gave a graphic description of his service of keeping the folks back home informed of the daily issues of the great struggle going on beyond the sea. In an interesting manner he described his entrance into and travels through German territory showing how the spirit of democratic ideals had entered the minds of the Germans causing the great revolution a few days before the signing of the armistice, the leadership and command of this movement being entrusted to German-born, but American-reared men.

His visit to Metz, Coblentz, Sarbourg and Frankfort was not met with anything more serious than glowering looks, and on the whole he was treated with utmost courtesy and respect. He had the distinction of being accorded a personal interview with Marshal Hindenburg, through an interpreter, and gained the inside information from that distinguished man himself that Kaiser Bill lost the victory because of the lack of man power and food.

The thrifty housewife of America may complain of the high cost of living, but if she learns the cost of food and clothing, and the restrictions placed upon the use of these necessary articles in Germany, she will thank her lucky stars for any kind of a living in her own free and liberty loving country.

He told, in his humorous vein, of his entrance into Berlin after leaving the palace of Marshal Hindenburg, his arrest there and return to the stern presence of General Pershing in command of the American forces in France where he, with three companions in newspaper work, was severely censured by that gentleman and compelled to divulge all the "ins" and "outs" of his itinerary during his absence without leave from the American army.

We can not conscientiously close this article without a word of commendation for the splendid vocal music furnished for the evening by the colored quintet from Claflin University, Orangeburg, S. C., and to those who contributed to the evening's entertainment was given a rising vote of appreciation by the congregation.

Borrowed Sunshine

By DORA H. MOLLAN

(Copyright, 1910, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

This is a story of two days in the life of Joan Carruthers—two days separated by two weeks. On the first, Joan stood, her face pressed against the window pane, engrossed in her one and only amusement. For when one has risen no farther than saleslgirl in a bargain basement in these times of high prices and must live on the proceeds of such daily toil, there is but little left over for extras, and when one spends five evenings every week at school and a sixth and part of Sunday in study, there is little time left over for frivolities anyway.

Joan was studying stenography as a means to an end; not that she liked it so well, but it stood for shorter hours and more money. Most of the girls in the store had beaux, of course, and went to dances and shows with them—and married them and led lives just like Joan's mother's over again, and Joan remembered that only too well.

Now, as it arose like a picture, blotting out for the moment the entrancing one actually before her eyes, the color-note of that old life was a deadly drab. Not one ray of sunshine had penetrated into their dark basement home. Not a single bit of material or spiritual brightness had it contained. Joan's mother had been a little drab wisp of a woman, with all the joy of life knocked out by her drunken, moose husband. Well, she was at rest now! Joan didn't know where the father was, and didn't want to. As she shuddered at the thought of him, the picture changed like a fade-away and the one really before her eyes gained added brilliancy by the contrast.

That scene typified everything Joan's life had lacked and for which she was struggling. Even the one thin, watery beam of sunlight that found its way into her third floor hall room was reflected from the window directly across the narrow street. The apartment back of those windows over the way, so near in actual distance, was miles removed from the sphere of Joan's life. To look into it was, to her, like a peep into fairyland.

There lived a beautiful lady and a wondrous prince, in a country of gorgeous colors—and with one sweep of the blue and orange curtains over those windows all that could be shut from her sight, Joan prayed hard that they might be forgotten tonight, for a third person was present in that room.

This third person, masculine, was by name Strickland—Dr. Stanton Strickland—and by nature endowed with a full share of good looks. Of the first of these facts Joan was ignorant; the second she magnified. To her he looked a Greek god—or a movie star! Joan didn't know, either, that the prince was just plain Mr. Bertram Smith and the beautiful lady his wife and sister to Stanton. Neither did she know the subject under discussion, but she could see by the glow from the orange shaded light—for her own one dim gas jet was dark—when they all arose and passed through a door into another room and so out of sight. Also, that before going, the visitor lighted a cigarette and threw the match on a stand close by the window.

But even emptied of its glorified occupants the room fascinated her. She would have one like it some day, if working hard would bring it! How that orange light brightened everything—was reflected everywhere, even on the curtains; on one in particular, the one nearest where the visitor had sat! Joan came to, suddenly, from her dreams, and looked hard at that particular curtain. Suddenly she turned away, opened her door and fairly flew down the two long flights of stairs.

Into the street she sped, and across it. Breathlessly she ran up the stone steps of the house opposite, the house of the reflected sunshine, and pushed and pushed again and again the button of the electric doorbell.

It seemed ages before anyone came, and Joan had time to wonder whether she was doing the right thing. Finally the door was opened by a stupid-looking maid, who fled screaming at the only word of Joan's breathless speech she seemed to grasp. Again Joan ran, this time up two other long flights, into a hall and through it straight into that fairyland she had glimpsed from afar.

But the bad demon whose entrance into this paradise she had witnessed was by this time writhing in long, curling flames up the beautiful curtains. With a fierce, militant resentment against this despoilment of her fairyland, and reckless of the danger in her battle to preserve it barehanded, Joan seized the flaming curtains, tore them from their fastenings, threw them to the floor and cast a heavy rug upon them.

And so, hurrying in to discover the cause of the extraordinary commotion, they found her, just awakening to a realization of her surroundings, and her burned hands.

Doctor Strickland reached Joan just as the pain brought blessed unconsciousness. He carried her to a couch, demanded various articles and skillfully dressed the burns, the while they wondered who she might be and whence she came.

Presently consciousness returned, and though with it returned, too, the agony of her wounds, Joan struggled to her feet, and with faltering voice started an apology for her intrusion. But strong hands gently pushed her back and three people voiced gratitude and questions.

Joan tried to explain. "I love sunlight and colors so! Not much of either has ever come my way. All that I get comes from your windows. I was watching; but I'm going to get my own. I'm studying," she began—then stopped short at a twinge of pain and gazed down at the poor bandaged hands. Mrs. Smith caught that look and read it. Impulsively she spoke:

"You're not going to do any studying for awhile, nor anything else, but just stay right here and be nursed by me, my dear; and Stanton will come every day to dress your burns."

"I sure will," the latter volunteered; "and perhaps Miss Joan, since she loves color so much, will be willing when she's better to tell me what ones to use in my new offices over among my poor folks on Carmine street."

Joan sat straight up. "Carmine street!" she exclaimed; "I was born there. Oh, doctor, make it bright! Bring some color into their gray lives! Make it—like this!" She looked about her at the room, then sank back with a little moan of pain.

They gave her a sleeping potion and put her to bed. So ended the first day.

The fortnight has passed. The burns are healed, the bandages gone. But on Joan's left hand something has been substituted that binds tighter than any bandage. She stands in a broad ray of sunshine watching Mrs. Smith hang silken curtains of bronze gold hue. Through the door strides—a Greek god? Or could it be a movie star? No; just a big-hearted man who has dedicated his life and knowledge to humanity. He puts an arm around Joan.

"Just see the beautiful sunlight, Stan," she says, "and to think—I'm not away off across the street, looking in, but actually living in it—with you! Oh, Stan, if I can only help you bring it into other people's lives, as you have brought it into mine!"

"I didn't bring it to you, little wife; you flew straight into it—but I'm going to keep you there always."

When Lands Do Not Matter

By S. B. HACKLEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

He had been on the road with the six fine saddlers he would not trust to anybody else's care, several hot, fatiguing days, and his long form slid wearily into the restaurant chair.

"A bite and a sup for you, Gilbert Shore—then bed—the glories of Frisco can wait," he thought.

Just across from him dined a man of fifty with a neck and a girth the like of which young Shore never remembered seeing outside the stockyards. The slim young waitress who served him brought iced water and hot soup, cold milk and hot coffee, and it seemed to the Kentuckian every known meat, salad, vegetable, but censure only rewarded her efforts.

"What have you for dessert?" the eater finally demanded.

"Lemon pie, snow pudding, raspberries, and strawberry ice cream."

"I'll take 'em!" he growled, "and bring 'em quick!"

Watching this interesting specimen devour, the young man did not notice that the girl was standing at his own elbow.

"Your order, please," she was saying.

Her cheeks were flushed with her encounter with the fat brute, her soft voice was not quite steady and there was a mist in her eyes—eyes deep and dark blue like the ocean when the summer sun is over it.

A wave of protecting tenderness swept over Shore; he made much ado to keep from pushing away his simple order and feasting his eyes on her winsome face, but he was a diffident young man, and a gentleman, so he pretended to eat, and used his eyes only by stealth.

And the girl? Long ago Allsie Randolph had learned that silent unresponsiveness to all social advances of the young masculine customer was a girl's safeguard from insult, but she looked at the young man with his fine eyes, his clear, healthy skin and his charming manner and almost wished that he would ask her to go out with him. But he did not.

However, on his third day in San Francisco the aristocratic old lady with whom he lived on the great Blue

"I'll Take 'Em," He Growled.

Grass stock farm received a telegram: "Will be detained longer than I expected. Start back Tuesday."

"Oh, Grandmother Girl, if you knew why I am staying," he thought whimsically, "you'd say I'd been sleeping in the moonlight of my lost senses!"

On the evening he ate his twentieth meal at the Bay View restaurant, the man of the thick neck was leaving just as he took his seat at the next table.

"That man needs a man to punch his head for bullying a little thing like you," he remarked. "I'd just like—"

"Oh, sir, please," she interrupted him half frightened, "he's a regular customer here! I—I don't really mind. One—one gets used to the unpleasantness here!"

Shore's heart prompted him to say: "Little one, let me take you away from all this unpleasantness forever!" But he only said somewhat diffidently that if she would let him, he would take her to see a good play somewhere that evening.

Allsie's heart leaped, but she faltered: "I do not go out with customers!" Then she fled to the kitchen. When she came back he was gone, and a twisted bit of paper and a single Marechal Niel rose lay beside his plate.

"Oh, Little White Apron," the note said, "I wish I could feel that you trust me, stranger that I am! I like to think there is nothing in my face to frighten a girl. I'm leaving in the morning, but I shall see you again, for I'm coming back to see if you believe in the message of the rose!"

It was signed "Gilbert Shore, Bon Aqua Farms, Treadwell, Ky."

"What is the sentiment of the Marechal Niel rose, Sissy?" the girl asked her widowed sister that evening.

Corona reached for the dictionary. "'Adoration,' or 'yours, heart and soul,'" she quoted.

Allsie slipped back to her room and held the delicate rose for a long tremulous moment to her lips. "If only I knew he meant it!" she whispered.

He was so lovable and so good-looking but there were so many with good looks and bad intentions! "And," she thought bitterly, "he is rich and I am a beggar!"

One evening in February she saw him enter the restaurant again. He came straight to her table, his brown eyes eager, glad.

"Oh, Little White Apron," he said softly, "I couldn't stay away any longer! Do you believe what the rose told? Do you trust me enough to go out to the theater with me this evening?"

Allsie fought back the happiness looking out of her eyes. "I must work until twelve," she told him, "but you may go and call on my married sister and my invalid father. But do not stay late. Father must sleep early."

"He will not go," she told herself bitterly. "He will not go! They never do!" But even as she said it her heart whispered that she believed he would.

"He is rich and we have nothing, Corona," Allsie remonstrated when Corona told her in delight she had accepted Shore's invitation for them all to go motoring with him the next day. "We are not the people he belongs with."

When two weeks later Shore asked Allsie to marry him the girl could not keep the glow of joy out of her face, but she crushed it from her voice.

"I cannot," she told him. "You might remember one day that I was poor and think that your riches tempted me. That would break my heart."

"Oh!" he said easily, "I'm not a millionaire, if that's what's worrying you. Don't punish me because of the little grandfather left me."

But she was obdurate. "I cannot marry you," she repeated.

"Don't you love me?" he insisted. But she turned her telltale face away.

"I will come back," he said then, white and unhappy, "when you have had time to think it over."

"No," she said, her voice shaking, "do not come. I cannot ever marry you."

In War the city was full of fair visitors. One noon when Allsie's whole body ached with weariness, her heart most of all, two Southerners sat at her table.

"I heard Gilbert Shore got badly smashed up out fox hunting about two months ago," the younger man remarked to the older. "How is he these days, doctor?"

"He's doing no good," the older man answered, and Allsie's heart stood quite still. "When I told him the other day if he didn't try he'd never get so he could walk or get well, he said: 'I wish, to please you, doctor; I wish I could take more interest in getting well, but what's the use?' Something besides his injury's troubling him, Raymond. I'm going to prod him into telling me when I get back!"

A few days later a young man sitting in an invalid's chair on the porch of a fine country home in the Blue Grass, his eyes closed, suddenly felt a pair of strong arms around his neck.

"Oh, Gilbert," a soft voice breathed, "tell me you are not going to die! I came—came—"

For a moment he looked at her uncomprehending, then his eyes lighted with triumphant happiness. "And so you came to do good to the dying? Oh, Little White Apron, can't you do good to the living and stay with him forever?" Then he added in tender whimsicality: "I ought to tell you, Particular One, I've still got what grandfather gave me!"

She raised her head from his breast. "I've thought it over," she said. "It doesn't matter!"

WATCHES that go down through generations
We are frankly proud of this store's reputation as headquarters for time-pieces. We have literally timed the community. Our watches are ticking merrily away in homes everywhere. And what is more important still, these watches have kept CORRECT time. They have been something more than looks.
It is just as well to keep in mind that the purchase of a watch should be made with the greatest possible care. Watches are bought, not for one lifetime but for many. A time piece should be handed down from one generation to another—from father to son—indefinitely. And a good watch will give this service uncomplainingly.
We have in stock all standard makes and all in all types designs, from the highly specialized railroad timepiece to the delicate mechanism of the wrist watch for my lady of fashion.
We take more than ordinary care in showing you these watches. We, too, realize that a watch is an investment for the future.
Rings are very much the same—they must last. If gems fall from gem-set rings, the investment can scarcely be called a wise one. We therefore call your attention to the remarkably fine Guaranteed line from the house of W.W.W.—White, Wile and Warner, of Buffalo. They have a reputation that years of honest merchandising have built up.

JAM CAKE

One cup sugar, two-thirds cup butter, three cups flour, one cup of jam, one-half cup sour cream or milk, three eggs leaving out whites of two, one teaspoon of soda, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon nutmeg, cream, sugar and butter; add eggs, jam and milk, mix spices in one cup flour, beating thoroughly. In remainder of flour add soda; judgment must be used about flour, as some jam is much stiffer than others.

Ice cream icing—One cup sugar, one-half cup water, one small tablespoon vinegar. Boil until thick syrup. Beat whites of two eggs stiff, pour in syrup and beat constantly until cold. Flavor with vanilla.—Mrs. Merch E. Swanson

MOCHA ICING

1½ cups pulverized sugar, ¼ cup of butter, 2 teaspoons cocoa, 2 teaspoons strong coffee. 1 teaspoon vanilla.—Mrs. M. H. Prior.

SPONGE CAKE

1½ cups granulated sugar, yolks of 4 eggs; cream yolks and sugar; ½ cup of cold water, 1½ cups flour, 1½ teaspoons baking powder in flour, pinch of salt, flavoring to taste. Fold in beaten whites of eggs.—Mrs. Richard Hughes.

CITY OF STONES AND SAINTS

Old Spanish Stronghold of Avila Has Long Been Known by That Peculiar Cognomen.

Avila is an ancient Spanish stronghold now known as the city of stones and saints. The stones are prominent enough in the high wall, broken by circular towers, which surrounds the city and in the past kept out undesirable visitors. Some people say, however, that the term stones refers to the stone pigs which decorate the city in unexpected places. No spot is too sacred for these roughly carved pigs, which fact recalls the tradition that when paganism ruled in Avila these grotesque animals were themselves objects of veneration. But today they provoke only jests in spite of their attitudes of haughty aloofness.

The saint part of the stones and saints epithet is adequately represented by Santa Teresa, the most beloved saint of Spain, who spent most of her life in Avila. Santa Teresa started her career of saintliness at seven years of age, when she tried to get herself martyred by the Moors outside the city walls. She was deterred from achieving this at the critical moment by her relatives. Later, tradition states, she was transported to heaven and given instructions on building and running a convent, after which she returned to earth and spent the rest of her life carrying out the celestial orders, and thereby winning the love of the people.

First "Gas Masks."

The first apparatus to enable persons to enter a noxious inflammable atmosphere was called the "aerophore" and was the invention of M. Denayrrouze, a French inventor and scientist. It was first tested at Chatham, England, 41 years ago, and was reported successful. Vast improvements on this device, which comprised an air-pump and flexible tubing, have since been made, and these have saved the lives of hundreds in mine accidents and other disasters where rescue work would be impossible without their use.

ALL INFLUENCED BY OMENS

Notorious Criminals, as a Class, Are Remarkable for Their Many Superstitious Beliefs.

Some of the most notorious criminals who, it might have been thought, would not pay the slightest attention to omens, good or bad, have a profound belief in superstitions.

Curiously enough, the burglar will often relinquish a big burgling feat if a dream the night before has warned him that he will be in danger. But should it happen that he sees a rainbow during the day he will consider it to portend that, however reckless he may be, he is not likely to fall into the hands of the police for a space of three months.

Many burglars carry donkey shoes in their pockets before setting out, believing that this will protect them from danger, while others pin their faith to a piece of coal, which they will carry in their pockets throughout their career.

The pickpocket is equally superstitious. He will not rob a person who squints, this being accounted a certain sign of disaster, and if it happens that the purse he steals contains foreign money it is believed to augur that he will travel in the immediate future.

Weddings and funerals are pregnant with meaning for the professional thief. To pick a pocket at a funeral would be to court immediate disaster, whereas if a purse stolen at a wedding contains gold it portends the best of luck for the thief.

Some pickpockets have a favorite pair of boots that they wear as long as they can keep them on their feet, and if they are not arrested while wearing them they cut the boots up into little square pieces and give them away as "lucky tokens" to confederates.

A Born Pessimist.

"What makes the baby cry?" asked the little visitor.

"Oh," replied Elsie, "our baby doesn't have to have anything to make it cry."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Chilean Nitrates Needed.

In spite of the prophets of disaster, the war did not ruin the Chilean nitrate industry; instead, military needs created an unprecedented demand. Now that this has ceased, the Chilean pessimists are once again predicting ruin, but El Industrial of Antofagasta says there will now be a greater demand than ever for fertilizer, and that artificial nitrates have failed even to rival the natural product of Chile.

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

Someone stole the motorcycle of Mr. Eugene White, 114 S. Oakley Ave., last Saturday. The police were notified of the theft and called Mr. White up on Monday morning and stated that it had been left in a badly damaged condition on the Jackson Pike near Big Walnut.

Lieut. George Schoonover gave his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Schoonover, of 163 N. Warren Ave., a pleasant surprise last Saturday when he came home, unannounced, after nineteen months' service overseas with the Quartermaster Department. He brought with him trophies and relics from battlefields of Europe, and while in the service and opportunity presented he visited different countries and the historic places of interest. He was many times forced to go into sections attended with many dangers, but fortunately escaped all injury or misfortune, and has returned to his homeland in the enjoyment of good health. He is at present on a 15-day furlough at his parents' home.

Masonic Picnic

West Gate Lodge held its annual basket picnic Thursday, July 17th, at Fishinger's Grove on the Columbus, Urbana and Western Electric Line, near Fishinger's bridge, and they had a fine time. There were about fifty autos parked in the grove and a hundred or more came by trolley, so that from 200 to 250 were in attendance.

There were all sorts of games which kept the interest up to fever heat all the time. The ball game between the Williams team and the Houdashelt team was very exciting and the latter won by four runs. Mr. W. G. Davis acted as umpire and was a howling success, for by carefully deciding wrong in every case (in the opinion of those decided against) he managed to follow the illustrious example of the most proficient in our professional leagues and gained the temporary criticisms of all.

In the races for boys, 6 to 8, Master Robert Baltz took first prize. Girls, 9 to 11, Ruth Hyde took first. Girls, 12 to 14, Leonora Mauer was first.

Nail driving contest, Mrs. Butler was awarded a two and a half dollar gold piece as the winner.

Ball throwing contest, girls 15 to 18, Helen Palmer was first.

Jumping contest for boys, Lewis Hyde, Jr., was first.

Ball throwing for married ladies, Mrs. F. W. Davis beat them all.

Guessing on a pot of beans was a tie between Mrs. Bingham and Mr. Bushe, each guessing 4,500, which was correct.

Dancing to the "dulcet strains" of Biddle's orchestra was indulged in from about 7:30 to 11 o'clock. Messrs. C. C. Cook and Geo. Matson seemed to be the "star" dancers.

Harry Biddle won the ice cream eating contest and received as a prize two small tin spoons.

It was a wonder to almost all present why [illegible] Dear, who is conceded to be the best ball player on the West Side, could not be persuaded to take part in the game, but it leaked out at a very late hour that he wore a very fine silk shirt and he was afraid if he ruined it during the game his good wife would not make him another. This may or may not be true, but it was generally believed.

Messrs. Sam Randall and Fred Sulzbeyer went up the river fishing, and succeeded in catching (?) enough fish to enable all who wished to remain for supper to be satisfied.

Drowing of Mr. Rauch

The body of William Rauch, aged 45, 92 South Hague Avenue, drowned when he attempted to rescue Charles Franks, aged 12, 1020 Oregon Avenue, who became exhausted while swimming in the Olentangy River near the Third Avenue bridge, was recovered by the police about 3 p. m. yesterday.

The boy, becoming helpless when caught in a large whirlpool near the bridge, called for help. Rauch, an employe of the R. H. Evans Company, contractors, who are doing construction work on the new Third Avenue bridge, jumped in the stream to help the lad. Both Rauch and the boy were caught in the whirlpool. Franks managed to break loose from Rauch and was carried down stream, where he was pulled out by his brother, William Rauch, in his efforts to get clear of the whirlpool, soon became exhausted and was pulled beneath the surface.

The body was removed to the home. The funeral services were held at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening and the body taken to Marysville for burial. Rev. Mr. Love officiated. He leaves a wife, one son, two daughters, a father, brother and sister.

FOR RENT—A Garage at 96 North Burgess avenue.

Open air gospel meeting cor of Grace and Burgess.

Mr. H. H. Wharff and grandson, Harry Wyatt, of Guysville, O., visited at the week-end at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ogg, 135 N. Warren Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Houdashelt, 148 N. Warren Ave.

The story is told of a young private, who, during a recent engagement on the battlefield in France, was severely reprimanded by his commanding officer for betraying fear of the shot and shell which was falling, and admonished if the worst befell him to remember that heaven should be his home. "Yes, heaven's my home, all right, I know," replied the private, "but I'm not homesick yet."

Mrs. B. Southerland and son Theodore, of 318 S. Hague Ave., will spend several weeks at the Willow Grove Cottage, at Buckeye Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peyton (Lola Kaufman) are located in their new home at 40 Midland Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Hill and two children of Guysville, O., visited the past week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Houtashelt, N. Warren Avenue. Little Virgene Hill was operated on for the removal of her tonsils, and is now convalescing at the home of Mr. Houdashelt. Dr. Gilliian is the attending physician.

Robert Morris Chapter 372, O. E. S., will hold a lawn fete Tuesday evening, July 29th, at West Broad Street and Richerson Ave. Home made cake and ice cream will be served.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rice, 135 N. Harris Ave., on July 14th, a daughter.

SKY-PILOTS ON THE HILL

A Series of Sketches of The Hilltop Ministers We Meet on Our Streets Daily

Rev. G. R. Robbins, D. D., was born near Trenton, N. J. eighteen hundred and never mind, as he is wont to say. During early boyhood he attended the common school and the State Model School and later was graduated from Colgate Academy, Colgate University, and Hamilton Theological Seminary. He received from Colgate the honorary Degrees of A. B., A. M. and D. D. His first pastorate was at Hoosick Falls, N. Y., where he led in building a parsonage, and handsome church edifice, installed a pipe organ and added about five hundred new members, when he was called to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he remained 26 years and wrought one of the most remarkable works of any minister in the Baptist Denomination. During this long pastorate he led in the work of purchasing the large lots on which was erected the Great Temple, one of the Largest Institutional Churches in America. The building received the "Grand Prize" at the World's Exposition in Ligue, Belgium, and Second Prize at the World's Exposition in Saint Louis. During his pastorate with this Lincoln Park Institutional Baptist Church there were added over 2,300 members. For nineteen years he was editor of the weekly Institutional and was a prolific writer for secular and religious papers. He was Chaplain of The First Regiment Ohio National Guard and conducted each Sunday afternoon Divine Services in the Great Army Hall attended from three hundred to four thousand people. He also took active part in municipal affairs and served on many committees interested in civic affairs; was among the leaders in fighting the saloon and social evils. His life was frequently threatened and it was a mere chance, or better a providential miracle he was not killed by an infernal machine sent him through the mail. Mr. Robbins has not only raised much money for the churches of which he was pastor, but aided in church debt raising at dedication of many new churches. In all his work he has been ably assisted by his efficient wife who has also written much for the press, and spoken on many public occasions. He has one son engaged in the iron business in Chattanooga, Tenn., and one daughter in Bluefield, W. Va., of the "Robbins and Greiser School of Music."

Overwork and an heat stroke suddenly brought Dr. Robbins' work to a close in Cincinnati, and for three years he was humanly hopelessly sick until in answer to the prayers of thousands he was instantly miraculously restored not only to health but to the pulpit. Since his healing he has scarcely missed a Sunday without preaching, and almost averaged some service daily. He has been for over a year pastor of Memorial Baptist Church, Columbus. Since assuming the pastorate of this church, which was in a greatly run down condition, great success has already been manifested. The financial income for home and benevolent purposes about doubling that of any other year in the history of this church. More than eighty new members have been added. Dr. Robbins has during his three pastorates received over THREE THOUSAND PEOPLE INTO THESE CHURCHES. He says, "TO GOD BE ALL THE HONOR AND PRAISE."

Annual Picnic

The annual outing of the Hilltop Improvement Association will be held at Buckeye Lake, Wednesday, July 30th Special cars will leave Broad St. and Hague Ave. at 8:00 a. m. The round trip for adults is 60 cents, children 30 cents. Over $200 worth of prizes will be given.

Young Men's classy summer caps $2.50. Chas. Houx Furnishing Store.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Loudenslager, 53 S. Harris Ave., left last Friday, the 18th, for Denver, Colo., on a three weeks' trip. They expect to stop at St. Louis and Indianapolis on the return home. A telegram announcing their safe arrival was received by their daughter Sunday night.

A little girl recently visiting in one of our western states and seeing for the first time a branded pony, exclaimed, "Oh, mamma, look at the pony with the initials embroidered on his hip."

The Misses Dorothy and Isabel McHorter and Miss Freda Williams have just returned from Tarlton, Ohio, after having spent a delightful time at the home of the formers' relatives.

Rev. Mr. Hardy, of Highland Ave. Friends Church leaves the first of next week for a three weeks' visit to his old home near Newport News, Va.

Mrs. J. W. Young, Mr. and Mrs. C. Fleming and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brown are spending the week at Russell Point. They expect to have some startling fish stories when they return home, and partly promise to bring photos of their catch, in order to verify the same. We'll wait and see.

Mr. W. J. Morgan, Mrs. John Houdashelt and son Paul, of 101 N. Ogden Ave., visited over the week-end with Mrs. Houdashelt's sister, Mrs. Ernest Lloyd, at Marengo, O.

Miss Carrie Geisinger, of Findlay, O., is visiting at the home of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Nicely, 2495 S. Burgess Ave.

Tri Mu

The Tri Mu class is still located in the basement of Glenwood church. Meets every Sunday morning at 9:15. Have you been there lately? If not, get busy. A finer place on Sunday for some fellows is in bed, but just get in the habit of getting up and going to Sunday School and in a month or so you won't want to miss. Come over and look the bunch over, make new friends and you will certainly feel better for it.

The Red and Blue contest opened June 29 and was supposed to close August 3, but the race for first place is getting hot and the contest will last three Sundays to come. Meaning that it will close August 10. The attendance up to and including July 20 was Blues 47, Reds 40. The score is close for the Reds won a victory over the Blues by having 15 present and Blues only 13 on July 20. The teacher and president are neutral and working for both sides. Being able to meet the demands of both sides and help each one to get the fellows out was the reason for the neutrality. Remember the contest closes with an auto ride to Sunday School on that final day and a good speaker to young men. Don't miss the treat the losers will furnish. "Be There."

R. H.

The Willing Workers' Class of Burgess Ave. United Brethren Church held a social meeting on Thursday night, July 17th, at the home of Mr. C A. Counts, 163 S. Warren Ave. A very enjoyable time was enjoyed by those present, who were Mr. and Mrs. John N. Wise, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Callendine, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pencill, Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Wallam, Rev. E. B. White, Mrs. Alice Crosby, Mrs. Hofnake and daughter Ollie, Mrs. Spillman.

The August meeting of the missionary Society of the Church of Christ will be in the form of a picnic at Glenwood Park. Watch for the announcement as the park cannot be secured for Friday, August 1st, our regular meeting day. Let every member make a special effort to attend.

Dr. G. R. Robbins and wife left for Asbury Park, N. J., where they expect to spend the next six weeks.

Dr. L. B. Turner and son Lauren spent a few days in southern Ohio last week, motoring down on Tuesday and back Sunday.

Mrs. Annis Turner and several girl friends spent last Saturday and Sunday at Buckeye Lake.

Rev. and Mrs. Smoke and son Kenneth left last Monday to attend the camp meeting at Baltimore, Ohio, this week.

Mr. W. L. Millikin is out for the nomination for City Councilman at the primaries on August 12th. We wish him success.

Mrs. Elizabeth Swick, of Newark, O., is keeping house for Mr. and Mrs. B. Loudenslager's daughter until their return. Mrs. Swick is a sister of Mrs. Loudenslager.

Americanization

By DORA H. MOLLAN

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

A March wind is no respecter of persons. Ruth Devereaux was twenty-eight and still pretty when she hurried down the main stret of her home town on a blustering March day. Her cape flew back and disclosed its brilliant lining. Her small arched feet were neatly shod in brown oxfords. Brown woolen hose covered slender ankles and shapely—but the liberties taken by the miniature cyclone were no fault of Ruth's.

One hand grabbed tightly the straight-brimmed sailor and the other carried a bulky parcel.

A tall man stood in the doorway of the street car waiting room, but Ruth didn't see him as, head down, draperies flying, she made for that haven. Propelled by a harder gust than usual, like a ship with all sails set riding before the gale, she arrived full against his stalwart bulk.

The tall man braced for the encounter. He grasped the scurrying figure with one hand and with the other opened the door. Ruth, looking up from under the brim of her dignified sailor, now rakishly askew, and through straggling brown curls, gasped:

"Why, good afternoon, Mr. Ogden. Thanks for the rescue. That miniature Flatiron building across the street may be the pride of the town, but it certainly connives with the wind to bring low the pride of mortals."

"Well, it's an ill wind that brings no one good, and I'll have the pleasure of the ride up with you," the tall man replied. "There comes our car now."

"But I'm not on my way home," Ruth explained. "I'm bound in the Hurried Down the Main Street.

opposite direction—for Bank street."

"Bank street! At this time of day!" ejaculated Ogden.

"Yes, Bank street, this time of day—alone," repeated Ruth. "You had better hurry or you'll lose your car."

"Bother my car," returned the man. "I'm going to put you on yours first. Here it is now." Ruth hurried out and Ogden after her. "But, please, Miss Devereaux," he pleaded, "let me go with you; that's a bad neighborhood."

"Nonsense! I'm as safe down there as in my own home. Why, some one out of nearly every family has been in my class at one time or another. I go every week and have supper with Katy and Virginius."

Plainly this explanation was Greek to Ogden. Ruth's foot was on the step of the car as she laughed at his puzzled expression. "Come and see me some time and I'll tell you all about it," she said.

"Tomorrow evening?" questioned the tall man eagerly.

"Yes," Ruth flung back over her shoulder.

When Ogden crossed the street next evening—for he boarded directly opposite to Ruth's home—March Wind was still on his job. But the bright fire on the hearth in the big quiet living room, and Ruth in a rose crepe dress, with rebellious curls neatly coiffed, made a decided contrast to their meeting of the afternoon before.

"You see, nothing happened to me down in the 'bad' neighborhood," his hostess remarked, brightly. "Have this comfy chair; it's dad's favorite, and here's his smoking stand. It's bridge club tonight, so I'm alone."

Though this was the tall man's first call at the Devereaux home, he felt immediately at ease and sank into the big chair after a few words of appreciation of the cheer and comfort of a fire on such a night.

"First of all I'll amplify my rather enigmatical explanation of my expeditions into the Italian quarter," Ruth began. "Then we can have a cosy talk about things in general. You see, I taught in the evening school here the first three winters after leaving college. There wasn't as much interest taken in Americanization then; the compensation was small and there was trouble in finding competent teachers. I was restless doing nothing, and that work appeals to me.

"Virginius is a strapping young Italian who came to me the first year. He was a deep-sea diver then, and highly paid; but he gave that up and took something at the submarine base which paid less because he hated to miss a single night at school. Well, naturally, such perseverance pleased me, so I was glad to find him on hand promptly the opening night of the next year. That year Katy came to school—a little Irish-American who had been taken out of school too young. She worked in a mill, and was passionately fond of reading."

Ruth had been watching the fire as she talked, but now she glanced up laughingly at the tall man sitting opposite. "Mother says I'm a born matchmaker, and I fear she's right, for from the first time I saw Virginius watching Katy with that faithful, adoring look you see in the eyes of an old setter dog, I made up my mind to help things along. When there were rumors of a 'Jack the Hugger' in Katy's neighborhood I asked the big Italian to see that Katy got home safely. So he established the habit of going home with her. About this time the shipbuilding boom struck on, and at my suggestion Virginius tried for a job at the shipyard and, because he was a diver, they offered him $50 a week. But soon after that a falling beam struck him on the shoulder, and he was in the hospital two weeks. I took Katy to see him, and on one of our visits what I had been hoping for happened. I left them alone for a moment, and when I returned Virginius told me the old, old story; but puzzled me by adding, with longing eyes fixed on little Katy, 'We must-a wait till war gets over.'

"The nurse sent us away then, but

Impulsive Connie

By GEORGE PHELPS

(Copyright, 1910, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Two old maid sisters and a mother, who insisted upon all gentleman callers leaving at ten o'clock sharp—isn't it a wonder Connie managed to keep a beau? But, then, you don't know Connie. Without exaggeration she was the sweetest little piece of femininity in existence; that's what Harvard Cullis thought, at any rate.

How Harvard was able to find an opportunity to ask her to marry him is more than could be told in a paragraph, but, anyway, he did gasp it out one time when her mother had gone to bed with a sick headache and the sisters had fallen asleep on guard. It was a hurried consent Connie gave, but she had to have one eye on the sisters all the while.

When would they get married? That was the first big question that started the first misunderstanding. With visions of a long courtship that ended every night at ten o'clock before him, Harvard urged speed.

"But I could never get married until Priscilla and Lucelle are married," Connie told him. "Mother doesn't believe in the youngest daughter being married first."

"Good heavens!" Harvard was next thing to being stunned. "Why they'll never be married. They are on the shelf for good."

"They have both been engaged for fourteen years," Connie said, a little indignantly. "James and Charles call every Wednesday night. They have called ever since I can remember, and every Fourth of July they take the girls out driving."

"And haven't married them yet? Well I never!"

"But they are going to marry them. The girls have had their things ready for years and years."

"Let's elope!"

"Oh!" Connie put her hand over her mouth and half smothered the cry of alarm. One of the sisters stirred uneasily, but Harvard was not going to lose any time.

"Why can't we?" he demanded.

"Oh, because!" Connie was fairly shaking with excitement. The tantalizing answer so often used by women had irritated Harvard, so she hastened to explain. "Can't you see? I want a wedding—a real honest-to-goodness wedding, with bridesmaids and flowers and presents and cake and things. I want to have a trousseau and a green trunk and things like the girls have."

Knew at Once Why Priscilla and Lucelle Were on the Shelf.

"Yes; and if you wait until they are married you'll have them all and they will never be used." Harvard was aroused, so it was just as well one of the sisters opened her eyes and caught sight of him sitting close to Connie. She might have said something that would have brought an unpleasant answer had not the other sister wakened and found it was five minutes past ten. Her exclamation of horror was sufficient to send Harvard on a jump for his hat and coat. With two chaperones in the vestibule there was no chance to speak further on the subject to Connie.

Harvard had always wondered why Wednesday night was the night he was banned from calling on Connie, but the next Wednesday night he pretended he had lost track of the days and arrived to size up James and Charles. Two Scotch tightwads, that was his first deduction, and he knew at once why Priscilla and Lucelle were still on the shelf. On the way home he tried to work out a plan.

If some old uncle or somebody would only leave the twin sisters a fortune as bait for their long-standing swains, he thought; or better still, if some uncle that had not been heard of for years would show up and offer a thousand dollar bonus to the sister who was married first, "James and Charles would likely fall over one another to drag the sisters to the altar first. Why, they did have an uncle somewhere—an Uncle Ben that had not been heard of for years, he remembered. Why couldn't Uncle Ben show up?

* * * * * * *

"Look out!" Harvard was just in time to pull the old gentleman in front of him out of the path of an oncoming car. The night was a stormy one, and the old man's eyesight seemed defective.

"Thank you so much," the old fellow began. Harvard could feel him shaking under his grasp.

"Can't I help you home?" he offered. "The streets are slippery and the lights are poor."

"Thank you so much," the old man said again, but this time in a tone that gave consent. Harvard helped him along in silence. "They stopped in front of the city's best hotel.

"I'm going in here," the old gentleman said, as he fumbled in his pockets. He drew forth a card. "Come to see me in the morning," he invited.

Harvard pocketed the card. He had no intention of calling on the old fellow, but when he was undressing that night and the card dropped to the floor he picked it up and looked at the name. "Benjamin Coles" was neatly engraved upon it.

Harvard laughed. The old man seemed to have come as an answer to his thoughts, but he had sense enough to know that this was not Connie's uncle Ben. Things like that only happened in stories. Just the same it set him thinking.

In the morning he did make the call on Benjamin Coles. He came away smiling. Now for the race between Charles and James, he thought, as he sauntered off to the office.

"Hello," it was Connie's voice over the telephone and Harvard recognized the excitement in her tone. "I must see you at once. I'm waiting at the drug store on the corner," she cried eagerly, and hung up the receiver before he could answer her. He hurried to meet her, for Connie excited was not the safest person to disappoint.

"Harvard, we must be married at once," she gasped breathlessly as soon as she saw him. "We'll get a thousand dollars if we do."

Harvard tried to appear surprised as she poured out the story of the letter from Uncle Ben. He was in the city, but was disappointed because all his nieces were unmarried, and would give a thousand dollars to the one who was married first, and perhaps an additional thousand if she was married right away. What were wedding presents and bridesmaids to two thousand dollars? It was an unexpected turn of events, but Harvard was equal to it. They hurried to get the license.

"Why, this is the third Miss Lamar I have made out a license for today," the justice told them as he affixed his signature. That knowledge only added to Connie's speed. They arrived at the nearest minister's in record time.

"You are the third Miss Lamar I have married today," the minister announced after the ceremony was over.

"Oh!" Connie could not hide her disappointment, but Harvard hurried her out before she could give it all away.

"I was never so disappointed in my life," she almost cried as they reached the street. "Just think, two thousand gone."

Then Harvard had to confess. He had persuaded Benjamin Coles to write the letter so as to get the sisters married off. It had all been a frame-up. The old man was not her uncle at all.

"Why, he's at the house now, and he's kissed mother and everything," Connie cried in horror.

"The old impostor!" Harvard exclaimed indignantly. "We'll show him." They fairly raced home. An odd scene presented itself there. Two sobbing brides in the arms of their mother and two newly married husbands arguing over the right to the $2,000. Harvard demanded silence while he made the explanation.

"It was all a frame-up," he confessed, "but I am sure we are all going to be happy. Uncle Ben didn't write that letter at all, and the two thousand dollar bonus was only a sell."

"Let Uncle Ben speak for himself." Benjamin Coles stepped from the background. "I did write that letter, and, what is more, I am going to make good my offer; in fact, I am going one better—I am going to give each of my nieces $5,000 each for a wedding present. You see, young man, we all make mistakes. I am Uncle Ben, as my sister here will testify."

"You dear old darling!" Connie, with all her impulsiveness, fairly swept him off his feet as she threw herself into his arms. "Can't you make it ten?"

"Indeed, seeing your husband saved my life last night," I think I can," he agreed, "and, young lady, I envy that young man these hugs."

Jewelry is an Investment
We wish to impress this idea upon you. The purchase of jewelry—the articles found in a jewelry store—is equivalent to putting money in the bank. Silver remains silver, gold remains gold, precious gems ALWAYS retain their intrinsic money value, whether they are in our cases or in your home or on your person.
It is important to bring out this point. So many gifts—so many purchases, fail to provide this substantial claim to common sense. You buy, not only for the pleasure it will give you and yours, but as ONE WAY OF SAVING.
Think of the returns you receive from the purchase of a watch. Silverware—it lasts through generations. Jewelry—it adds the final touch to feminine charm, and may be handed down from one generation to another. Rings—rings grow to be a part of the very personality of the wearer.
Which reminds us, you should see the very beautiful assortment of W.W.W. Gem Set Rings, now on display. Here again is the element of wise buying—thrifty giving.
"Just like money in the bank" is an old phrase, but there is a lot of truth in it.

ASPARAGUS AND HAM SALAD

1 tomato, 1 cucumber, 1 bunch green onions, 1 mango pepper, bunch red and white radishes, some celery hearts and crisp lettuce leaves. Add the following dressing: 1 tablespoonful olive oil, 1 tablespoonful sugar, ½ cup vinegar, salt and pepper to taste.—Mrs. Mary Daugherty.

CHERRY CUSTARD PIE

Line a pie pan with a good crust. Put in a good layer of cherries sweetened; beat one egg, add one cup milk, one heaping teaspoon sugar, one teaspoon corn starch dissolved in a little water, pour over cherries; bake till custard is set.—Mrs. U. A. Skipper.

SPONGE CAKE

2 eggs beaten 5 minutes, add 1 cup of sugar; beat again. Sift together 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, pinch of salt; add this to sugar and eggs; mix lightly but thoroughly, then add 1 teaspoon vanilla, ½ cup hot sweet milk. —Mrs. A. C. Matheny.

COCOA SPONGE CAKE

Sift 2 cups of sugar and 2 heaping tablespoons of cocoa together; beat 4 eggs to a froth, then add to sugar and cocoa. Sift 2 cups of flour 5 times with 2 teaspoons of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Heat 1 cup of sweet milk and butter size of a walnut to boiling; stir flour in eggs and sugar, then add milk and butter; stir well and pour in pans.

Icing for cake: Get chocolate creams and stir enough boiling water to make thin enough to spread on cake.—Mrs. A. C. Matheny.

ODD TASTE IN ADORNMENT

Natives of Portuguese East Africa Regard Empty Condensed-Milk Tins as Desirable Ornaments.

The odd predilections of the African native in the way of personal ornament and adornment have always been a subject to excite wonderment in the average white man, without in the least creating in him any particular desire for imitation. The native of Uganda, in top-hat and cuffs, especially has proved to be an excellent subject for the caricaturist of the African "on his heath." But the natives of Portuguese East Africa have surely a claim to making something like a record for odd adornment, if the story of a British noncommissioned officer just returned from that country is to be believed. He says: "During the trek into the interior, a distance of over 950 miles was covered, and it was necessary to replace our stocks of food at each native encampment we reached. The native folk always protested volubly that the fleeing enemy had taken all they had, but we soon learned that the best medium for getting what we wanted was an empty tin or Bovril bottle, carefully polished beforehand. The production of these articles was always instantaneous in effect, and in one group of hutments, one of the unsophisticated 'darkies' was a striking advertisement for a condensed-milk firm, for we left her with a string of empty tins hanging round her neck."

AMERICANIZATION

I determined to go alone soon and have a talk with him. What do you think that big, fine fellow told me? That he was sending thirty of that weekly fifty to Italy. He was supplying funds to three families of relatives and to a cousin, a prisoner in Austria. 'But surely,' I expostulated, 'you and Katy can manage on the twenty a week for the present, anyway.' Then Virginius came out with the astonishing statement that he wanted to wait until he could give Katy a 'nice-a home like-a American girls'—and clothes like mine! I asked him if he would leave it to me to find out how Katy felt on the subject. Of course I knew," Ruth added pensively, "how any woman would feel if she really loved a man." Then, rousing herself, she concluded brightly: "So they were married and lived happily ever afterward. I helped them fix up their two little rooms. There is a baby now and so much money doesn't have to go across the water, so they get along very well. That's all of my tale. Now you talk."

The big man's eyes had much that setter dog look when he spoke. "Miss Devereaux," he said, "would you feel that way if you really loved a man?"

"Yes," she answered, meeting his eyes bravely, "I would."

"I earn seventy-five dollars a week," Ogden continued, "and twenty-five of that I send to my mother. Could you be happy sharing the remainder, with prospects of more after a while, if I can make you love me? Would you give up this?" looking around the spacious room.

"Mother and dad began on twelve a week," answered Ruth.

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

A party was given Tuesday, July 29, 1919 on Helen Oliver, aged 12. The afternoon was spent in games. Those present were: Esther Whipple, Ruth Oliver, Ruth Scott, Ruth Whipple, Alice Story, Dorothy Sweeney, Catherine Walton, Frances, Cora Band and Helen Oliver.

Men of Hilltop Church of Christ Sunday night inaugurated a movement for a new church.

Plans for the structure will be submitted to the congregation at a rally day early in September. The same day a drive for the necessary funds will be started.

Rev. J. N. Johnston, pastor of the church, is a chairman of a committee on plans.

Jesse Miller, M. A. Johnson and Frost Brant form a committee to plan the financial drive.

Organized three years ago the church has 125 members. They have been worshiping at Odd Fellows Hall, 2367 W. Broad St.

Miss Minnie Alkire, of Cleveland, has been spending a few days with Mrs. James A. Hill, 166 North Harris Avenue. Miss Alkire is a graduate nurse from the Charity Hospital of Cleveland. She sailed with 100 nurses in April 1918 for overseas duties and field hospital work in France. She was present during three great battles when the American boys assisted in pushing the Germans back, one of which was at Chateau Thierry. She was also on duty when the Germans were within 40 miles of Paris.

Mrs. Daniel Churton and son, Dan, returned to their home in Huntington, W. Va., Friday of last week after an extended visit at the home of Mrs. Churton's mother, Mrs. Isabella Burnside, 39 North Ogden Avenue. They were accompanied by Miss Lillian Donaldson, of New Brighton, Pa., who will visit for some time with Mrs. Churton.

Mr. James L. Russell, 158 North Warren Avenue, who is employed with the Buckeye Railway & Coal Co., is on his vacation on a trip through the mines in Southern Ohio.

Mrs. J. R. Neely of Washington, D. C., visited with her brother, G. M. Russell, and family the past week.

Mr. A. T. Hatfield of 79 N. Park Avenue is laid up at his home with a very sore arm. He will be unable to take charge of his work carpentry for some time.

Mrs. D. B. Lashley and two daughters, Thelma and Beulah of 20 Belvidere avenue leave Thursday to visit relatives in Canton, Ohio.

Hilltop Deaths

Mary Frances Dean, wife of James W. Ham, was born, May, 1862, and passed peacefully into the great beyond on the morning of July 23, 1919, at her home, 153 N. Harris Avenue of complications, having passed the 57th milestone of life.

While she was in failing health for many weeks, she was compeled to keep her bed for only two weeks at the last. Through all her illness she bore her sufferings with patience and meekness. She possessed wonderful executive ability, which made her a victor in her undertakings and which endeared her to her family, and in the future years her wise counsels will be cherished as sacred by them to whom she was so loyally devoted.

She was a quiet unassuming neighbor and to those who knew her well, she was ever pleasant and genial.

She leaves to mourn their loss a devoted companion, one daughter, Mrs. Edith Wright, three sons, Elmer, Joseph and Jesse, who was recently discharged from military service, all of this city; one grandchild, two brothers and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted from her late home, 153 N. Harris Ave. by Rev. H. A. Handy of the Friends Church. "Beautiful Isles of Somewhere," "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," and "Some Day," were rendered as duets with harp accompaniment, the many beautiful floral offerings attesting the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

The family desire, at this time, to extend their heartfelt thanks and express their sincere appreciation to the minister, singers, undertaker, friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted them in their recent sickness and bereavement.

A TRIBUTE

"It was all a mistake, a dream I suppose;
There is no fresh earth in the cemetery there.
Where the night falls first, and the north wind blows
Till the little knoll is bleak and bare.
(Listen! Was that her step on the stair?)"

"The lamp is alight in the room below,
She is sitting there sewing an overcast seam.
And the fire leaps up and the shadows go,
And her face, so white, takes a rosy gleam.
(Hush! That whiteness was only a dream!)

"I could call her—Mother!—she sleeps so near,
And she'd answer me any hour o' the night.
"Don't be frightened, the dark won't hurt you, dear."
And then she would come and bring the light.
(But I won't call now, thought I know I might.")

Little Orville Carson, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Carson, 401 S. Warren Avenue, whom has been critical ill with infectious Diahorea, the past week is reported slightly improved at this writing. His parents, who worship him have made a strenuous fight to save the little fellow's life. Kind neighbors and friends assisting. He is being treated by Drs. Howard Whitehead and A. G. Helmick, the baby specialist with Miss Salters, trained nurse in charge of his nursing.

LATER. As we go to press Thursday morning, a phone message states little Orville is dying

Mr. and Mrs. Looker, daughter, Helen and son, Harry, 47 N. Eureka avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Mayer and daughter, Donna, 181 North Harris Avenue, are spending two weeks at Buckeye Lake.

Miss Audrey Guyton of Logansport, Ind., and Miss Catherine Weisheimer of W. 8th Avenue, city, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin, 123 N. Park Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. John N. Jones of 33 N. Oakley Ave., are enjoying a week's vacation at Vinton, Ohio, Galia County.

The August meeting of the Missionary Society of the Hilltop Church of Christ will be held at Glenwood Park Wednesday, August 6th from 10:00 A. M. to 4:00 P. M. Every member should be present. A good social time, picnic dinner and a short informal program at 1:30. All other women of the church are invited to come and enjoy the day. Bring your small children to enjoy the playground. A bunch of older girls will be there to help amuse the children and give the mothers a good outing. Everyone please bring sandwiches and one other article which will be arranged by the committee.

All July and August dues should be paid at this time. New programs and plans for the coming year will be presented and explained.

Evangelistic Tent Meetings

At a meeting of pastors and lay members of the West Side Evangelistic Churches, instigated by the West Side Brotherhood, an invitation was given to Rev. Harry James, evangelist to conduct a series of gospel tent meetings on the Hilltop, and also further east on the West Side. The meetings to be of about six weeks duration—three weeks in each place. The meetings to begin probably the latter part of August. An executive committee was appointed, consisting of one layman from each church, with the pastor of each church also to be an ex-officio member of said committee. There will be a meeting of the Executive Committee next Friday night at the West Broad Presbyterian Church to make further arrangements for these meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Meyers of Detroit, Michigan, spent Wednesday with Rev. J. M. Wenrich, 120 Midland Ave., on their way home after visiting in Fairfield County.

The Sunday School of the Hilltop Evangelical Lutheran Church will hold their annual picnic at Glenwood Park, on Wednesday, August 13th. All friends of the school are invited to picnic with them.

Rev. S. M. Wenrich, of Bowmantown, Pa., is visiting with his brother, Rev. J. M. Wenrich, 120 Midland Ave. He is supplying the pulpit at Miamisburg during the absence of the pastor there.

Mr. Harry England and Miss Ruth Schab were married on July 17th, by Rev. J. M. Wenrich, at his home, 120 Midland Ave.

Mrs. C. A. Ingham, 71 Highland ave., is visiting her granddaughter, Mrs. Walter Castoe, at Ridgeway, Ohio.

The regular business meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of Glenwood M. E. Church will be held Thursday, Aug. 7th at 2:00 P. M., at the church.

Mr. Charles Forte, teacher of the boys' class at St. John's Lutheran Church, took the members of his class through the State Penitentiary last Tuesday.

Mrs. Cowley entertained her class of Hillcrest Baptist S. S. Monday afternoon with a picnic at Glenwood Park. Those present were: Misses Laura Tullar, Esther Patton, Evelyn Wright, Helen Stewart, Carrie Fleming, Helen Mae Douglas, Ruth Reams, Esther Reams Mabel Stockwell, Esther Guyer, Iola Rose of Newark, and Mrs. Cowley. All reported a good time.

Tri Mu

Remember that building on Highland Avenue called Glenwood M. E. Church? Remember your first visit to a cool little room in the basement called Tri Mu? Remember how welcome you were and such a fine bunch of fellows to get acquainted with? Do you also recall the first banquet ever eaten under thhe name of Tri Mu? Have you attended Sunday School lately? Well, if not now is the time, now quaintances and make new friends. Right now you are needed for the red and blue contest is on and almost over. Ends August 10, so you better hurry and get a reserved seat. This banquet is going to be some fed. Be there either August 3 or August 10 and get in on a good speaker. It is hoped that Eddie Rickenbacker will be with us that last day. He also has been invited as our speaker but hasn't as yet accepted. The class endeavors to go to all the member's homes on August 10, get you up for Sunday School then call and take in a machine. The score for the contest now is still in favor of the blue side. For Sunday it was even, twenty being present on both sides. Total score now is, Blues 67, Reds, 60. Pretty close—so get on a side. Remember the last Sunday is to see 100 out sure.

LEFT THE TELLER GASPING

Misplaced Confidence in His Infallibility Cost Him Neat Little Sum of Forty Dollars.

Everyone feels an unholy joy when the cruel stepfather falls downstairs or when the harsh employer is knocked down by the clean-cut, athletic young machinist. And there's a kindred feeling in the story that an author tells in System, the magazine of business, to illustrate the need for telephone courtesy.

A bookkeeper, wishing change for petty cash, sent a check and memorandum to the bank. The amount returned was not correct. The messenger who had brought the change told her he had been served at window A.

The bookkeeper called the bank and asked for this teller.

"Is this the teller at window A?"

"Yes. What may I do for you?"

"I sent a messenger to you for change. The amount I received is not correct, and—"

The teller broke in gruffly: "We never make any corrections or allowances after anyone leaves the bank."

"Oh! thank you so much," was the sweet reply; "I am $40 ahead. Good-by!"

Wisdom of Defoe.

"And herein it is that I take upon me to make such a bold assertion that all the world are mistaken in their practice about women; for I cannot think that God Almighty made them . . . so glorious creatures . . . with souls capable of the same accomplishments with men, and all to be only stewards of our houses, cooks and slaves." This advanced doctrine, which in its climax sounds somewhat as if it were uttered in a present-day convention, according to the Outlook, was written, as is noted in a recent book on English literature, some 200 years ago, by Daniel Defoe.

The Robin's Opinion.

Guinea Hen—"My singing evidently does not appeal to you?" Robin—"Singing! Suffering cats!- What you mistake for vocal chords is merely a filing device."—Buffalo Express.

Historic Island.

The little island in the mouth of the Forth, which was the rendezvous for the German cruiser Konigsberg and the British fleet, has had previous associations with the Hungarians, if not with the Germans. It contains the ruins of a thirteenth century chapel dedicated to St. Adrian, who, with 6,000 other Hungarians, are said to have been killed by the Danes and buried on the island. In former times 15 fishermen, with their families, lived on the May, and at the end of the fishing season, the fishermen of the Fife coast used annually to hold a merry making on the island. The wreck and total loss of a boatful of women on its passage to the May brought the custom to a tragic end.

Divorce Cured

By JOHN GREGG

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

If ever any woman had cause for a divorce it was Edith—that is how Edith reasoned, anyway. Tom had been the neglectful husband almost from their honeymoon. And quarrels! Well, it was almost more than she could stand. Everything she said he disagreed with. Everything he said she disagreed with, although she did not think of that part of it. She did not like his relatives, and he hated hers. His sister Argentine had made the second summer of their marriage miserable for Edith, and now Tom had a perfect right to put up with her brother Gerald. Gerald was a good sort, and was a much better brother than Tom was a husband.

The last straw came when Tom had refused utterly to publish one of Gerald's stories. Tom was head of a publishing house and could have easily marketed one of Gerald's many literary endeavors, and Edith was quite sure he would have done so had Gerald been any one save her brother. Their quarrel had been a long and heated one and that night Edith had cried herself to sleep. In the morning she came down almost ready to forgive, but the first sound that greeted her caused all the resentment to come back into her soul. Tom was lecturing Gerald scathingly.

"I won't have you sitting up writing stories until two o'clock in the morning in my house," Tom was saying. "It would be more to your credit, young man, if you got out and did some real work—something that would do some good in the world."

At this point Edith blundered in. Few women are beautiful when angry and Edith isn't included in the few.

Caused All Resentment to Come Back.

It was terrible, that is all we can say, and we might add that Gerald was the only one of the three that acted creditably. He retreated to his room, leaving Edith blustering and Tom gasping in an endeavor to find some rejoinder to her biting words.

When Gerald came down stairs, two hours later, Edith was still crying.

"It's all ended," she sobbed on Gerald's shoulder. "Tom has telephoned for his lawyer and I have telephoned for mine. They will be here this evening to arrange for the divorce. It is better so."

At seven o'clock Edith was in an evening gown, seated in the library waiting the arrival of the lawyers with her husband, although they were not to be there until eight. She was fighting hard to keep back the tears, and as she sat there with just the tiniest tears glistening in her eyes she looked like a pretty little disobedient child trying to stick to it that she had not been naughty at all. She tried to brighten up when Gerald entered.

"Read this, Sis. It's my latest story," her brother said as he pushed forward a manuscript to her, and then passed out. It was just like Gerald to give her something to take her mind off her trouble, she reflected, as she tried to open the pages. If Tom had only been more like him!

* * * * * * *

Divorced! Edith was free. In her hands were the papers that canceled her marriage certificate. Somehow the feeling of freedom that she had expected did not come over her. It seemed odd to see Tom hailing a taxi and not offering his arm to assist her in. There he was, going away alone, perhaps she would never see him again, and he had not kissed her goodby. Of course, he hadn't! He did not have the right to now. It felt funny to be hailing a taxi for herself, and the ride home felt horribly lonely.

How wearisome the house was, and how quiet! The servants had all gone away for the day.

Where was the large portrait of Tom that had stood in the corner in the library? Of course he had taken that away. How strangely unfamiliar was the aroma in the den! Flowers were on the table where his pipes had stood and a dish of candies replaced his ash tray. Who had given orders for those changes? Why Tom, of course. He was always considerate in little things, for no one knew as he did what pleased her most.

The flowers were violets, too, her favorites. In the excitement she had not noticed that. It was good of Tom to remember them. How could he forget them—how could either of them forget them? Was it not in a wood purple with violets where first they had met? Were they not violets he brought with the ring that sealed their engagement, and had not her wedding bouquet been most of violets?

How beautiful had the violets seemed then! What a wonderful day it had been! What a wonderful lover had Tom been! What a wonderful husband had he started out to be! Why had he changed? The question startled Edith. The thought that perhaps she had been to blame for the whole thing came to her for the first time.

In a lonely apartment in a large hotel, sitting before a fireplace that had not been kindled, his head in his hands, sat Tom, the loneliest man in creation. That day he had lost his dearest possession, the most wonderful little wife in the world, and he had just realized that the whole thing had been his fault.

He had crossed Edith in her every little whim, just as she had crossed him in his, though he should have overlooked that. They had expected too much of one another. To make life happy one must give in to one's life mate, but neither Edith or Tom had surrendered to each other on even small points. It was a wonder they had not been divorced before.

What other woman would have put up with him as Edith had done? thought Tom in his lonely apartment. And what other man would have put up with her as Tom had done? thought Edith in the library of the lonely home that was hers by law but belonged to Tom by rights. They had been ideally suited to one another had they only had the power of giving in. Their tastes, their ambitions, their ideals were the same, so why had they not been happy? Thus they both thought. Gone was everything, the ambitions, the ideals, the little children they had dreamed of and the happy old age they had planned to have together. The hopes of a young lifetime shattered by a decree of divorce! There was no turning back. Divorced couples are only re-married in stories and moving pictures. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lester were no more. Mrs. Edith Lester and Mr. Thomas Lester survived. The rest of her life would be spent in dreaming of the love and happiness she had cast aside, and his would be spent in lamenting the wife and children that had been denied him.

"Oh, Tom, Tom, forgive me! It has all been my fault," Edith jumped to her feet and threw her brother's manuscript to the floor, tottered and almost fell. Tom was right behind her and caught her in his arms.

"It isn't true, dear; you are still mine," he cried as he kissed her again and again. "The lawyers haven't come yet; let's start all over again."

"Gerald's story seemed so real," she sobbed.

"Too real," he laughed, with an effort to shake off the feeling of depression that had crept over him. "He led me in here to read it over your shoulder. He's a clever kid! I think I'll give him that chance he wants in our fiction department."

"You darling!" Edith smothered further promises with kisses.

A Mental Transformation

By LILIAN HALL CROWLEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Maxie put the manuscript in her bag and started for the subway. She was a very happy young woman this pleasant March morning, for her hopes seemed well on the way to realization.

She had been studying and working hard on her music during the past winter in New York. She had the creative faculty and had been encouraged by teachers and friends to try and publish her compositions. She had at last finished some of the manuscripts and was on her way downtown to see a publisher.

Smiling and light-hearted she was ushered into the office where sat the great man whose dictum either made or did not make the would-be artist.

"Is this Mr. Granville?"

"Uh-huh!"

He was a rather large man whose sedentary life had brought about a loose look to his figure. He wore spectacles and did not rise when Maxie introduced herself. A grunt emanated from his tightly closed lips—if a man of importance would do such a thing as grunt. Maxie stated her business. He did not ask her to sit down, and she began to feel indignant.

"We have lots of this kind of stuff." He fingered the manuscript disdainfully. "I don't suppose this is any better than most of the others that come in here."

"But you haven't looked at it!"

"I can imagine what it is," he growled, without looking at her.

By this time Maxie was very angry. She did not expect to be received by a man of business as if she were in his dressing room, but she had not counted on this.

"Mr. Granville, this is a business house, is it not?"

"Certainly," he answered in surprise.

"Well, then, I am submitting this music to you as a business proposition. That is for what this business is organized. You do not know whether my music is suitable or not, because you haven't looked at it. If it is what you want, you have value received and you are not doing me a favor. I should think that courtesy would cost you nothing, either in time or money. You think because you are old it is your prerogative to be rude. Good-day!"

She took the manuscript from the desk and started for the elevator.

"Just a moment, Miss Jones." He arose from his chair. "If you will leave the music and your address with me, I will look it over."

"Very well! The address is inclosed." Maxie haughtily handed him the manuscript and walked out of the room without further look.

The city was suddenly thrust in the throes of a heavy snowstorm, and when the first thaw came the streets were a mass of slush and water.

Maxie, although a very pretty girl, knew that her chief beauty was her slender feet. Having a natural pride in their beauty, Maxie always wore the loveliest of lovely shoes; but on this particular day, when she had a number of errands which required walking, she put on her oldest and ugliest shoes and over them a hideous pair of storm rubbers. Returning at dusk, and when she was a block from her boarding place, her feet slipped from under her and she fell to a sitting position on the sidewalk, with both muddy rubbers sticking up as much as to say: "Look at me."

And looked at they were by a man coming round the corner. For a moment he was surprised at the suddenness of the affair—then, looking from ugly rubbers to the face of the fallen one, he exclaimed:

"Why—why, Miss Jones!"

Maxie, humiliated to find herself in such a miserable plight, could only gasp: "Why—why, Mr. Granville!"

"Permit me to assist you." He helped the forlorn girl to her feet and, offering his arm, which she reluctantly took, he escorted her to her door. He was most solicitous about her accident, but Maxie assured him that she was not hurt at all and thanked him coldly for his assistance. He raised his hat as she went in the door.

Maxie was furious with herself.

"To think of how dignified I thought I was that day I snubbed him, and then, of all men in New York, he should find me sitting in front of him in the mud." She gazed ruefully at the rubbers. Then:

"Why should I care! Horrid old thing!"

About eight o'clock in the evening Maxie was surprised to find her rescuer on the telephone.

"Miss Jones," he said, "when I saw you home this evening I realized that you live next door to me, and I should like to run over now and talk to you about the music, if you have fully recovered from your fall. May I?"

"Why—yes—yes, indeed!" Maxie was confused.

She thought: Horrid old man, he wants to return my compositions so I won't bother him at the office again." Nevertheless she went to her room and powdered her nose before the mirror of her dressing room and felt sure that her gown was most becoming. She smiled as she glanced at the silver slippers which matched it. Then going back to the drawing room, she was ready to receive the ogre. "I shall be dignified to spite him," she thought.

The maid announced "Mr. Granville," and he followed immediately.

"Good evening, Miss Jones." He bowed most graciously, holding the music in his hand.

Maxie was stunned with surprise, for here was a very different person from the man in the office. He was tall and straight, had a pleasant smile and was without spectacles.

"Oh—oh—I thought you were an old man," she exclaimed.

"Well, I am rather—that is, I am thirty-four, which is a great deal older than you."

"I am twenty-four," Maxie replied, "but I thought when I saw you in the office that you were as old as my father. You don't look at all old tonight, though."

"Perhaps I am more human than I was the other day."

"Perhaps," said Maxie, freezingly.

Seeing he was on dangerous ground he changed the subject.

Maxie stole a glance at him and was glad she had looked in her mirror.

"I find I like your music very much, but would like to suggest a few changes. May I show them to you? You see, this is from the standpoint of the market," he hastened to add.

"You are very kind. Yes, I should like to have your criticism."

"Well, hardly that," he replied, "but I think if you would change this it would go better," pointing to a place in the score.

Maxie saw at once that the changes he suggested were an improvement and they went on from that to discuss modern music in comparison with the old.

Tom Granville arose to go. "We haven't finished going over the music. May I come to-morrow night?"

Jewelry is an Investment
We wish to impress this idea upon you. The purchase of jewelry—the articles found in a jewelry store—is equivalent to putting money in the bank. Silver remains silver, gold remains gold, precious gems ALWAYS retain their intrinsic money value, whether they are in our cases or in your home or on your person.
It is important to bring out this point. So many gifts—so many purchases, fail to provide this substantial claim to common sense. You buy not only for the pleasure it will give you and yours, but as ONE WAY OF SAVING.
Think of the returns you receive from the purchase of a watch. Silverware—it lasts through generations. Jewelry—it adds the final touch to feminine charm, and may be handed down from one generation to another. Rings—rings grow to be a part of the very personality of the wearer.
Which reminds us, you should see the very beautiful assortment of W.W.W. Gem Set Rings, now on display. Here again is the element of wise buying—thrifty giving.
"Just like money in the bank" is an old phrase, but there is a lot of truth in it.

BUNS

When baking bread, before making into loaves cut off a piece of dough the size of a teacup and cut in small pieces. Add 1 cup warm water, ½ cup sugar, lard the size of an egg, and ½ a teaspoon of salt. Let stand for 20 minutes and mix into a soft dough; let stand until light, then mix and let raise the second time, and when light make into buns and let stand for about ½ hours and bake for 20 minutes. This makes about two dozen buns.—Mrs. Kramer.

CRUMB CAKE

4 cups flour, 2 cups sugar, ½ cup butter, 4 teaspoons baking powder; mix as for pie crust with hands and take out half a cupful for top of cakes. Add to remaining mixture 2 eggs and 1 cup of milk. Bake in layer tins. Do not take out of pans when done. Cut when you want to use it. Mrs. Raether.

CELERY SAVORY

2 large stalks of celery, 1 large onion, 2 green peppers, 2 tablespoons butter. Chop all rather coarsely and fry slowly in the butter till tender. Serve with steak.—Mrs. Raether.

A Mental Translation

"Oh, yes," Mazie answered. "I am so happy that you are going to publish it. One is so foolish about one's creations, you know."

The next night he took the music with him to have it published.

There were many things to be seen to in the next few weeks which necessitated telephone calls and personal calls in the evening—many of them. Very soon they were calling each other Tom and Mazie.

Mazie loved the outdoors and she and Tom took long walks in Central Park and along Riverside drive; they drank in the delightfully cool air which swept over the Hudson. Tom's muscles began to harden and he soon lost the flabby slouch of the office. In fact he was very good looking and very happy. Mazie had forgotten her first impressions and to her he seemed a great, big, splendid hero.

They found they were most congenial, for not only had they their music in common, but both loved pictures and visited the art galleries together whenever Tom could leave the office and Mazie her studies. These days were eagerly looked forward to and became a part of their lives.

At last the time drew near for Mazie to go back to her home in Ohio. Only one more afternoon for them to be together. They were very silent as they seated themselves on a bench near the big fountain in Central park.

"Will you marry me, Mazie? I have loved you from the moment you scolded me in the office."

"What if it should become a habit with me? You wouldn't like to be scolded again, would you?" she asked smiling roguishly at him.

"Yes, yes, by all means scold if I ever become such a boor again. I was settling into the worst form of old bachelorhood when you startled me out of my complacency. Please marry me and save me!"

Mazie's worshipful look was turned full upon his handsome face as she replied:

"I will marry you, but it will be because I love you!"

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

Cyrus D. Ferris, 75, retired farmer and civil war veteran, died of complications Sunday at his home, 143 N. Wheatland Ave. He leaves a widow, three sons, three daughters and a sister. Funeral was held at 2 p. m. Wednesday at the Glenwood Avenue M. E. Church. Burial in Green Lawn.

James Holmes, 87, died of infirmities of age Sunday at his home, 129 Clarendon Ave. He leaves one son and two daughters. Funeral at 10 a. m. Tuesday at the residence. The body was taken to Xenia O., for burial.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Rev. Herbert A. Handy, pastor of Highland Avenue Friends Church, to Miss Ruth Gladys Lehman of Canton, Ohio, July 28th. Rev. and Mrs. Handy are at Newport News, Va., his former home. They expect to be at home, 143 S. Wheatland Ave. after August 16th.

Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Wollam, 458 S. Ogden Avenue, enjoyed the company of 2 automobile loads of friends Sunday, who came up from Portsmouth, Ohio. Also Mrs. Wollam, his mother and Mr. Walter, who visited them a few days.

One of our popular Hilltop young ladies is said to have been so eager to make a GOOD cake to take to Buckeye Lake Annual Outing last week that she first forgot to put in the eggs. But in order to reconcile for this she substituted camphor for other flavoring when she prepared the icing, thus in a humane way taking care of any of her friends who might succumb to the inevitable after part taking of the cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Bishop, North Wheatland Avenue, who will take up their residence in Ft. Wayne, Ind., were given a farewell party by a number of their friends at the home of Miss Verna Peake. Those in the party were the Misses Helen Kunzi, Ruth Young, Eleanor Young, Iris Clover, Ruth Hensel and Verna Peake; also Messers. Robert Wilson, Lester Bishop, Lauren Turner, Charles Harra, and Mrs. Auston Bishop.

Mrs. Voilet D. Porter of 13 N. Grubb Street has purchased the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kaufman on North Park Ave.

Miss Julia Bartolich and Mr. Arley E. Eddy were united in marriage by J. N. Johnston, pastor of the Church of Christ at his home, 90 Eldon Ave. Saturday evening at 8:30. The groom is a member of Fourth Avenue Congregation. They will make their home at 2 Thirteenth Avenue.

"Perils of Thunder Mountain," a new serial, featuring Antonio Morino will be at the Empire Hilltop Theatre tonight and Friday.

Mrs. Geo. Davis and children recently returned from a ten days visit with friends in Jackson county, bringing home a large quanty of blackberries.

Mrs. Rev. A. E. Cowley spent a few days in Newark.

UNION TENT MEETINGS

Will be Held at Eureka and Broad, Beginning Sunday, August 17th, and Continuing for About Three Weeks. West Side Churches Co-Operating. Under Leadership of Rev. Harry James and Party

These meetings, which will be held, first on the Hilltop then for three weeks further east on the West Side, have been instigated by the West Side Brotherhood, with the West Side churches co-operating. The large choir will be composed of singers from all the churches, under the leadership of Mr. Wagner, song leader. Rev. Harry James, Evangelist, will conduct the services.

Harry James was born at Quincy, Logan County, Ohio, July 12, 1885. He was born again at Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 27, 1913. He received the Holy Ghost as his Comforter, Revealer of Jesus, Guide, Teacher, Earnest and Enduement with power for service at Columbus, Ohio, August 27, 1914. From that time on God has wonderfully used him as a soul-winner. He has been actively engaged in seeking gems for Jesus by conducting meetings on street corners, in missions, institutions, shops, homes, assisting at Railway Y. M. C. A. meetings, etc.

His first pulpit was on a street corner near a picture show he formerly managed. He drew great crowds to him with his cornet music, then used his cornet case for a pulpit to help him to see his vast congregation, stood upon it, and told what God had done for and in him.

He has the qualifications of a successful evangelist. Besides this he is a talended musician. His mother is authority for the statement that he sang before he could crawl. At the age of eight years he directed a band. Since that time he has directed bands at leading amusement parks, theatres, carnivals, shows, etc.

To the great sorrow of his devoted Christian mother's heart, his music led him away from God and his home training. The managers of these places of worldly amusement want the best that can be procured, and, knowing his ability, placed some very enticing inducements before him. They knew he was worth almost any price he asked because he drew great audiences of pleasure-seekers with his music. He could get music out of almost anything from plates, tumblers, silver forks, or cow bells to a cornet, trombone or chimes. He loved music and this was a chance for him to earn big wages at work he loved. It also afforded him an opportunity to rise in the world of fame.

While he left home at the age of sixteen to give his life to music, he never got away from his home influenc. He was born to Christian parents and reared under the influence of the family altar. He managed two "movies," owned one and had one-half interest in the other when W. A. Sunday and his party came to Columbus. As Columbus gave Mr. Sunday the best of everything else the Arch City afforded, it wanted him to have the best musicians obtainable, so Mr. James was asked to assist the Burke Bros. Band in escorting the delegations to the tabernacle. This he did twenty-eight nights. While there he was brought under conviction for sin and repented of his sins. He at once left the show business at a great financial loss to him.

His highest and only ambition in life is to be a soul-winner. He has had the praise of men in the theatrical world; chautauquas have sought his services, others have held high worldly aspirations before him, but he has turned a deaf ear to all but the call of God to be a soul-winner for Him. When he caught the vision of the Crucified One—this world lost all its charms for him. Jesus' voice was sweeter music to him than he had ever before heard or made. It is still so transcendently sweet that he seems deaf to all the world's inducements.

God prepared the way for him to attend Moody Bible Institute, where he won the hearts of the spiritual men under whose godly influence he learned many valuable and appreciated lessons. He won a large place in the hearts of such men as Dr. James M. Gray, Paul Rader, pastor Moody church, Chicago, "Grandpa" Harry Monroe, of the Pacific Garden Mission, where W. A. Sunday was converted, Melvin Trotter, Messrs. Pope, Ketchum, Zartman, Honeywell and others whose friendship he esteems highly and who feels he is a chosen vessel and that God has a great work for him. Mr. James is a clean-cut, high-principled, well-trained, fearless, full-gospel soul-winner, message-bearer and ambassador for his Master. With the fire of a Finney, he fearlessly attacks sin, inside and outside the churches, beginning at the pulpit and ending—well we haven't heard the end yet. Possessing the love and tenderness of a Moody, he wins the hearts of men to Jesus by the sweet story of the Calvary sacrifice and purchase.

His name is on the prayer list of a large circle of Christian friends he has merited and made by his Christ-like life in the shop, in school and among his co-workers for the extension of Christ's Kingdom.

Obituary

Orville Frank Carson, son of Jerry H. and Ethel Carson, was born at Columbus, Ohio, July 4, 1917; and died at the home of his parents, 401 South Warren Avenue, July 31, 1919; aged two years and twenty-seven days.

Orville had been very seriously ill at another time, and it was only by the very best of care that his life was prolonged. However, he was thought to be in the best of health, until about nine days before his disease, at which time he contracted infectious diahorea. (Although everything was done of which the medical profession had knowledge,) four physicians, a specialist, and a skilled trained nurse treated him and he had the very best of care and nursing, his earthly life could not be saved; for God of the heavens had come to take him home.

While the hearts of the parents are broken, the four little sisters are lonesome without their only brother, and the hearts of many friends are bowed with sympathy, yet we can all find consolation and comfort by looking unto Him, who said, "of such is the kingdom of heaven." It was in the tender years of innocence that he was taken away. So shall we ever remember him in his purity, unmarred by this world of sin and selfishness.

"There's many an empty cradle, there is many an empty bed,
There's many an empty bosom, where joy and light have fled,
Too thick in every graveyard the little hillocks lie,
And every hillock represents an angel in the sky."

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. B. White at the residence, 1 P. M., Saturday. Little Orville was laid to rest in the family plot at Galloway Cemetery, Saturday afternoon. Friends and relatives from Huntington, W. Va., Cincinnati, and Newark were in attendance. The following little girls whom had known little Orville from birth acted as pall bearers: Josephine Davis, Flora Kuch, Irene Ware, Maxine Seeds, Lucile Seeds, Gazelle Connors. The floral offerings were wonderful.

Mr. Mason Morris, of 50 N. Warren Ave., long since discarded the rolling chair and is putting in about 10 hours a day at the bench. Look up his phone and ask him what KE-O-KA had to do with it.

For three months in spring of 1919 I could not sleep, no appetite, nervous and seemingly worn out. I noticed with some concern that I had lost thirty pounds in three weeks.

I had heard that KE-O-KA had splendid qualities. I began to use it three times a day as directed. When I started on the third bottle I saw I was better. Now I sleep well, my appetite is good and I feel fine.

John W. Haunts.

I will talk with any one and you may call Hilltop 180.

In calling attention to my Nerve and Blood Remedy known as KE-O-KA Notice:

First—It contains extracts of eight different roots and barks. The medicinal virtue of which has been acknowledged for centuries.

Second—It has been tested for 28 years in Columbus.

Third—The formula is no secret. Contains no opiate.

Fourth—It is the prescription of a skilled physician.

In view of the Flu epidemic last fall.

To purify the blood may be a very important matter.

It is just as important to keep well as it is to hurry when danger threatens.

We ask you to examine the facts and to take advantage of the splendid qualities of KE-O-KA.

We deal direct with the people and deliver to any part of the city.

The Tri-Mu class is getting better. Why? On account of the red and blue contest. Yes, it proves that a contest will do great things. The class improves each Sunday. As the blue side continues to lead so will the reds have to hustle. The attendance Sunday, August 3, was 42 present. The score was blue 21 and reds 20. A close score with the reds hot on the trail of new men and all the old ones. Remember that the attendance for next Sunday is 100. Being the last day of the contest and means that every fellow wants to be ready for that free ride to Sunday School. Some one will call at your house at 7:00 A. M., get you up and then call at 9:00 and take you to Sunday School. Don't get mad and not come after you are awakened at such an early hour as 7:00 o'clock, just get ready and come. The losing side will banquet the winner on Friday, August 29th in the basement of Glenwood Church. Starting promptly at 7:30 P. M. For the sake of a good feed and your own personal good come out next Sunday. Make others stand up and take notice of Tri Mu contests and all entertainments.

A Job for Jerry

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Gerald Donaldson had returned from fourteen months of overseas service on a United States destroyer to find that he had no job. Also he had returned to America to find himself more in love than ever with Margery Coles.

"If your firm had proved to be as loyal as I have, Jerry," Margery said to him one night when they were discussing the hopeless outlook for their immediate happiness, "we could be married at once, couldn't we?"

Jerry laughed a trifle bitterly. "Yes—but unfortunately my firm thinks of dollars and cents before patriotism."

"Never mind, we'll find a job—we're bound to, dear," Margery comforted. "And I'll wait and keep on working just as long as it is necessary."

When Gerald had enlisted in the navy and had been sent overseas Margery had decided to find herself a position where she might not only be mentally occupied during his absence but where she could be economically independent in case her fiance should not return. For Margery could not conceive of ever loving any one else but Jerry.

Gerald had risen from the status of a common sailor to be a chief petty officer, and while he had had a vast experience in nautical lines, had learned to coal a vessel, had had the wheel on many occasions, had visited many ports in Europe and had had narrow escapes from submarines, he had returned unchanged in his easy-going disposition and lack of business acumen.

"Gerald lacks pep," Margery's brother always said to her. "You know, kid, I'm fond of him and want him for a brother-in-law, but he will never set the world on fire with his brilliance. Now, will he?"

Margery was willing to admit that his wonderful disposition, his gentleness, his almost feminine tact were hardly the best recommendations a man could have for an active business life, and yet she knew that somewhere there must be a place where just such men were needed. Therefore, Margery being in business herself and in touch more or less with various phases of business affairs, decided to find such an opening for Jerry.

Margery knew that Jerry was spending his days trying to find a position, and she realized how difficult it was for him, with his apparently limited ability, to locate a place that would pay a living wage and give promise for the future. Also, she knew that he was growing sensitive about the situation.

Her own employer was a man of splendid business dexterity, had made a success early in life by his own achievement, but his quick temper, his impatience, his lack of tolerance with any sort of inefficiency made him at times difficult to understand.

During the war the telephone service fell below par. On more than one occasion Margery had to use all of her tact to keep her employer from losing his temper with the slowness of the operators in getting numbers, both in and out of the city for him. He was inclined on the spur of the moment to blame a corporation unrestrainedly without considering the exigencies of the occasion.

One day he was unable to obtain any sort of connection to one of his branch offices out of town and he became so thoroughly out of temper, so greatly annoyed at the apparent lack of attention to business on the part of "John"—the exchange in which his own office was located—that he went forthwith to the manager of "John."

By the time he reached the headquarters of the telephone company he was still out of sorts, but not out of temper. He had a talk with "Official John," who proved to be a man of wide understanding of human nature and of extreme tact in handling disgruntled patrons.

Margery was watching for her employer to return, for he had been very cross when he left. She knew him well enough to know that he would have time to consider conditions and would come back in a fairer frame of mind. Secretly, however, Margery was glad she had to spend only eight hours in his employment, and did not have to live in the house with him. She wondered if his wife minded his temper. She was glad Gerald did not have such an irritable disposition.

"Well, Miss Coles, I've had an experience!" Margery's employer said as he stepped into the office.

"Yes, Mr. Hopkinson," Margery said, looking up from her work.

"I went to that telephone company feeling that we had been shamefully treated; that we were being made to pay for service that was unspeakably bad, and—I came away with a feeling that we were impatient, inconsiderate, unpatriotic. That manager of the 'John' branch is a human wonder. You go in there with a peeve—you come out feeling that you should apologize. I call that man an asset in any company. I guess there is a place for every one in this world—even a good disposition and tact and even temper may be made a stock in trade if you can only find the right place to put the stock."

Little did Margery's employer know how much those few words meant to her. At once Gerald's qualities presented themselves to her mind. That was the very sort of position for him. She would start about at once to find him such an opening.

Mr. Hopkinson not only gave her the advice she sought but he went so far as to intercede for her with the telephone company, with the result that Gerald was offered a position in which he could see a splendid future.

He was started in a small and quiet exchange and in that office he displayed such an understanding of human nature, exercised so much tact with the operators under him, with the patrons who had grievances, with the firms who wanted favors, that he was soon promoted to a more active office.

"You see how your good nature serves you, now, Jerry, dear," Margery said to him one day when they were planning their future—hopefully this time.

"I see how your blessed understanding of my limitations has brought my few good qualities to the top, yes," he said, tenderly.

"You mustn't give me credit, Jerry. It was quite by accident that I found the place where such dear, patient people as you can be of really commercial value to a big corporation."

"And I know of a place that you must promise to fill very soon where just such sweetness as yours can be of never-ending value, dear," Jerry said. "Do you know where that is?"

Margery nodded and displayed further qualities that made Jerry more sure than ever that he needed her soon in his home.

What Is a Bachelor?

Bishop Samuel Fallows, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin 60 years ago, came from Chicago to tell this story in an address at Founders' day ceremonies:

"A certain distinguished man whom I will not name, was asked to come to Wisconsin to take charge of the co-educational difficulties which were sure to come up after passage of the bill admitting women. He came and refused to accept the position if he had to sign diplomas awarding the 'bachelor' degree to women. We pleaded and begged, but to no purpose, until a little lawyer chap advised that we consult Webster. Now we all thought we knew the English language, but took a chance. What do you think we found? 'Bachelor, an unmarried woman.' He accepted the job."—Milwaukee Journal.

Irving, Five

By IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

She was new to St. Mary's or she never would have asked to be placed in Irving, Five. Every nurse dodged duty there. Just the instant you opened the door, the uprising wailing clamor smote your ears, and if you had a ghost of an excuse, you fled then and there.

But Winona never "batted an eyelash," as Naylor said later to the laboratory doctor. Naylor was on duty daytimes, and when he entered the ward, just for the fraction of a minute, the wailing turned into a shrill cry of welcome.

"It's fierce on her—forty-seven beds, not counting the two 'coolers' for pneumonias, but it's a great old place if you can stand it." He looked at the new nurse critically. She was dark-haired, blue-eyed, vital-appearing and smiling.

"I'm not a bit afraid," she told him, "and I love kiddies, especially sick ones."

So she had stayed on, and Anthony grew to look upon her as something necessary to the ward, like the flood of sunshine that poured down through the high south windows, or the flowers sent in every day from Mrs. Addington Gray's greenhouses out on Long Island.

Timmie found out more about her than any one, possibly because he was her favorite out of all the children who came and went in the little white beds of the long ward. Timmie was not a temporary case. He was a chronic, and only the interest of Dr. Naylor kept him there on observation instead of sending him away to one of the "incurables," as the patients called them.

She Hung Up and Looked Out of the Window.

Timmie would limp up and down the ward with his spine brace bending him far back, and would make every child, who could laugh, wave back to him when he swung a little flag around his head and sang:

There's the sound of marching feet,
Coming down our village street,
And I know my Billie Boy is almost home.

When the pain grew worse after a treatment, Winona would take him up in her arms and pet him, and it was at these specially private times that they exchanged confidences. Timmie said he was awfully lonesome because everybody else had folks come to see him and he never had a soul. It seemed there wasn't anyone to come.

"I ain't a home case. I'm from the Orphans'," he said confidentially. Then Winona told him not to worry. She was an orphan, too, and one reason why she had taken up nursing was because she didn't have any one who belonged to her, either, up at the big city on the lakes.

"We'll have to belong to each other I guess," she said tenderly, and Timmie's arms tightened their grip around her neck as he agreed.

He told Dr. Naylor about it later when he was having an examination, and the doctor had glanced sharply down to the desk where she stood taking orders from the head nurse. And just then there came the daily load of flowers into the ward, and Timmie's brows drew together.

Why didn't Mrs. Gray ever come herself to see them? he asked. Flowers couldn't talk, could they? And Dr. Naylor explained with a little smile around his keen gray eyes that Mrs. Addington Gray was very busy, that she lived a long way from New York, and that he thought it very kind of her to send the flowers in every day.

"Did you tell her to send them?" asked Timmie with sudden suspicion, and the doctor acknowledged that he had, just when Winona came up with Timmie's two little glasses of medicine and caught the last fragment of their conversation.

Another bit of news Timmie told helped her to understand why the young house doctor was so beloved. Irving, Five, was named for his mother, Mary Elizabeth Irving, and had been endowed by her. They were awfully rich folks, Timmie added comfortably, but he never held that against the doctor.

"He's just real folks, like us," he added, and Winona smiled a bit wistfully. Two months at St. Mary's had brought a strange new joy into her life, and she hardly dared think that Tony Naylor was responsible for it. Then came a day when all unexpectedly Irving, Five, had visitors, Mrs. Naylor and Mrs. Gray. Timmie coaxed Ella Kusick, a tall, thin girl of fourteen, to lift him up so he could peek down at the street and see the big dark blue limousine they had come in. And Mrs. Gray turned out to be very young and pretty, the ward agreed as she walked slowly up and down with Dr. Naylor.

"Will he marry her?" asked Timmie bluntly, when Mrs. Naylor bent over his chair. Twice he had been taken out in the blue car with the doctor for a week end at his mother's home, and he felt he was a family friend. But Mrs. Naylor only smiled and patted his curly head in a way he hated, and he was left in a state of indecision.

It was the next week that the specialist operated on him. They did not tell Timmie it was going to happen, but he guessed it from Winona's tenderness, and when he came out from under the anesthetic he called for her first. It was at night and she was off duty, but Doctor Naylor sat beside him still, watching every change and pulse beat. And there in the darkened ward he heard Timmie's broken voice pleading for Winona.

"She's all alone like me, and no father or mother or anyone, and I don't want you to marry that Mrs. Gray. I want you to marry my nurse."

"How do you know she'd have me, Timmie?" Tony asked in a low tone. And Timmie, fearless under the gray cloud that was folding around him, told him he knew because Miss Burton said she liked him best. "We both said we liked you better than anybody else in the world."

After the tired lids had closed and Timmie was sleeping safely, Tony rose and looked at his watch. It was 8:15. He went downstairs to the telephone booth, where no one could hear him, and called up the nurses' registry club, where he knew Winona lived. She was in. He smiled at the surprise in her tone when she answered him. Yes, he said, Timmie was all right; doing fine. Didn't she think it would be a good idea to take him out to Edgewood for about a month? And would she care to go with him?

"But I couldn't leave the ward," said Winona. "I'd love to, but—"

Tony's voice was low and just a bit confused. Unusual conditions and special need, he urged.

"Listen, I'm coming over for you in the car. Take anybody you want with us. I want to run out home. It isn't late. Just take about half an hour to make it. I want to tell you something."

It would have to wait until morning, she told him. And even Timmie would have approved of the charge his doctor made in the face of defeat. Then he would be over at once, and tell her there. But it was too late for her to see anybody. She was tired and going to bed right away.

"Then I'll tell you here," said Tony insistently. "I've promised Timmie we'll be married as soon as he can walk."

"But he's an incurable. How could you!" she said softly.

"He'll be walking in a month," said Tony, happily. "That means August, Winona. I hate to talk over a house phone, dear, but this won't keep—"

"You'd better come over here and finish," said Winona, laughing anxiously. She hung up and looked out of the window. Up the street were the lights of St. Mary's, and in the fifth floor corner those of Irving, Five. She closed her eyes thankfully. Up there both Timmie and she had found "real folks" of their own.

Jewelry is an Investment

We wish to impress this idea upon you. The purchase of jewelry—the articles found in a jewelry store—is equivalent to putting money in the bank. Silver remains silver, gold remains gold, precious gems ALWAYS retain their intrinsic money value, whether they are in our cases or in your home or on your person.

It is important to bring out this point. So many gifts—so many purchases, fail to provide this substantial claim to common sense. You buy, not only for the pleasure it will give you and yours, but as ONE WAY OF SAVING.

Think of the returns you receive from the purchase of a watch. Silverware—it lasts through generations. Jewelry—it adds the final touch to feminine charm, and may be handed down from one generation to another. Rings—rings grow to be a part of the very personality of the wearer.

Which reminds us, you should see the very beautiful assortment of W.W.W. Gem Set Rings, now on display. Here again is the element of wise buying—thrifty giving.

"Just like money in the bank" is an old phrase, but there is a lot of truth in it.

His Majesty Khama, the native king of Bechuanaland, an earnest supporter of prohibition, is reported to be greatly exercised over the recommendation of a government commission, in support of the sale of beer and light wine to the native population. If this recommendation is carried out, King Khama threatens to retaliate by withdrawing the native labor from the gold mines. Such a step would create a very acute labor situation in that country. It looks at present as if breweries and wineries would be obliged to seek some other outlet for their products. It might be well for them to try a more enlightened part of the world where such primitive ideas do not prevail.

Toast to Those Who Stayed.

A hero had returned from Chateau Thierry. The day had been spent in excited greetings and snatches of delayed news. At last the family was alone; just before dinner the father proposed a toast to the returned hero—the shining eyes of his sisters and his mother, as well as his father's proud smile rested upon the khaki-clad figure decorated with medals—with a gesture he stopped them.

"Oh, not to me, father, not to me," he cried, "but to the men that fell by my side."

The File Fish.

The file fish captured off Lundy Island is a rare visitor to the English coast, the only previous specimens recorded having been caught so long ago as 1827. It belongs to a numerous and important family of the tropical seas, which are so called because the first dorsal fin is studded up the front with small projections that suggest some resemblance to a file. Another peculiarity of these comic-looking fish is the sawlike spine the principle of which was adopted for the earliest safety-rifle locks.

Monument to Punch.

Men have been honored and women have been honored for their services in war by having statues erected as testimony to their worth. There have been monuments even to animals. But now it is proposed to put up a monument to a publication, and a humorous one at that. This probably is unprecedented.

The publication to receive this distinction is Punch, without which it is not quite clear how the Britishers could get [illegible]

Went Right Ahead.

"Did you [illegible] run into a telegraph pole?" inquired [illegible] of a taxi driver.

"Yes, ma'am, [illegible] bumped into telegraph poles several times."

"Brings you to a sudden stop, doesn't it?"

"No, ma'am; the machine stops all right, but I and my fare always keep on going ahead, mostly in the air. Must go somewhere, you know, ma'am!"

"Have you ever noticed the length of the nose as a factor in human achievement?" the Washington Times asks, and then proceeds to cite historic notables whose fame and long noses, the paper infers, may be more than coincidents. Dante, Napoleon, Wagner, Thomas Jefferson and George Washington are brought forward in evidence that the long nose is a frequent sign of great ability. Similar characteristics are featured by present-day American leaders. President Wilson's face is adorned by a long, thin nose. William G. McAdoo's nose is still longer and thinner, while Secretary Glass of the treasury and Commissioner Roper, commissioner of internal revenue, are similarly distinguished.

"Why a strong brain and a long nose should be connected is hard to understand, but they are connected," the Times continues. "You find that among men who think through life the nose increases in size. With men who act and accomplish things the jaw increases in firmness and comes forward."

The government has taken over the country's supply of soluble coffee for the benefit of the soldiers. The coffee is of good quality and is being put up in stick form, like chewing gum, with waterproof wrappers. If for military reasons it is undesirable to light fires in or near the trenches, these sticks can be dissolved in cold water, making a beverage that is quite acceptable in the emergency. New companies have been organized to help supply the growing demand for this product.

Smoking in Boston Streets.

There was a time when a fellow dared not smoke in the streets of Boston. The law was an ordinance which prohibited smoking, under penalty, in any street or near any building or wharf in the city of Boston," says a writer in the Boston Herald. It was never enforced literally and was never intended to be. Its purpose was to enable the police to prevent smoking near any building or wharf where cotton, hay, straw or other extra combustible materials were stored.

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

Little Kathleen Ruth Meek was honored on her sixth birthday, which occurred on Aug. 8, 1919, by a remembrance from her mother and sister in the form of a lawn party at her home, 283 Midland Ave.

The little ones who came to enjoy the occasion were Masters James and Paul O'Brien, Walden Meeks and little Misses Ruth O'Brien, Margaret Colburn, Frances Clover, Christine and Frances Lane, Grace Myers, Catherine Sebring and Violet Hilliard.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Meeks and daughter. Games were indulged in and a kodak picture taken of the group of little ones, of which, if the writer be any judge, was a happy, genial group.

Miss Florence Dunn, 23 S. Terrace Ave., and Mrs. Roy Shrum entertained with a party Saturday evening at the home of Miss Dunn.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dunn, Mrs. Tillie Decker, Misses Helen Carl, Helen Baker, Mable Dunn, Carrie Fippen, Delia Sloan, Messrs. Harold Linke, Clyde Tom, Wilbur Prior, Ellis Jones, Roy Shrum, Dave Lemely, Ralph Dunn, Geo. Decker and Master Howard Dunn. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all.

Miss Jessie Slane, 1999 W. Broad St., recently paid a week-end visit to her uncle, Dallas Slane, Lewis Center, O.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Vance and son, Donald, of 83 Highland ave., are visiting Mr. Vance's parents on the farm near White Oak, O.

Miss Marie Schoonover who is located at Findlay, O., is spending the week at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Schoonover, 163 N. Warren Ave.

Mrs. Albert Young of 309 Eldon Ave., entertained with a six o'clock dinner Wednesday, in honor of Mrs. Mott and daughter's guests.

Mr. Chas. J. Prall of Pomeroy, Ohio, and Mrs. H. L. Kohler and son, Montrith, of Washington, Pa., are guests of Mrs. Mott and daughter of 71 Eldon Ave. Sergeant Kohler has just returned from 15 months overseas service.

Mrs. Mott entertained for her sister, brother and nephew, Sabbath evening with a Cousin's party, which included 25 relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Carson and daughter of 401 S. Warren avenue, have just returned from a motor trip through West Virginia and Kentucky.

Rev. J. M. Wenrich, 120 Midland Ave., on Wednesday, Aug. 6th, solemnized the marriage of Harold W. Harnly and Helen E. Sampson.

Lincoln A. Russel and Huldah Kuehner were united in marriage Tuesday, Aug. 12th, by Rev. J. M. Wenrich, at his residence on Midland Ave.

Mrs. Geo. A. Henry and daughter Louise have been spending several days with Mrs. Henry's friend, Mrs. Wm. Pippett, of Oakland Ave.

Also the James Price Post, G. A. R., and James Price Relief Corps, for their beautiful floral offerings; and the Old Soldiers for their interest shown, especially the comforting words by Mr. Pritner, chaplain of the ex-Soldiers' and Sailors' Association of Franklin county.

MRS. C. D. FERRIS,
LEONA FERRIS.
MRS. B. H. KOONS,
MR. L. O. FERRIS.

Women of the Hilltop Church of Christ met at Glenwood Shelter House on Wednesday afternoon and formed an organization for the purpose of raising funds for the new church building. Officers were elected for the remainder of the year.

Fifteen home made cakes were promised in less than ten minutes for the lawn fete to be given Aug. 15.

The name "Cheerful Workers" was chosen for the new organization.

UNION TENT MEETINGS

Will be Held at Eureka and Broad, Beginning Sunday, August 17th, and Continuing for About Three Weeks. West Side Churches Co-Operating. Under Leadership of Rev. Harry James and Party

Hear Evangelist James at great union tent meeting Sunday evening, August 17, corner of Eureka and Broad at 7:30 p. m. Subject: 'Columbus' Greatest Need." Also hear Prof. L. A. Wegner, chorister and soloist. You will not forget the preaching and sure to enjoy the music. Mammoth choice choir. Everybody invited.

Prof. L. A. Wegner, Song Leader

Mr. L. A. Wegner is acknowledged by all who have heard him in his short career of little more than nine years in the evangelistic work, as one of the greatest directors that any evangelist has ever presented anywhere. Wegner has a deep rich baritone voice, full round qualities and that verbal resonance that goes to make a voice worthy of loudest praise. The volume of his tones is of the sort that fills and at the same time thrills his hearers. He swells his tones to the likeness of deep rolling thunder, seeming to get down under the songs and lift them up, finishing with a nicety of tension and a science of anticipation that always brings applause from the people who are fortunate enough to hear him.

Mr. Wegner was born in Green Bay, Wis., February 11, 1883. While still an infant, his parents moved to South Dakota, where he spent the first four years of his life in a one-room, sod covered claim shanty. It was a typical western home just as the one in which Abe Lincoln lived. During the winter the seed corn and wheat for the next year's crop stood over in one corner and hung from the low rafters. It was the surroundings here that gave the ambitious youth the chance to expand, free of all the evil environments.

His mother took an interest in his unusual voice as only mothers can do at that tender age and as a result of her efforts he began vocalizing while yet quite young.

One night while Rev. Robert E. Johnson was holding the campaign there Wegner came to himself and took the stand for Christ and the cause of humanity. He not only was instrumental in bringing himself to the front but also his proprietor. Wegner was playing in the city band at the time and many of the band boys followed him into the Kingdom. His evangelistic career had begun. He felt the call to the cross. He went, and ever since then he has been going, in fact "going some," as he himself puts it. He joined the Johnson party for several meetings and after that went to the Moody Bible Institute for about a year and a half. From the first entrance there he began to do active work in the cause of Jesus, holding street meetings, and leading a choir in one of the Congregational churches there, and singing solos in one of the Moody Sunday schools, three nights in a week taking charge of the boys at Gault Court, known there as "Little Hell." His influence over the boys drew the attention of many. He helped pay his expenses by working in the kitchen at the Institute. He soon rejoined Johnson and went with him into the Northwest where they held many great meetings. After traveling with several of the greatest evangelists, among whom were Dr. L. W. Munhall, Wm. Conley, George W. Taylor, Dr. I. E. Honeywell and George T. Stephens, he came into national prominence as a leader of revival choirs. He has led singing in union tabernacle meetings from New York to California and from Florida to Washington.

Mr. Edwin Young, Pianist

Ensign Edwin Young is a young man of exceptional musical talent as well as being a young man of deep Christian character. He is a born musician and at the age of nine he began his lessons in piano and violin in Wayne, Neb., the place where he was raised. At twelve years of age he and his brother made a concert tour through Minnesota and Nebraska and while still a student in the high school he made a tour with the Wayne State Normal Quartet doing concert work of all kinds. He was graduated from the Wayne, Neb., high school in May, 1914.

Immediately after his graduation Mr. Young joined the Knowles evangelistic party, holding meetings in Illinois, Pennsylvania and Iowa. Later he went to Chicago where he studied under Foss L. Fellers and at the same time attended Moody Bible Institute. He also took instruction in piano under Harrison M. Wild, director of the Apollo Club. From Chicago he went to Fremont, Neb., where he opened a studio but a short time later was induced to enter the evangelistic field again, this time as pianist for the Towle and Cotterell evangelistic party. In January, 1916, he joined the Stephens party.

Mr. Young has a great part in the success of chorus work. His instrument leads and bends to the motions of Prof. Wegner and in the solos he has that sympathetic touch that so greatly helps the singers.

Next Sunday evening, August 17th at 7:30 o'clock the three weeks' union tent meetings will begin. The Rev. Harry A. James' evangelistic party will have charge. The party will consist of Rev. Harry A. James, evangelist; Prof. L. A. Wegner, singer and leader of the choir; Prof. Young, pianist and Mrs. Young, leader in personal work, etc.

The party comes to us highly recommended because of their work in the past and we believe that with the proper co-operation of the Christian people on the Hilltop, united by the spirit of God, a great work can be accomplished here in the next three weeks. There will be evening services each night during the week, excepting Monday night. Other meetings such as morning union prayer services, etc., will be announced later. The large choir will be made up from the different Hilltop churches. Mr. J. W. Sheckels of Glenwood M. E. church is the chairman of the music committee and expects to have the choir in working order by Sunday night. Rev. J. M. Johnston, pastor of Hilltop Church of Christ is chairman of the ushers committee and chief usher. Mr. Edw. Wollam, Burgess Avenue U. B. church is chairman of the tent committee; Rev. P. E. Smoke, St. Paul's Evangelical church, chairman of publicity committee; Rev. E. B. White, Burgess Avenue U. B. church, chairman of devotional committee; Mr. L. O. Linville, Hoge Memorial Presbyterian chairman of entertaining committee; Chas. Shover, chairman of financial committee; Dr. W. F. Wycoff, Glenwood church, chairman of secretarial and soul winners committee.

District prayer meetings are now being conducted all over the Hilltop in many homes and will be continued during the daytime while the meetings are in progress. These meetings will be announced as to time and place each week in the Record insofar as it is available to do so.

Don't fail to attend the opening meeting Sunday night, at 7:30. Services every night except Monday.

Obituary

On September 22, 1844, was born to Nicholas Egbert Ferris and his wife, Mary Louisa Samuels, the eldest of their six children, Cyrus D. Ferris.

The parents were pioneer settlers and made their home near Sheppard, Ohio, and later near Hilliards, where they reared their family consisting of four boys and two girls.

While Mr. Ferris was a boy in his teens the Civil War broke out. The flames of patriotism burned deep in his breast and he longed to rally to the colors. The bitterest dissapointment of his young life, was when he was rejected from service on account of his youth. So he went back again to his father's farm and a year later suffered the loss of his mother with whom he had been closely associated during her lingering illness. In early life he was converted to Christ and joined the Methodist Episcopal church. He enlisted in the army in 1864, and served to the end of the war in the 176 Regiment, Company E, of the O. V. I.

During his service he had many thrilling adventures which he was fond of recalling. He belonged to the James Price Post, G. A. R. of Westerville, in which he kept up his membership till his death. It was one of the proudest memories that he was the last person to carry the Old Flag of his regiment before it was deposited in the State Capitol.

On February 11, 1875, he married Margaret Jerman. To them were born six children, Elizabeth, Egbert, Lincoln, Alta, John and Leona. They made their home for a few years in Tennessee and later in Delaware county, Ohio. Here at the homestead in Genoa township, the wife and mother died February 14, 1890, leaving a vacant place in the hearts of the family hard to fill—the eldest child being at that time but fourteen and the youngest only two years old. For four years Mr. Ferris was both father and mother to his little ones. Then on September 15, 1894, he married Rachel Hedden, who was faithful to her foster family until her death in 1905. April 30, 1907, he married Mary Estella Knopf.

After a residence of twenty-five years at his old home place he moved nearer Westerville and then to Columbus in September, 1915, because of failing health. Since that time he has been an invalid and a great sufferer. He bore his cross bravely with the aid of his tender wife.

August 3, 1919, he passed away. Throughout life Mr. Ferris was a man of earnest and strong conviction to which he was ever true. He leaves a bereaved widow, three grand-children and one sister, who will often long to see his loved face again, but who praise their kind heavenly Father that He has given their dear one rest and peace.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon, August 6th, at the Glenwood M. E. Church. Burial at Green Lawn.

Glenwood Camp, Royal Neighbors of America, will give a lawn fete on Thursday, August 14th, at Oracie Derbe's home, 145 Yale Ave. Everybody invited.

Don't forget the lawn fete given by the Cheerful Workers of the Hilltop Church of Christ, Cor. Richardson and Broad, Friday evening, August 15th.

How You Can Banish "Blue Monday" from Your Home

No longer do you have to put up with the antiquated, health-breaking, back-breaking wash tub.

No longer is it necessary to make concessions to your servants on account of long hours of the old-time washday grind.

No longer do you have to depend on the uncertainties of the laundry to relieve your home of the "Blue Monday" we all know so well.

Come in and let us explain this wonderful labor saving device, how easy it is to operate.

A week's washing done by 9:00 a. m. Monday sounds good, and it is possible with a CRYSTAL.

A Boy's Love

By BERTHA R. M'DONALD

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Barbara Salter was not a coward, but when she read in the morning paper that a desperate gang of thieves had been infesting the neighboring towns and might be headed for Jonesboro, she felt an uncomfortable sinking of heart. Doctor Salter had gone to the medical convention in a distant city with no premonition that his motherless daughter would be left alone by scheming servants, who saw a chance at hand for an extra holiday; yet, when he found he would be detained a day or two longer than he had expected, he wired his office assistant, Richard Gilbert, to that effect and added a request that he look after Barbara during his absence.

"Will I!" exclaimed the assistant; "Will I?"

Richard, too, had read of the nearness of the thieves. He wished he might defy convention and stay at the Salter home until the doctor returned, but he suspected he might have to defy other things than convention were he to suggest such a proceeding.

He had long loved Barbara with a man's first strong love, but somehow Barbara always contrived to accept his overtures as coming from a boy—not a man—and treated them accordingly. Therefore he welcomed any commission which included his superior officer's daughter, hoping thus to be received more seriously, and lost no time in hurrying to the Salter home.

"Hello, there, Dicky boy!" greeted Barbara cheerily. "I suppose you feel very important now that dad's away?"

Every Sense Instantly Alert.

"Not particularly, but your father did wire me a very important commission this morning. He wants me to look after you, and as I read about the burglar scare in the paper I thought I'd come—"

"What could you—a mere boy—do?" interrupted Barbara, laughing heartily. "They'll make mincemeat of the two of us."

"Barbara, dear, I'm not a boy any more. I'm a man and I've got a heart full of love for—for a woman—for you. Won't you be serious and listen to me for just a moment?"

"No, I won't; and I won't have any boy making love to me so early in the morning, either. Don't talk nonsense, Dicky."

But Dicky was hurt more deeply than usual because he had counted on the wire from Doctor Salter as the opening wedge for which he had long been waiting.

"If there's nothing I can do for you I'll go along. I've a good many calls to make now that your father is away."

"W-e-l-l—you might come over and spend the evening, if you promise not to talk nonsense and to go home the moment I tell you to."

"No, thank you. If you want to boss anybody around, call on some of your men friends!"

Good old Dicky. She watched him walking proudly down the street and her laughing eyes softened. Dicky was beginning to look awfully grown-up in his smart tweed suit—she was forced to admit it. That afternoon she met Dollie Phenton.

"Oh, hello, Bab! Dick Gilbert called on grandmother this morning. We thought she'd fuss because it wasn't your father; but Dick quite won the old lady's heart. She declared he'd make a wonderful husband for some nice girl, and do you know, Bab, I've a great mind to set a cap for him myself!"

Barbara's heart gave an unfamiliar twinge as Dollie rattled on, but she answered in as bantering a tone as she could muster.

"Dollie—how silly—he's only a boy!"

"Boy nothing! He's older than either you or I."

After leaving Dollie the thought came that she would miss Dick terribly if any other girl should happen to appropriate him. There were many things he had done for her ever since he had been in her father's office, which he couldn't or wouldn't do since he belong to another. She wished she hadn't laughed at him—wished he were going to spend the evening with her. Next a sense of loneliness crept over her and a tear or two found its way down her pretty cheek.

She read very late that night, and when she finally crept into bed slept but fitfully. It was in the wee small hours that a vague foreboding roused her from a light slumber and she sat up in bed, every sense instantly alert. From a porch below came a confused sound, which to Barbara meant but one thing—the burglars had struck Jonesboro!

She sat staring straight before her in the dark, drew her filmy lingerie closer about her and desperately awaited her impending doom. But nothing happened. The night wind sighed softly through the maples, a cricket chirped intermittently and, after what seemed a lifetime of suspense, a cock signaled the approach of morning.

With the numbing fear still upon her, she got up and dressed, crept cautiously downstairs, opened the front door very gingerly—just a crack at first, and then exclaimed with a breath of relief:

"Dicky!"

"Good morning, fair lady. You see—er——I just couldn't help thinking of you out here all alone in this big place, and I thought neither you or Mother Grundy could possibly object if I camped here on the porch, so I—"

"Richard Gilbert! Do you mean to tell me you've been sitting on this porch all night without a wink of sleep?"

"Y-e-s—er—except when I was pussy-footing around trying to keep awake. Wouldn't be much good, you know, if I went to sleep. I knocked over one of the porch chairs a couple of hours ago. Thought sure I'd have all the neighbors out."

"Dicky, dear, I don't know of a single man but you who would have given up a whole night's perfectly good rest for me—and to sit on a hard, cold porch at that! You'll never be a boy to me again, Dick!"

"Do you think you could learn to care enough to—to marry me—now that I'm a man?"

"Of course I can, you foolish b—er—man, but—"

The remainder of her answer was lost in the depths of Richard Gilbert's manly collar.

Times Were Out of Joint in 1646.

Those who think the time is out of joint and no one is able to set it right may find consolation in a letter written by James Howell to E. P. at Paris on February 20, 1646. It appears that the world did not go very well even then.

"For News, the World is here turn'd upside down, and it hath been long a going so; you know a good while since, we have had Leather Caps and Bever Shooes, but now the Arms are come to be Leggs, for Bishops Laun-Sleeves are worn for Boot-Hose tops; the Vest is come to the Knee, for the Points that were used to be about the middle are now dangling there; Boots and Shooes are so long snouted that one can hardly Kneel in God's House, where all Genuflection and Postures of Devotion and Decency are quite out of use. The Devil may walk freely up and down the Streets of London now, for there is not a cross to fright him any where, and it seems he was never so busie in any Country upon Earth, for there have been more Witches Arraign'd and Executed here lately than ever in this Island since the Creation."—Boston Herald.

Colored Snow.

When Charles Darwin, in 1835, crossed the Chilean Andes his attention was called to patches of red snow by the footprints of the mules, "stained as if their hoofs had been slightly bloody." He recognized it from his acquaintance with the reports of the Arctic navigators. Rubbed on paper the snow left a faint rose tinge, mingled with brick red. Consequently examining scrapings from the paper, he found they consisted of vegetation, "groups of little spheres each the thousandth part of an inch in diameter." It is said that red snow is found in our Sierras, but there appears to be no authenticated report of its having been borne on the wings of the wind to descend in showers, at any rate not east of the Mississippi, though there is a tradition of a fall of "red snow" in Rhode Island some two generations ago, which may have been a dustfall.

A Desperate Play

By S. B. PEACH

(Copyright, 1910, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Tired with her long journey and a bit disgusted with her errand, Jean Gifford descended from the dingy coach and found herself standing on the platform of a small country station, dimly lighted, gloomy with the night.

"What a crazy way to be married!" she exclaimed to herself. "I hope there is some one here to meet me."

Save for the old station agent, who was busy with his own cares, no one was about; so she sat down in the smoky waiting room and thought over the situation.

Mr. Curtis did not want the marriage to take place; neither did Ryder Sabin; so she had been forced to take the lonely ride to the northern lake cottage where the marriage was to take place—a secret affair.

The door opened and a man's face appeared. He looked at her, then smiled.

"We are waiting for you, miss," he said.

Jumping up, thankful for the sight of a friendly face, she hurried out. Her bag was taken, and in a moment she was in a machine, headed away into the darkness.

There was no one in the car save herself and the driver, and she settled back with a sigh of pleasure. The road was a rough one, but the driver was skillful, and they went along swiftly through the woody-smelling darkness. Suddenly they swung down a grade and before her was the long, level brightness of the northern lake.

A voice called from the shore.

The machine turned and stopped.

"Here we are, miss," the driver said.

A swift suspicion raced through her

He Stopped Short and Stared at Her.

mind. "But I am going to the Welch cottage and I understood we went directly there by car," she said wonderingly.

"We can make it quicker by motorboat, miss," was the answer.

Her suspicion allayed, she went to the shore and found a motorboat waiting, and in it another man. Her fear returned, but a friendly greeting disarmed her.

She was carefully handed to a seat and the boat started off with motor humming softly.

As they glided along, the dark shores sliding by in even lines, she heard the faint, far sound of an automobile.

"I supposed this was an almost deserted country," she said to the man across from her, "but that sounds like a car."

He started and listened, and at the same time, so it seemed to her, the boat went ahead at a faster pace.

"Well, there are a few cars around here—not many, though," the man answered. "We use more boats than cars in this country. I can't imagine who that is."

Before them lay the silvery expanse of the lake; on the right the dark masses of the woodland. Something made her shiver—she did not know what, but decided bravely that it must be the dampness rising from the cold lake.

The moon rose over the hills; its light brought clearly into view the men and she saw, for the first time, who were her companions. Both were dressed in the rough garb of the northern woodsman or guide. She began to be puzzled and worried.

"Where are you taking me?" she asked.

The man opposite her stirred. "Don't be worried, miss. We will take care of you," he said quietly.

She thought she read a hidden meaning in his voice, even though he seemed to try to conceal it.

"Very well," she answered quickly; "but I want to know just where we are going. Are you headed for the Welch cottage?"

"Pretty near there," he answered. "But——"

"I want to go there—not pretty near there!" she said sharply, rising.

He caught her arm with a firm hand and drew her back.

"You keep quiet. I promise you no harm will come to you," he said bluntly.

She sank back, her heart beginning to pound. Something was wrong, beyond a question.

She saw the boat change its direction, starting across the lake, in entire the wrong direction if her judgment was right. Not knowing what to do, she sat quiet, growing colder each moment, with something that was not the coolness of the mist about her.

She did not know how many half hours passed before she saw the gleam of a light. Swiftly the boat drew inshore.

"Here we are, miss," her guardian said.

Swiftly and tremblingly she rose.

Aided by the men, she mounted the dock, and stared about her. The whole surroundings were strange to her—even the lights gleaming from a hunting cabin back in the woods did not seem friendly.

She turned sharply. "I demand to be taken back! I do not know this place! The Welch cottage, so I was told, is near the lake."

The guide caught her in a strong grasp. "Young lady, you come with me!" His gentleness was gone.

At first she thought of struggling; then she went obediently up the path.

One of them opened the door and pushed her in. She found herself in a living room, decorated with heads of captured game. A woman was busy at a table.

"Well, we landed her!" her guardian said, smiling. "I guess that wedding will not be pulled off!"

Jean turned. "Oh, I see—I am not at the Welch cottage!" she cried.

The man smiled. "Not a bit. You might as well know how we worked it. Mr. Sabin learned of the marriage at the Welch cottage, and we just stepped in. Your father is on the way to get you, and you and your sweetheart will have to pick another date."

She looked at him. "So Mr. Sabin does not want me to marry unless I marry him, and father is coming to make me marry some one else. Is that it?"

"You bet!"

She laughed. "Probably Mr. Sabin owns this cottage or hired it. Is he here?"

"He will be—guess he's coming now."

The door opened and a tall, thin-faced man entered.

"How do you do, Mr. Sabin?" she said, smiling.

He turned to the watching, grinning man and stuttered: "This isn't the girl. What in——"

"But—but—she——" one of the men said with astonishment.

Jean leaned back and laughed heartily. "I am not. I was to be a friend at the wedding—a bridesmaid. I came ahead to get a few things ready. Your information was incorrect; and, by the way, I guess the wedding is over by this time."

She looked at her watch and held it out for inspection.

Jewelry is an Investment
We wish to impress this idea upon you. The purchase of jewelry—the articles found in a jewelry store—is equivalent to putting money in the bank. Silver remains silver, gold remains gold, precious gems ALWAYS retain their intrinsic money value, whether they are in our cases or in your home or on your person.
It is important to bring out, this point. So many gifts—so many purchases, fail to provide this substantial claim to common sense. You buy, not only for the pleasure it will give you and yours, but as ONE WAY OF SAVING.
Think of the returns you receive from the purchase of a watch. Silverware—it lasts through generations. Jewelry—it adds the final touch to feminine charm, and may be handed down from one generation to another. Rings—rings grow to be a part of the very personality of the wearer.
Which reminds us, you should see the very beautiful assortment of W.W.W. Gem Set Rings, now on display. Here again is the element of wise buying—thrifty giving.
"Just like money in the bank" is an old phrase, but there is a lot of truth in it.

Commons Keeps Old Habits.

The election of the speaker of the British house of commons was carried out with the ancient formalities. The members named as mover and seconder of his nomination were indicated by the clerk in the old custom, the clerk pointing his finger at the person appointed to move, indicating his privilege, and after his speech doing a like office for the seconder.

The house cheered each action, and after voting the speaker to his office the mover and seconder seized the speaker and gently lifted him into his seat. The ceremony was over.

The American hens laid 40,000,000,000 eggs last year, and the outlook for the present year is said to be even better.

The Opal.

Have you ever heard of the opal? So asks Frank G. Carpenter in "How the World Is Clothed." It is a beautiful stone, composed of a material called quarts, save that it contains more or less water and gives forth some of the most brilliant colors known. It sometimes looks white and again may be a pale yellow, red, green or blue. Fire opals shine like fire, when the light strikes them, and show almost all the colors of the rainbow. The opal is found in Mexico and Honduras, and also in South America. It occurs in Hungary and Saxony, and there are large opal mines in eastern Australia. Some have also been discovered in certain of our western states. About the finest specimens, however, are from Austria-Hungary, the most beautiful opal ever found coming from there. This stone is of about the size of a man's hand, and it weighs 17 ounces. It is now among the jewels of the Austrian crown. Opals are usually imbedded in other stones. They have a different form from the diamond, sapphire, or ruby, and are usually round or oval in shape.

Palestine Oil Production.

The present method of manufacturing olive and sesame oil in Palestine consists of a circular stone trough in which a stone disk rotates on edge like a wheel and is operated by a horse, mule or camel. One man is constantly stirring, removing and replacing the olives as they are crushed and another carrying the whole olives to the mill and returning with the crushed ones. A crude wooden box press is used to extract the oil. The primitive devices, while they still exist, are rapidly falling into disuse, as they are too laborious and do not produce as much oil as modern presses. Modern French presses are operated where no power exists, by a long beam pulled by rope and tackle, while some are operated by kerosene engines. With these presses one squeezing is enough, instead of two or three under the native methods. Under the native process the oil obtained from the last pressings is used in soap making.

The Raven's Warning.

Tradition has it that all the calamities which dog the footsteps of the ill-fated Austrian royal family are foreshadowed by the appearance of a raven.

When the Archduke Maximilian departed for Mexico and execution—a raven followed him on the path; and when the Archduchess Christina left for her unhappy life in Spain a raven hovered over the carriage.

A whole flight of ravens is said to have hovered over the crowning of the late Francis Joseph, and one of the ill-omened birds dashed a peach from the hand of the Empress Elizabeth the day before she was murdered at Geneva.

Frenchmen Record Kissers.

The Italians and Spaniards kiss only by favor and are decidedly lax in their osculatory observances. Swedes, Norwegians, Danes and Germans are especially generous in the distribution of their favors. The French kiss upon the slightest provocation; sometimes men have been known to kiss each other several times during a brief conversation.

Words; 43 of Them.

While the average vocabulary consists of about 3,500 words, that is, words that one recognizes when seen, very few men use more than 2,000 in oral or written speech. This may seem strange until it is understood that nine words do about one-fourth our work, and that an additional 34 words bring the percentage up to one-half.

The nine most used words in the English language are: And, be, have, it, of, the, to, will, you. The additional 34 are listed by philologists as follows: About, all, as, at, but, can, come, day, dear, for, get, go, here, her, if, in, me, much, not, on, one, say, she, so, that, there, they, this, though, time, we, with, write, your. How these words make for simplicity in speech and writing may be noted that there is only one of the entire 43 that consists of more than one syllable.

Care of Knives.

Carving knives and forks need to be very well washed, then to have a cloth over the point of a skewer run all around the joint. If they have horn handles, the same skewer treatment should be applied to the horn ridges or else the ridges should be washed out with ammonia and water and a very stiff brush, brushing with the grain of the horn. It goes without saying that carving knives must be razor-edged. To insure that, first buy good steel, no matter what the mounting; then, once a year, have the blade properly ground. In between keep it sharp and true, by help of a long whetstone, such as is used on mowing scythes. It can be bought in any big hardware store, should not cost over a quarter, and will last a lifetime.

Chinese First Distillers.

Discovery of the process of distillation is attributed to the Chinese, who imparted the knowledge to the Arabs. Spaniards got the secret—for it was kept a secret for a time—from the Moors and in turn gave it to other European countries. Use of distilled liquors in the old world became general and drunkenness common.

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

A very pleasant surprise was given Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Ellison at their home 428 Powell Ave., last Sunday. Those present: Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Truman and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ellison, Mr. Floyd Ellison, wife and two daughters, Bertha Jean and Vivian, Mrs. Ellison and son, Edwin, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Price, Mr. Don Tlacier and Miss Ruth Ellison. Well filled baskets and a bountiful dinner were enjoyed by all.

On Wednesday afternoon, July 13th, Class No. 13 of St. Paul's United Evangelical Sunday School held a picnic in Franklin Park. Eleven members with their teacher and nine visitors were present to enjoy the games and a fine supper. If you are a girl of twelve or thirteen and not attending Sunday School, we will be glad to welcome you. Come and have a good time with us. Mrs. Anderson, Teacher; Julia Armstrong, Secretary.

Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Fadely of 158 North Harris avenue, have returned from an enjoyable motor trip of fifteen days through Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota, passing through the principal cities en route as far as Minneapolis. They spent the nights in tents which they carried with them, traveling by the way of the Lincoln Highway and Yellowstone Trail. The trip proved interesting as well as pleasurable, because of the varied scenery and living conditions of the peoples of the states through which they passed.

Youth's Supreme Sincerity.

Children and fools tell the truth, and few of us can comfortably endure the candid eyes of childhood, fixed upon us in amazed surprise at our social insincerities. It was a child and not a courtier who saw that the king, strutting amid his court in the garments made by the wicked magician, had nothing on. Our children, beholding us in our undraped moral ugliness, speak out as is the witless way of their world. Luckily children forgive us our sins of misunderstanding, forgive us even our inept attempts to understand them by meddlesome supervision and vain catechising. We know in our truest moments that we can hardly show the best that is in us to anyone else, because it is too precious for display, just as we have a sure test for our best deeds in that we give ourselves no credit for them, seek no reward of public fame or Mr. Carnegie's hero fund. Yet we expect our children to wear their hearts upon their sleeves. Lear's dumb Cordelia remains for all time the type of youth's sacred and silent sincerity.—Exchange.

Oath of Allegiance.

The oath of allegiance which naturalized citizens of the United States take before receiving their second papers admitting them to full citizenship, is as follows: "I hereby declare on oath that I absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate or sovereignty and particularly to —(the ruler and the country from which he came), of whom I have heretofore been a subject; that I will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign or domestic; and that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same."

Covered Bridges Going.

The limiting factor in a great many roads extensively used has been antique bridges, built in the days when light buggy traffic was the rule. Gradually the state departments are overcoming this handicap to travel by replacing these structures by solid concrete spans. In 1917 $47,290,796 was expended in this way in the United States.

Good Imitator.

A little Hebrew from Harlem was listening with open mouth to a Scotchman from Glasgow, who was livening things up a bit in the Salvation Army hut just back of the lines.

One of his "buddies" asked him the reason for the expression of awe on his countenance. "What's the matter, Abey, didn't you get the joke?" he asked.

"I don't know nothin' about no joke," was the answer, "but Gawd, how that guy can imitate Harry Lauder."—Everybody's Magazine.

Tri Mu News

The attendance in the Tri Mu Class for Sunday, August 17, was 30. Quite a marked decrease from the banner Sunday of 1919, when there were 62 present. The contest closed August 10, with the Blue side winning by eight men. Score for the eight weeks contest—Blue 117; Red 109. The entertainment will be on the order of a corn roast on the river, north of the riffles, a place commonly known as "Nigger Hole." Every man should have a girl and notify the class of your intention of going by Monday, August 25. This will be held on Friday, August 29. Leaving Highland avenue and West Broad street at 6:30 p. m. Be there and on time. Each Red man will be requested to have $1.00 in the hands of the class by next Sunday. No later than that. "The Reds lost and the Reds banquet."

In case of rain the feed will be postponed until the following Friday, which will be September 5th.

Don't forget that every Tri Mu wants to put on his army uniform for that big G. A. R. parade in September. Watch for further announcements.

The Hour of Life

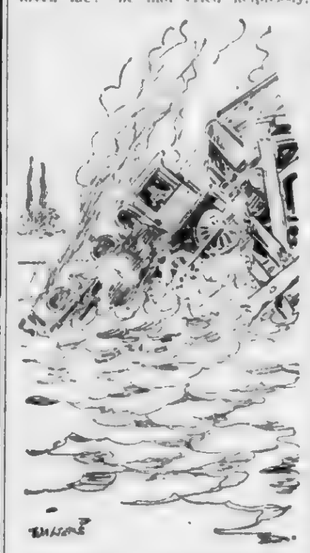
By S. B. HACKLEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The all-day steady downpour of rain had ceased, but the night was inky black. O'Neal sat in the train, his big hands clasped around one propped-up knee, his sensitive face beat over them, his warm Irish heart aching with a new sense of the grief from which he was fleeing.



It had been four weeks since Marjorie Ballew had told him of her engagement to Sherrill Leeds—a four weeks whose every moment had gone to arrange his affairs that he might make this prospecting trip to the state of Washington to find a home where he would not have daily to see her as Leeds' wife.

Sherrill was the grandson of one of the aristocratic founders of the town, and had a fortune besides, and he, John O'Neal, brought up and educated though he was, by the childless old minister of the place, was but the orphaned son of Dennis O'Neal, bricklayer.

But O'Neal had not thought this would make any difference to Marjorie—Marjorie whom he had loved since he first carried her lunchbasket to school, and fought Sherry Leeds for calling her "redhead!"

He had waited to ask her to marry him, until he could tell her that his orders for house-building material warranted him building a house for himself, only to find she intended to marry Sherrill Leeds.

"But you made me believe you loved me!" he had cried helplessly.

Went Down in the Boiling Waters.

"Oh, Margie darling, I love you better—I need you more than he."

"Mother wishes it, John," had been her defensive answer. "And I—I don't want you to quit being my friend. I want you to come to see me often."

"I cannot bear to see you again, Margie." In the bitterness of his disappointment the words had burst from him miserably. "I never want to see you again unless it is in the hour of death."

"In the hour of death!" she had echoed unhappily, holding out a trembling hand which he could not trust himself to take. "Good-by then, John, until the hour of death."

"Gibson! All out for Gibson!"

The coach door banged open and the train drew to a standstill in a prosperous little town half-way across the West.

A gay group, bringing the fragrance of carnations with it, came in at the rear of the coach and took seats behind O'Neal. There were three young girls in the party, an elderly woman and two young men. From the girls' chatter O'Neal learned they were going an hour's ride down the road to be present the next day at a morning wedding at which the three young women were to be bridesmaids.

"Oh Madge, you'll be almost too busy, after this wedding, with milliners and dressmakers, to help anybody else get married, won't you?" The voice of the girl rose clear and loud.

"Right you are, Laurestine!" One of the young men laughed as he spoke and his voice, strangely familiar to O'Neal, somehow grated on him. "October is only two months off, October, when Madge plays the part of leading lady at my wedding!"

"Two months is a long time. Many things may happen in two months."

O'Neal clutched the arms of his chair. It was her voice, and the man who laughed was Sherrill Leeds! Suppose they should recognize him! Once she had told him, banteringly, that she would know the back of his black head, the shoulders of his over-big body, "across the Mississippi river."

"I'm a coward—a weak-kneed coward," O'Neal rebuked himself, "but I can't face her—I can't face them together."

The next moment there was a terrific wrench of the car, a creaking and groaning of steel and timbers and the engine went down in the boiling waters of the river through the broken bridge. By a strange sort of miracle, though the baggage car hung down into the water, the passenger coaches still stood on the track in imminent danger at any moment of being drawn into the flood.

The engineer and his fireman had gone down to death, but none of the passengers were more than bruised and shaken, and there was a frantic exodus from the coaches to the safety of the solid ground beside the track.

"Is everybody out and safe?" Marjorie Ballew, standing white and shaken on the sodden ground, asked a man beside her.

"All out but one man," he answered. "He's not hurt, but one of his legs is fastened some way. They've sent up the road for tools, but it's doubtful whether they get back in time to get him out—you see, the coach is likely to go over any minute."

"Who is he?" she asked pityingly.

"Says his name's John O'Neal. Wants Rev. Philip Cavender of Woodside, N. Y., informed, if—"

But the girl was gone.

O'Neal, waiting calmly, felt a light touch on his shoulder, and looked up into a pair of terrified blue eyes.

"Margie!" He caught her arm in a tense grip. "Go back!"

"John," she breathed and his heart beat strangely, joyously, while there came calls of distress from the elderly kinswoman and the girls outside the car, "if it is the hour of death to you, I am going to pass it with you!"

"Come out, Madge," pleaded Sherrill's voice through the open window. "Don't risk your life!"

There was no answer from the girl. Leeds' voice hardened with fear.

"Marjorie, I'm coming in to carry you out!"

"Go, Marjorie!" besought O'Neal hoarsely. Go, darling!"

Marjorie slipped the solitaire off her third finger and passed it through the window to Leeds.

"You need not come—you have no authority over me now, Sherrill," she said tensely; "I didn't know where my heart was when I promised to marry you. I know now!"

With a little sob she slipped to her knees, and, throwing one arm about O'Neal's neck, laid her head on his breast, whispering contradictorily that she had loved him all the time.

Five minutes later O'Neal stood on the firm ground and watched his prison house go down in the muddy waters. Marjorie clung to him and hid her eyes.

"Look up, sweetheart," he whispered, his face glowing, "it is the hour of life to us!"

Woman's Work

By LINCOLN ROTHBLUM

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure News Paper Syndicate.)

It was one of those lazy days in the late fall when all the world seemed tagged by the long, hot summer, the natural distemper of climatic conditions augmented by concern for the nation at war. Suburbanites shuffled home from the depot laden with bundles and cares of the moment, through roads deep with the fallen leaves of endless hues.

Toward one of the prettiest cottages on the street, its pagoda-shaped roof lending an oriental air to its otherwise severe lines, walked a tall, well-knit man of about thirty, the jaunty tones of the melody he whistled carried on by the soft evening air. It was a catchy two-step, and the girl, leaning from the open window, caught up the tune as she emerged onto the wide piazza. She was perhaps about twenty years of age, her clear blue eyes and bright expression bespeaking quick-thinking intelligence.

"So glad you have come early, Leo," she spoke rapidly and sincerely, "there is much of the war news I want to talk about."

"Yes, Sophia," he answered in an abstracted manner.

But the paper with its attention-attracting headlines in bold letters of giant size lay on his lap unread; it was not difficult to detect the presence of another subject on his mind.

"Can I help?" Sophia asked bluntly. "I've enlisted."

"Enlisted? I am proud of you, Leo."

"Are you, dear? but I am concerned what Jackson & Co. will do when I go, as I have started an extensive advertising campaign for them and must leave it unfinished."

"Don't let it worry you. There will be some woman to take your place."

"Take my place? I can't understand, Sophia Brentwood, how an otherwise sensible girl like you can entertain such ridiculous ideas of her sex.

"Ridiculous? Humph! Leo Langley, it is you who is entertaining ridiculous notions. I see nothing ridiculous in the statement that women practically without exception can fill any job a man does."

Langley irritated, shifted uneasily from foot to foot, and as he tossed the paper on the table replied: "Perhaps, then, for a random example, you believe you could fill my position with Jackson & Co.?" And he mentally reviewed the campaigns he had successfully conducted for that concern as its manager of advertising.

The girl, looking very unbusinesslike in the feminine daintiness of a silver-toned gown of white satin, heavy with brocades of a softer tint, glanced up with a puzzling smile. "Why not?" she asked in a quiet, even tone.

"Ridiculous," he reiterated; "but do not let us mar my last visit to such argument. I leave tomorrow for Jefferson barracks."

And in the soft words of parting that ensued, no thought was given to their differences of opinion as to woman's status or ability in the field held sacred by man.

"You will write much and often, dear?"

"'Deed I will."

And faithfully the promise was kept. At first the letters were full of wonder and amazement as the recruit passed through the machinelike intricacy of the receiving depot; then came word of the assignment and later details and incidents novel to civilian ears of training, soldiering and camp routine. Since his departure the seasons had revolved their full circle, and fall of the following year had barely merged into winter when the world was electrified by the sweet news of victory. Sophia Brentwood, standing on the porch of her cottage, anxiously awaited the approach of the postman.

"Yes, it's from him," he familiarly teased as he handed her the envelope with its triangular corner card of red.

As she read a quizzical smile played about her lips, exposing two pearly rows of well-formed teeth, deepening into tiny gurgles of delight.

"And now that the whole business is over," the letter ran on, "I'll be coming home without having had my chance. But with this training I feel able to do lots of bigger things for Jackson & Co. I've been following their advertising and I am surprised how well they executed the campaign I mapped out."

And, perhaps, had Jackson & Co known what an exacting critic they had in their former advertising manager, they might have felt much pride in their publicity department. For the soldier's few spare hours were devoted to a minute perusal of all media available at the camp recreation buildings in his search for the announcements of Jackson & Co. His verdict, confided to the girl, was grudgingly given, but honest. He had to admit the work was well done.

Demobilization was under rapid way and in every community could be found familiar faces belonging to bodies strangely unfamiliar, with their broad chests and husky shoulders and strong biceps. As Sophia leaned from her window, her ear caught the strain of a whistled melody, its lilting notes in two-step time seeming to shout, "I'm back. I'm back again."

As a flash she was on the porch into the arms of a khaki-clad figure, and despite eyes dimmed with tears, they looked delightfully happy. Charming nothings told by every soldier who has returned after a year's absence to the one girl of his acquaintance, marked their reunion; and the cuckoo sleepily warbled two o'clock before Langley commenced to say good-night.

"And tomorrow I'll be back on the old job," were his last words as he tenderly kissed her. "Jackson & Co. will be mighty glad this war is over."

But as Mr. Jackson, senior member and guiding hand of Jackson & Co., good-naturedly placed his arm about the shoulders of his soldier-employee, Langley was not able to determine whether or not his return was as welcome as he had anticipated.

"Well, well, how did you like it?" queried Mr. Jackson, offering a cigar from a humidor of hammered copper. "Never got to go across, did you?"

"No," came the answer in a chagrined tone as he gazed at the twin chevrons of silver on his left sleeve. "Guess they thought Jackson & Co. needed me too much."

Langley inwardly complimented himself on the clever manner in which he had brought up the purpose of his visit. He hoped Mr. Jackson would follow the lead. He did.

"Why, to tell you the truth, Langley," the elder man hesitated, "I hate to think of losing the very able successor we secured for your position."

"Successor!" murmured Langley in astonishment.

"But I have some important sales promotion work I should like to have you undertake. First come and meet our new advertising manager."

Langley arose and as he smoothed out the wrinkles in his uniform meekly followed into that section of the office over which he had reigned.

"Miss Brentwood, may I present Mr. Langley?"

"Sophia!" exclaimed Langley.

"How do you do, Leo?" the usurper responded with contagious laughter at the young man's discomfiture.

Mr. Jackson cleared his throat raspingly. "You know each other?"

"I'll say we do," shouted Langley with reckless disregard for the office slang restrictions. "Mr. Jackson," he gulped, "this tiny bundle of brains has shown me up. The job is hers."

Mr. Jackson winked in a wise way at the girl. "It seems to me, Langley, you'd make a mighty fine advertising manager if you had a bundle like that with you all the time." And in continued wisdom he exited.

Langley held out his hands in an eloquent gesture. "Dearest Sophia, will you be my bundle for all times?"

And Sophia said she would.

Jewelry is an Investment

We wish to impress this idea upon you. The purchase of jewelry—the articles found in a jewelry store—is equivalent to putting money in the bank. Silver remains silver, gold remains gold, precious gems ALWAYS retain their intrinsic money value, whether they are in our cases or in your home or on your person.

It is important to bring out this point. So many gifts—so many purchases, fail to provide this substantial claim to common sense. You buy, not only for the pleasure it will give you and yours, but as ONE WAY OF SAVING.

Think of the returns you receive from the purchase of a watch. Silverware—it lasts through generations. Jewelry—it adds the final touch to feminine charm, and may be handed down from one generation to another. Rings—rings grow to be a part of the very personality of the wearer.

Which reminds us, you should see the very beautiful assortment of W.W.W. Gem Set Rings, now on display. Here again is the element of wise buying—thrifty giving.

"Just like money in the bank" is an old phrase, but there is a lot of truth in it.

The MONEY YOU PAY FOR COAL is the most important part of the transaction and when you pay good money you naturally expect to get good coal. That is a consideration for the price charged. Some dealers, however, don't care what kind of coal they deliver so long as they get the money. Not so with us. We give good value and full weight.

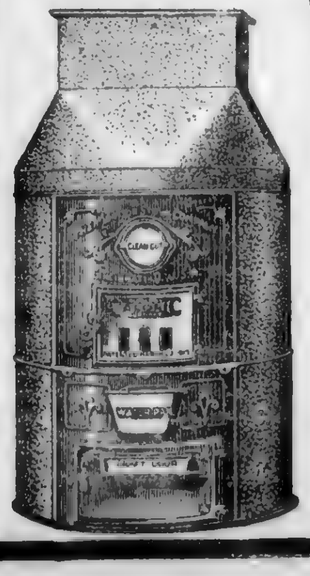
THE PIPELESS CALORIC FURNACE

The Original Patented Pipeless Furnace



The Caloric Pipeless Furnace is guaranteed to heat your entire home with only one register. More than 50,000 Calorics are now in use, and during the coldest days of last winter kept homes warmer with less fuel than the old style heating systems they displaced.

We do not ask you to experiment with this furnace. We KNOW what it will do. If we recommend it for your home after studying your floor plans, it is installed with an absolute guarantee of perfect heat in all rooms. If it does not do exactly as we claim for it after a fair trial, we will take it out at no expense to you.

Do not confuse the Caloric with the ordinary furnace. It is not an old-style furnace with the pipes left off, but an entirely new method of heating. It heats the air—sends the pure, fresh warmth through the house, draws the colder air back into the furnace to be purified and heated and again started on its trip through every room.

35% Fuel Saving

Because of its one register, the Caloric accomplishes better heating results with less fuel. Some owners claim fifty to seventy-five per cent saving. We know that it will save thirty-five per cent over any other method.

Demonstration At This Store

Starting (set date)

We shall have a special demonstration of the Caloric at this store. Come in and talk to us. We will carefully go over your heating requirements, and if we recommend the Caloric, we will give you an absolute guarantee of satisfactory performance in your own home. This written guarantee is backed by us and the manufacturers.

Come in and talk to us. Learn what this furnace will do toward keeping your home warm and saving you money on your fuel bill.

PARADISE FOR BOOK HUNTERS

Writer Tells of Treasures of Various Sorts That May Be Picked Up in Japan.

Book hunting is an agreeable pursuit and nowhere can it be conducted with more zest and profit than in Japan. I think there are more old book shops and stalls in Tokyo than in all the cities of the United States combined. In many of them one finds only school text books and cheap magazines, but there are shops in almost every quarter that contain real treasures. The greatest number are in Hongo and the neighborhood of the university. The second-hand book sellers have a society and a club house where they have weekly auctions for members, and once or twice a year they hold a public sale on the second floor of a large house belonging to the Tokyo Fine Arts club in Hongo, near Ryogokubushi, on the opposite side of the bridge from the wrestling pavilion. The entire second floor is thrown into one large room by removing the interior screens and the books are spread out on the mats, each dealer's lot apart, each set of volumes plainly labeled with its title and price. There is a bewildering variety; Chinese books, often old and rare editions that cannot be found in China; European and American books of many sorts, maps, prints, rolled books and, not least interesting, albums of brocades and dyers' pattern books.—From "On Japanese Cullen Patterns," by Stewart Culin, in "Asia" Magazine.

Not of Poetic Taste.

A poet with a precious scrapbook of his own writings under his arm wandered by a theater, when suddenly the idea struck him that he would like to see a play that night, so, entering the place, he asked for the press agent. That gentleman was out, but the manager was in. He was ushered in, and the manager inquired his business. "I would like two seats for tonight," faltered the poet. "An' who might you be?" asked the manager. The poet mentioned his name. "Um, yes," smiled the other. "I've heard of you! But why should I give you seats?" The bard murmured something about the courtesy of the press, and added that probably identification might be necessary, so, as he had a scrapbook full of his published poems he would be glad if—. But the manager cut him short, and calling out to his secretary to make out a couple of passes for that night, said: "My dear sir, I'd rather give you the whole house than read your poems!"

Went Home for Rest.

"Once uponer time," said Uncle Eben, "dar was a man dat said he wanted to be his own boss. He saved up enough so's he didn' owe nobody nuffin' an' set out on an enjoyment trip. An' de car conductor said: 'Step lively!' an' de hotel clerk said 'Go somewhere'else!' an' de telephone said 'Drop in yoh ten cents!' an 'de taxicab driver hollered 'Git outn' de way!' till finally he jes' packed up an' went back home where he wouldn't be ordered around so much."

What She Missed.

Landlady—I'm sorry you think the chicken soup isn't good. I told the cook how to make it. Perhaps she didn't catch the idea.

Boarder—No; I think it was the chicken she didn't catch!—Stray Stories.

Explaining Dreams.

A London physician, seeking not only the welfare of children, but support for the modern theory which seeks to account for dreams has made written records of dreams of over 5,000 school children between the ages of eight and sixteen years and finds that they support the belief that a dream is merely the expression of some desire, but changed in expression by one's subconsciousness in order that it may not waken the sleeper. Frequently subconsciousness itself is caught napping and the sleeper awakens in a fright and says that he has suffered from a nightmare.

Wrong-Headed Philosophy.

Judge Luther McC. Lowell said in an address on divorce in Atlanta:

"The woman who winds up divorced has usually a wrong-headed philosophy. Take her philosophy of men, for instance.

"A woman of this nature divides men into two classes, the sheep and the goats. The sheep are the husbands, the workers and the providers, while the goats are those fascinating devils who take her out to jazz teas and buy her platinum bags and gold anklet watches."

A Bonaparte Commendation.

When the British troops were approaching a certain town in the desert of Palestine a deputation of the natives came out to meet them. The headman of the deputation asked for an interview with the British commander. In the course of the interview he urged the claims of the natives to kind treatment, and mentioned that he had brought with him a document showing how well and honorably they had behaved on the last occasion on which their town was visited by European troops. He duly produced the document, which was found to be all that he represented it. It was signed "Napoleon Bonaparte."

The Charm of Lace.

Ruskin says: "The real good of a piece of lace there, you will find, is that it should show, first, that the designer of it had a pretty fancy; next that the maker of it had fine fingers; lastly, that the wearer of it has worthiness or dignity enough to obtain what is difficult to obtain, and common sense enough not to wear it on all occasions."

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

A party was given recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Layne, 247 Midland Ave., celebrating the return from overseas of Mr. Layne's brother, Private Wm. Layne of Ironton, O. After a program of music and dancing refreshments were served. A large cake decorated with the insignia of Private Layne's company was cut, after an appropriate speech by Mrs. D. Helfenstien, a Civil War widow, and the mother of Mrs. Robert Layne. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Boals and daughter Pauline of Hopedale, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Williams, Mrs. Ruth Crider, Mrs. Florence Williams, Mrs. D. Helfenstien, Mr. Howard Bentley, Mr. Samuel Layne, Mr. Charles Layne, Galena, and Ben Williams, Frances, George, Christine and Norma Layne and the host and hostess.

A party of four young men from the Hilltop motored to Dayton Sunday. It was composed of Arthur T. Dickerson, Roy B. Hawthorne, J. Dana Marsh and M. Herschel Ferguson. The party topped at Xenia to get Kenneth Dickerson, who has been employed there during the summer vacation. Several places of interest in Dayton were visited, such as Lakeside Park and the Soldiers and Sailors Home. The magnificent homes of Governor Cox and Orville Wright were among the other objects of interest. After dining at the Hotel Gibbons the party returned to Columbus by way of Springfield. Although it was necessary to drive all the way home thru a blinding rain, the bunch voted the day a most enjoyable one and decided to make a similar trip sometime in the near future.

Mr. Fred Dauber, whose health was impaired by a severe attack of "flu," and who has been recuperating in the open air and among the hills of Jackson, O., and surrounding vicinity, is now at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Dauber, 134 N. Harris Ave., much improved in health and expects to resume work soon. He has been absent three months.

The Sept. meeting of the Missionary Society of the Hilltop Church of Christ will be held at the home of Mrs. Downs, 259 S. Ogden Ave. on Friday, Sept. 5th. Division No. 1 will have charge of the meeting. All quarterly dues should be paid promptly. Anyone desiring to contribute to the Victory Gift may do so at this time.

Obituary

Andrew Jackson Brown, the eldest of ten children of Zephaniah and Zariah Friend Brown, was born July 7, 1849, and departed this life at 1:30 p. m. Friday, August 22, 1919, aged 70 years, 1 month and 15 days. Father, mother, two brothers and one sister preceded him to the spirit world.

He was united in marriage with Miss Lou J. Donner on Easter Sunday, April 25, 1886, with whom he lived happily for 33 years and 4 months. To their union was born five children, two sons and three daughters; Carlos J., of Circleville, O., Clinton A., Hazel D., Bertha F. Brown and Mrs. Ethel M. Ellison, at home. He was the proud grandfather of three. 1 granddaughter, Mildred Trione Brown, and two grandsons, Isaac Jackson Brown and Edwin Homer Ellison.

Besides wife, children and grandchildren, he leaves to mourn his departure two brothers, Isaac and Simpson Brown, of Logan, Ohio, and four sisters, Mrs. Hettie Francis of Whisler, Mrs. Lina Fox of Williamsport, Mrs. Emma Steele and Miss Minnie Brown, of Columbus, Ohio, nephews and nieces, with other relatives and a host of friends.

For more than 40 years Mr. Brown lived in the vicinity of the Morris United Brethern Church, near Circleville, Ohio, and attended services at this church, being an active member during more than 20 years of this time. In the spring of 1913 he removed with his family to Columbus, after which his church membership was transferred to the St. Paul's Evangelical Church, of which he was a regular attendant and faithful member up to the time of his illness and death. His choicest pleasure was ever found in listening to the Gospel message, or in the reading of his beloved Bible. He often spoke of early home training where it was required that some portion of the Bible be committed to memory each Sunday afternoon, and during the later years of his life Sunday afternoon was not complete unless with the Book at hand. Shortly before his illness, while quietly reading his Bible one Sunday afternoon, he looked up and said, "This is the text when my earthly journey is complete," then with breaking voice read II Timothy 4:7-8, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

During his seven months illness his beloved companion ever showered him with a wealth of loving care and devotion. While all mourn his demise they mourn not as those who have no hope, but look forward to a happy meeting where sickness and sorrow are unknown.

Funeral services were held at the home, 167 South Harris Avenue, Columbus, on Monday afternoon, August 25, with burial at Green Lawn Cemetery. Rev. P. E. Smoke conducted the service, assisted by Rev. W. A. Smith, of Fostoria, and Rev. Willis, of Junction City. Mrs. Bartha Ellison Price and Miss Ruth Ellison, accompanied by Mr. Kenneth Smoke, sang "Going Down the Valley," "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," and "That Beautiful Land." A wealth of beautiful flowers gave tribute to the esteem of neighbors and friends.

Rev. W. A. Smith, of Fostoria, Rev. Willis, of Junction City, Mr. and Mrs. Simpson Brown, of Logan, Mr. and Mrs. eGorge Fox, of Williamsport, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Spangler, of Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Doner and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Patrick, of Richwood, Mr and Mrs. C. E. Blain and Miss Miriam Blain, of Marysville, Mr. Frank Jennings, of Kinderhook, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Brown, daughter Trione and son Jackson, Mrs. Isaac Ludwig, Miss Mildred Ludwig, Mrs. Wm. Murray, Mr. Henry Calvert, Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Valentine, Mr. and Mrs. Turney Pontious, and Mrs. E. Thatcher and Miss Iona Barr, of Circleville, attended the funeral.

We think it a good thing to say a word of warning to people, especially children, about crossing Broad street, especially just behind a moving car, as the present deplorable condition of the trolley wires is such that a passing car seems liable to cause breaks at any time and might fall on some, while unawares, with tragic results.

Mr. W. L. Peck, proprietor of the Hilltop Shoe Repair Shop, cor. Broad and Oakley, who was confined in Grant Hospital for some time after an operation has sufficiently recovered as to be enabled to be taken home. He expects to be at his place of business again in about a week.

Donald D. Triplet, 4 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Triplet, 171 S. Terrace Ave., died of malnutrition Monday at the Columbus Baby Camp, Sullivant Ave. Funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at the residence. Burial in Green Lawn.

Mr. Clarence O. Miller, O. S. U. student, 3rd year, Col. Rep. for W. H Wildman's extracts, spices, etc. Hold your order or communicate with Mr. Miller, 225 S. Eureka Ave. Hilltop 3250. Hours 6-9 p. m.

Kenneth Amrine and Roy Calendine, 12 year old boys of South Warren Ave., left Tuesday morning on their bicycles, to visit the former's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Amrine, Marysville, O.

Mrs. Lizzie Rees of Louisville, Ky., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Wm. A. Bush, 447 S. Burgess avenue, and will remain to attend the G. A. R. Encampment.

Mr. and Mrs. Toliver Thrailkill of 47 N. Wheatland Ave., spent last Tuesday at the home of the former's cousin, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Fuller, near Westerville, O.

Miss Ida Hill of Chase Ave., and the Misses Minnie and Winifred Bishop of S. Hague avenue, returned Sunday night after a most delightful visit in Detroit. They were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Kauffman, former Hilltop residents.

The many friends of Miss Hazel Ferguson will be pleased to know that she has recovered sufficiently from her illness to be removed from Mt. Carmel hospital to her home.

CHURCH DOINGS

Interesting Topics to be Given by Hilltop Pastors at Next Sunday's Services Other Church News

The Union Tent Meetings have now been in progress about ten days, with a nightly increase in attendance and interest. Evangelist Harry A. James is preaching very powerful sermons, that hit from the shoulder. His enthusiasm is marvelous, and causes his hearers to be held with the closest attention during the entire time of his preaching. His musical director, Prof. L. A. Wegner, is a man of great ability as a song leader and he won a large circle of admiring friends already during his work among us. Mr. Young at the piano is a wonder. He seldom uses the music to play from, and to use the words of many who have heard him—"makes the piano talk."

Mrs. Young is a worker with the devotional and soul winner committees and with a deep christian sympathy and kindness is a splendid worker in their meetings.

There will be a big men's meeting next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 at the tent. It will be under the auspices of the West Side Brotherhood, and each church on the West Side is expected to be well represented, all marching together to the tent, escorted by the Hilltop Band.

The enlargement of the tent, making it 120 feet long, now enables it to accommodate about 1500 people. The choir loft will hold over 100 singers. Services are being held every night at 7:30 except Monday.

The altar call was given for the first time Wednesday night and was responded to by about 40 seekers.

Cottage prayer meetings will be held on September 3d at the home of Mrs. Arbaugh, S. Harris Ave., and on Sept. 4th with Mrs. Coontz, 40 S. Hague.

Miss Gladys Young, of 309 Eldon avenue, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Richards, of Mt. Gilead, Ohio.

Mrs. Ernest Lloyd and little daughter of Marengo, O., is visiting her parents, Mr .and Mrs. John Houdashelt.

Mrs. Jennie Reed of Bridgeport, Conn., has been visiting Mrs. W. M Tucker, 1999 W. Broad St.

Curious Cities of the World.

Some curious cities of the world are told about in Leslie's Weekly. Among them is the remarkable town of Curva, Bolivia, built entirely on a curved mountain top. One of the most peculiarly located towns in the world is this one, most aptly named Curva. It is situated high in the Bolivian Andes and is entirely confined to the top of a hill.

In Patagonia, at the southern extremity of South America, lumber of any kind is extremely scarce. So the town of Puerto Madyrn, 838 miles from Buenos Aires, is constructed entirely of tin and zinc. These are brought down from the capital and are much cheaper building materials than lumber. The houses, roofs and walls are built of metal; the fences also are constructed of it, with a wooden frame.

The curious town of Newcastle, Jamaica, is located on the side of a hill in such a way that none of the houses are on the same level. Even in the graveyard, every tombstone is higher or lower than its neighbors.

Mrs. Margaret Bice of New York City, N. Y., spent a couple of days with Mrs. W. L. Postle, 41 S. Ogden Ave.

Tri Mu News

The attendance in the class Sunday was very low for the big feed that is coming off next Friday. Remember that the red side is giving this feed to the blue side and if you don't attend you're missing something fine. Anyone that likes watermelon come around and get your fill. This entertainment will be held at Skidmore Woods on Hague Ave., instead of "Nigger Hole," as formerly announced. Anyone who doesn't attend is going to miss a good time and also good grub. Meet at the corner of Highland and Broad at 6:30. Leaving promptly at seven o'clock.

Tri Mus are urged to put their army uniforms on for the G. A. R. parade Sept. 10. Show the Civil War Veterans that you appreciate the honor of being the only organization ever to march in a G. A. R. parade.

Mrs. Baker, of 81 South Oakley Ave., wishes to announce that the reserving of costumes for Halloween starts September 15th. Business hours from one to eight p. m.

Mrs. C. Orr of 35 S. Ogden Ave., is visiting in Zanesville, O.

Miss Edna Thomas returned home Sunday after visiting with her cousin, Mr. and Mrs. William Worley, near Alton, O., for three weeks.

The Course of True Love

By LILLIAN H. CROWLEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Madeline Drisko was really the happiest girl on earth, and why shouldn't she be? She had everything to be desired, including youth, beauty and love.

The latter had come into her life only recently, and the gods had nothing more to bestow on her.

Madeline's home was in New York, but she, with her brother and widowed mother, had gone to Honolulu on a business and pleasure trip combined.

She loved the beautiful islands of Hawaii; the marvelous climate; the sea, the sky, and the mountains. There was the most gorgeous scenery. She loved the picturesque natives and the plaintive music they played on the ukuleles. It was all very wonderful to Madeline and she was charmed with the place.

"I should love to stay here forever!" she exclaimed rapturously to her mother.

The indulgent mother smiled but shook her head. "We can't remain here always. This is only a memorable holiday."

Then Madeline met Hereford Langdon.

Hereford's parents were from New England, but he had been born in Honolulu. His father had large business interests there, and Hereford was his right-hand man.

Certainly fate had been very good to Madeline in bringing this great love into her life in this most romantic and beautiful country. Her mother [illegible], though loath to have her [illegible] so far from New York, were delighted with the young man. He had every quality to make their loved one happy.

Followed Delightful Days.

Followed delightful days of love and sunshine—then came the quarrel.

All over a trivial matter, too, as are most lovers' quarrels. Hereford, astonished and heartbroken, tried to explain. Madeline, proud and angry, refused to listen. Hereford stumbled home in the moonlight with his brief dream of love destroyed.

Madeline cursed her pride and would not send for him. Then Mr. Langdon sent his son on a trip to another island to be gone a week.

Hereford held to the hope that Madeline would be in a lenient mood by the time of his return.

She, on the contrary, became angrier than ever and would not listen to the promptings of her naturally generous heart.

Several days after Hereford's departure, which was unknown to Madeline, Tom Drisko received a telegram calling him to San Francisco on urgent business. They left at once.

There was no time for Madeline to see Hereford, even if she had been so inclined, and she thought she wasn't. On the way over to San Francisco she had more time to think over the foolish quarrel. She wished she had let Hereford explain. The remembrance of his grieved look and his sad eyes hurt her conscience and kept her from sleeping.

"I will find a cable from him when we land," she said to herself. This thought was a source of great consolation, and she began to be almost happy.

When they arrived at San Francisco and found no word from Hereford, she was angry with herself for having capitulated even if Hereford didn't know it.

Hereford had lived on the hope that his sweetheart would relent and let him explain when he returned, which he knew he could do if she would only listen.

The blow fell. The Driskos had left days before, and there was no word for him. Many times afterward, when he would have been glad to again beg Madeline to listen to him he did not know how to reach her, as the family had planned to travel in Mexico.

Then came the entrance of the United States into the war.

Hereford strongly patriotic always, had an additional reason for enlisting—his country first, and thereby a means of forgetting his lost love in work, the more dangerous the better.

Madeline had been on a feverish round of sightseeing and pleasure in a vain endeavor to forget. To lose remembrance was impossible, and she begged her mother to return home. On the way east Mrs. Drisko asked her children to stop off at Gettysburg with her.

"My dears," said she the day after they arrived at the hotel, this is the anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, when your grandfather was wounded. We will take a taxi and go to the very spot on Little Round Top."

Mrs. Drisko was overcome with emotion when she viewed the beautiful landscape, the peaceful wheatfield, the peach orchard and many other spots made famous at this great battle. With tears streaming down her cheeks she looked at her strong young son standing so straight beside her and knew that he, too, was willing to shed his blood for his country.

Not that she would have him do otherwise—for her heart beat high with pride on that day when he told her he had enlisted—but for the sorrows of the world and for the tears and blood that must be shed before the most infamous tyrant since the world began could be laid low in the dust, never to rise again.

Came the sound of marching feet! They looked around. Mrs. Disko, with tear-dimmed eyes, saw only a company of soldiers out on a hike but Madeline saw more than that. Her heart stood still as she thought she caught a sight of a familiar figure in charge of the men. She had never seen Hereford in uniform—still the lieutenant looked very much like him. The soldiers were soon out of sight and Madeline, with a sigh, decided her heart had deceived her, and that her lover was still in Hawaii and she was long ago forgotten.

"Those men belong to the tank corps," said Tom Drisko. "I have been reading about them. They are mostly picked men. There are several Olympic champions among them, and one of the greatest electricians in the world has given up an income of $100,000 a year to become a private in the tank corps. They are a splendid lot of men. I am going to try for it myself."

The Driskos were to leave early the next day. That same evening Madeline started from the hotel to get a magazine from the little new stand across the circle. It was Saturday night, and the streets were crowded with men in uniforms. In the tearooms and drug stores one could see them in scores eating ice cream and drinking soda water.

"Isn't it a funny thing that a soldier is always hungry?" remarked a young officer to another as they were strolling around the circle.

Madeline looked up. The voice she had heard it before and it startled her out of her usual poise.

Recognition was instantaneous and all the pride and resentment were forgotten as though they had never existed.

"Madeline!" exclaimed Hereford, his handsome face aglow with sudden joy.

"Hereford!" gasped Madeline, meekly. "Oh, Hereford!"

"Come with me dear," he said, and forgetting his companion he took Madeline's arm and guided her down a quiet street. They sat on the steps of a church and poured out their young hearts in love and contrition, for they had nothing to quarrel about in the first place.

In a Canteen

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"It seems too bad to drag you out, Helen," began Doris Vail, in a coaxing tone, "but you know Tuesday is my day at the canteen."

"Don't mind me, dear," Helen quickly replied. "I'd love to stay here in your room and just read and be lazy. You've entertained me to death since I came here."

The girls were in the gray and rose sitting room that Doris' mother let her have for her own. They had had their breakfast and were putting on their sport clothes for an hour of golf.

Suddenly Doris looked up from the task of lacing her boots. "I have it—I'll borrow Genevieve's uniform and you shall be a real canteen worker! It'll be lots of fun. Will you?"

Helen demurred. She was not much interested in canteening—at least on this side of the Atlantic ocean. All that life held of real interest to her at present dwelt in a uniform somewhere in France, and because the said some one had no dependents and had no allotments for the country to pay, he seemed to be one of the chosen few to have to remain on foreign soil. Helen had not even heard from him for weeks. The sight of soldiers who had been fortunate enough to get home would only make her home lonely.

"I really would rather stay at home, Doris," she said. "Really."

"Oh, that's too pokey. And besides, we need you. I just happened to remember that Genevieve won't be home till tomorrow, and you shall take her place and wear her uniform. It's a duck of a blue overall with black patent belt and white frilly collar and cap."

Helen saw that she would have to go. Perhaps it wouldn't be so bad. "All right. I'll do my best, but do leave me in the pantry to make salads and don't make me wait on table."

"We'll see about that, dear. You're far too pretty to be poked off in a pantry."

Doris waved off the flattery and donned her hat. "Hurry, Helen, if we're going to have any golfing before we go to this canteen place. Where is it, anyway?"

"Oh, across the island a bit—over Hempstead, near Field 2."

"Wherever that may be," mumbled Doris, who came from the middle West and to whom Long Island meant very little.

At three o'clock the two girls were neatly attired in their blue canteen aprons, and with two other workers, were being driven in a comfortable closed car to the bungalow on Meadow street, where soldiers and officers found rest and recreation as well as good home-cooked meals.

When they stepped into the big lounge Helen could not restrain an exclamation of enthusiasm. "How wonderfully pretty, Doris."

Doris knew that her guest would fall in love with the place once she had seen it. "Yes—we think it is most attractive."

"Attractive! I should say it was. I've never seen anything so perfectly arranged and so prettily decorated in my life. And every big comfy chair has a table beside it with a book and a drop light. Isn't the scheme of blue and yellow effective?" And Helen raved on, moving from one corner to another of the canteen and exclaiming anew at every turn. From the blue bowls of yellow flowers to the blue and yellow soft pillows that made the big lounge look invitingly homelike, she was enthusiastic to her utmost.

After a while, when the workers had arranged the tables, attended to the cutting of the bread and filling of the water glasses, a stray soldier or two dropped in for an early dinner or a bite of extra food.

Helen worked as if she had been brought up to just this sort of housework and made a charming and deft waitress.

When there was a lull in the work the girls sat together in the pantry and ate a sandwich or folded paper napkins and had a good time together.

"One of my soldiers ate four eggs," laughed Doris.

"And I had a boy who had two plates of that meat pie, and you know how much Elise puts on for a portion. I nearly passed away when I took his order for a second portion.

"Oh, I hear some one in the officer's room now! Who'll go? You go, Helen. You haven't worked so hard," said Doris, pushing her friend forward.

The officer's room was just off the big dining room and had a door leading directly into it from the porch.

Doris, being a regular worker, knew that there came to that room occasionally a fat and grouchy major whom they all disliked to wait upon. Therefore, in Helen's ignorance—or innocence—she had taken advantage of her and the girls were all laughing quietly about it.

Helen was gone so long that they began to wonder what was keeping her.

"It must have been the major, and he's explaining just how long he wants his toast toasted and his eggs boiled," remarked Doris.

"It's taking a long time tonight," added another girl.

"Suppose you just happen out that way—and look," said another.

"Let's all go," whispered Doris. "We can pretend we're fixing the tables."

They all started in the direction of the officers' lounge and looked carelessly in.

There was no fat, grouchy major. There was no Helen!

The girls looked at each other. "I certainly heard some one go in there," Doris said.

"And—your friend Helen?" questioned one of the girls who had envied the newcomer her prettiness.

"I—I can't imagine," began Doris. "Oh, listen!"

"Yes—I hear voices!" exclaimed two of the girls in unison.

Out on the porch, dimly lit from the yellow lights within, they heard Helen's voice. Then they heard a man speak.

Doris felt it her duty to go to the door. She had hardly expected Helen to break the rules this way.

"Oh—a—Helen," she called softly.

Just then Helen, flushed and happy, her eyes sparkling like twin stars, her dimples coming and going, appeared in the doorway, arm in arm with a big khaki-clad captain, with overseas stripes and a wound stripe—and an equally beaming face.

"It's—it's Bob, Doris—Capt. Robert Haverford, Miss Doris Vail," Helen managed to explain.

Introductions followed, and the captain explained that he had just arrived from France, that he had sent a telegram out to Ohio to inform Helen of his coming, and he had just wandered into this attractive canteen for a bit of supper, being too tired to eat with the fellow officers at camp.

"And the little canteen worker who came to wait on you proved to be your fiancee?" laughed Doris. "It sounds just like a story, and I can hardly believe it is real. Girls, shall we let Helen eat with him and we'll all wait on them?"

And Elise, the cook did herself proud on the extras she added to the plates of the two lovers who had found each other so romantically.

"Faith, and be jabbers, I was young mysel' once," she said when they told her.

Wanted— A Chauffeur

By BERTHA R. McDONALD

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Mrs. Hastings discovered her daughter Mildred had promised to marry Harry Prescott she raised a great disturbance and forbade the young people seeing each other. She was determined to marry Mildred to one of the millionaires who visited their summer resort every year, and Mildred was equally determined to answer the call of her own heart only. So there had arisen between the two a battle royal in which the community was greatly interested.

Harry Prescott's only fault lay in the fact that he was a struggling barrister, with no particular fortune save his honest heart and steady ways, but that was sufficient to taboo him forever as a future son-in-law for the fastidious Mrs. Hastings.

She was harassed night and day trying to keep the lovers apart, but the town was not large and nothing short of locking her daughter up seemed to solve the problem.

"Mildred," she said one day, seemingly apropos of nothing, "How would you like to make your Uncle William a little visit?"

"I'd love it'" answered the daughter. "But why the change of heart, Mumsie?"

"There's been no change of heart. I suppose it's no more than human to allow you to visit your dead father's brother once in a while, even if I don't particularly like him."

Mildred was a wise child. She saw fit not to question the goods the gods provided and went away with a song in her heart and a merry twinkle in bye eyes, while Mrs. Hastings sighed a sigh of great relief with each succeeding mile which rolled between her daughter and "that insignificant Prescott."

Mildred Was Equally Determined.

Uncle William was delighted to have his favorite niece with him.

"Do you shinny a car about as well as ever?" he asked, pinching her rosy cheek.

"When Mumsie lets me out, but she's so afraid I'll smile on some man a few cents less than a billionaire that she rarely lets me drive alone."

"Well, you can go alone here all you like, and when you get tired of driving the car yourself we'll advertise for a chauffeur."

One day soon after this an idea popped into Mildred's little brown head which refused to be silenced, and she remarked casually to her uncle:

"I had a letter from Mumsie this morning she's about ready to whisk me home again. There's a brand-new millionaire in town."

"Bother take the millionaires. I need you here."

"We'll put off the evil day as long as possible, uncle, but don't you think we'd better get the new chauffeur and let me break him in before I have to go?"

"Well, maybe, but you 'tend to it—put the ad in and then I'll interview the scamps as they come along."

Of course it couldn't have been Mildred's fault that there was only one applicant in answer to their advertisement, and if Mildred was just a wee bit nervous when the applicant was being interviewed Uncle William never appeared to notice it. Mildred proceeded to "break in" the new chauffeur with a vengeance, but if uncle noticed any growing intimacy between the two he made no comment.

Finally, Mildred decided to take Uncle William into her confidence. The animosity between him and her mother was thoroughly mutual, and she was reasonably sure of his being a strong ally in any project which was something Mrs. Hastings did not want.

"I suppose you've guessed, uncle dear, that Mumsie sent me here to get me away from a man she didn't like?" she queried.

"I'm—er—perhaps."

"Well, she did, and he's the very nicest man you'd ever want to know."

"Who is this paragon, anyway?"

"At present he's your chauffeur, but most of the time he's the smartest lawyer in our city."

And then uncle laughed long and loud and merrily.

"What are you going to do about it?" he asked when he could get his breath.

"I'm going to marry him by some hook or crook, but I promised dear old dad I'd never marry without Mumsie's consent, and I want you to help me get it."

"Leave it to me, Milly, my girl. We'll have her eating out of our hand yet."

That same day Mrs. Hastings was thrown into hysterics by the receipt of the following telegram:

"Millie bound to marry my chauffeur. What shall I do?"

A telegram being entirely too slow for the enraged mother, she sought refuge in a long-distance telephone call, and when she finally succeeded in getting Uncle William on the wire, she was so flustered she could barely make herself intelligible.

"Has—has she married him yet?" she finally managed to ask.

"Not yet, Maria, but I don't know how long I can hold out against her."

"Oh, save me, William—for your dead brother's sake—save me from this awful disgrace?"

"Is there anybody there—back home? If she's bent on getting married, perhaps—"

"Yes—yes—there is!" exclaimed Mrs. Hastings, grasping at a dying straw at the proverbial straw. "She's been in love with Harry Prescott, a young lawyer. Tell her if she'll only come home she can marry him any time she wants to. I'll promise her anything!"

Uncle William went back to the lovers, accompanied by a poorly concealed smile of triumph.

"Milly," he said, "your mother says to come home and marry Prescott—that a lawyer, even if he is poor, is more dignified to have in the family than a chauffeur. But we'll take no chances on her changing her mind. I've sent for a minister and we'll tie that knot good and tight right here before you start back."

So Mildred married the humble Prescott after all, and with her mother's full and free consent.

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

Last Saturday Mr. W. S. Radcliff, who is erecting a two story building on his lot on North Warren Ave., while standing on a scaffold at the top of the building, was precipitated to the basement by the breaking of the scaffolding. He was hurried to Mt. Carmel Hospital, where it was found five ribs were broken, left shoulder dislocated and injuries to the head, the extent of which is not fully determined as yet. An X-ray examination is to be held this morning (Wednesday). His condition, while not hopeless, is considered very grave.

Mrs. Etta E. Gardner, age 51 years, died on August 24th at the home of her son, Walter M. Gardner, 296 South Harris Ave., leaving a husband, five daughters and four sons. The funeral was held at Fraxeysburg at 10:30 Wdenesday, August 27. Burial by the Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Early Paper Mills.

The first paper mill in New England was established by Daniel Henchman, born in Boston 230 years ago. It was not the first of its kind on the continent, however, the pioneer mill for the manufacture of paper having been built in 1690 by William Rittinghuysen at a point within the city limits of Philadelphia. The first paper mills in England were erected at Dartford in 1580. The French and Dutch, however, were the first Europeans to manufacture paper. Paper-making machinery was invented by Louis Robert, who sold his model to Didot, the great printer, who perfected the apparatus, with the assistance of Fourdrinier. The latter obtained an English patent in 1801, and gradually the paper industry was revolutionized.

Sunday the Last Day

Of the Union Tent Meetings on the Hilltop

The Closing Sermons Will Be Rev. James Best Ones

Following are some of the closing subjects that Rev. James will preach on during the closing days of the Hilltop campaign:

"Christ Before Pilate." "The Unpardonable Sin." "Popular Amusements." "Heaven."

The closing subject for Sunday night will be: "The Harvest is Past, Summer is Ended, and I Am Not Saved."

You cannot afford to miss hearing these great sermons, as Mr. James has saved his best ones for the last days of the campaign.

There will be a special thank offering taken for Rev. Mr. James next Sunday, and it is hoped all our people have so much appreciated his splendid work in our midst as to give a hearty response at this time. There have already been nearly 150 conversions because of his untiring energy and great spiritual power, and the few remaining days will doubtless see this number more than doubled. Give him your hearty support, both by your presence, prayers and purse.

This song was written by Mr. L. A. Wegner while in a tabernacle in Martinsburg, W. Va. The words came to him while on his knees in a prayer and consecration service and the music came to him, during the night. God has used this song all over the United States in bringing men to Christ. Cut thisout and past in your song book.

The Plugger

By VINCENT G. PERRY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Malcolm McDougall was officially known as the city editor of the "News," but any title from office boy to managing editor could have been applied to him—not that the "News" was a small one-horse paper, but Malcolm was a 50-horse power plugger in the true sense of the word. Work! Why, 8 o'clock in the morning to midnight were easy hours for him! Nothing was done right unless he had a hand in it. No matter how well a story was written Malcolm could always find a place that needed attention. No wonder reporters didn't stay long on the "News." Although Malcolm was a nice fellow personally, he absolutely wouldn't allow another man to bring forth his individuality or originality.

Of course, with a man like Malcolm at the head of affairs the "News" got along very well with a full staff of cubs and one senior man. Larry Montrose was that senior—a senior on a junior's salary, it must be confessed. Just why he put up with Malcolm and refused the offers of other papers was hard to explain, but Larry smiled at the world good-naturedly and wrote columns for Malcolm to retouch every day, even though sometimes the retouched stories were not as good as the original ones.

There was one department that Malcolm had not broken into—the woman's page. It had long been the prophesy at the "News" that that would be the next domain he would besiege, but no one had really believed such a thing possible. Sure enough, when Miss Lorene, the editor of the page, was taken ill Malcolm threw aside the editorial he was writing for the editor and commenced to whip her page into shape. When Larry came upon him he was in the midst of a pile of "Lonely Wives and Longing Sweethearts'" letters.

"Ye fishes, man," Larry exclaimed, "what next will you be doing? Why can't Miss Lewis do that?"

"Why, Miss Lewis has not had quite a year's experience," came contemptuously from Malcolm. "This page is too popular a feature of the paper to have spoiled by a bungler. You'll have to write your own heads and shoot that copy right down to the composing room. I should go over it, but perhaps it will do."

Larry smiled. It was the first time he had been permitted to have his original story set up. As he watched Malcolm writing replies to silly letters he smiled again. This time his smile lasted.

Just an hour before the paper was to go to press, two days later, Malcolm remembered the woman's page. There was a whole stack of letters waiting to be replied to and made ready for publication. Again he had to o. k. sheets of Larry's copy without even reading it. With his usual do-or-die attitude he tackled the letters. About the third one from the top interested him, and he read it again, only to read and re-read it. Every time he read it stronger became his conviction that he knew the writer. As the feeling and pathos in her appeal got under his skin he blushed to the roots of his hair. His wife was the writer of that letter and he was the neglectful husband she was writing about. It was just as she said, he had neglected her almost from the time of their marriage, shamefully. Night after night he had gone back to work, leaving her to the companionship of her young sister Betty. How was he to know that she would be lonely just with Betty! Why, of course he should have known. But the last paragraph of the letter was the startling one.

"There is an old friend, a gentleman, who, realizing how neglected I am by the man I accepted in preference to him, has tried persistently to make my life happier by his companionship and presents, but I have refused them all through my sense of loyalty to my husband. But as the months go by and he still neglects me I feel I can no longer endure it, and must turn to this other friend for the companionship my husband denies me. Dear Luzette, what do you advise?"

For a long time after Malcolm had made sure of the contents of the letter he sat back in his chair and thought it over. There lay the explanation to a lot of mysteries he had been trying to solve in a half-hearted sort of way for a long time. So that was the writing Marian had been doing in secret—letters to Wendell Hughes, and a letter to "Luzette," the name under which Miss Lorene conducted her column. Wendell Hughes had wormed his way into her affections after all, he told himself angrily. What was there to do about it? Before he had been working out the problem for five minutes he had decided on half a dozen courses of action—most of them violent ones. Then conscience got in its work. He was to blame for it all, he admitted, finally. It was all his fault for neglecting Marian, the sweetest little wife in the world, as he had done. Of course he had been doing all his hard work for her—her happiness had never been out of his mind for an instant, but he had mistaken what would be happiness to her. His companionship and devoted love meant more to her than all the wealth and prosperity in the world. He could see that from the letter, and somehow the thought thrilled him.

"Take charge, I'm going home," Malcolm called out to Larry as he jumped up from his desk. "There is not much to do, but it's time you were taking some of the responsibility off my shoulders anyway. I've plugged here too long." He stopped at the door long enough to look back and see Larry, with coat off and sleeves rolled up, digging into work with more vim than he had ever seen him exert before.

That was the first act of a little drama that reached its happy climax two months later. The winding up scene was in the now delightful home of Mr. and Mrs. McDougall. Malcolm had just started in to confess about the great change that Marian could not help seeing. They were sitting in the twilight before the very brightest kind of grate fire, and Malcolm's arm had found a resting place around Marian's slender waist. His other hand was snugly holding her little warm fingers, and as he talked he squeezed them very gently now and then.

"It was all for you, dear," he whispered just so she could hear. All the hard work was for you, and for the happiness I thought it would bring you. I thought you'd understand, dear, but now I am glad you didn't."

"But I did understand, dear boy," she answered, in just as low a tone, "and I knew it was all for me—that was why I was content in my loneliness. I knew some day that we would earn the glorious times we are enjoying now. It was not so lonely, though, for I had my big surprise to think of. Look!" She took a magazine from the rack by their side and opened it near the front. "Look," she said again, as she held it to his eyes.

There before him was her surprise. A short story by Marian Lethbridge—his wife! In one of the leading magazines, too!

"But your letter to Luzette, dear heart?" he asked in wonder when he could get in his breath. "You said you were lonely and didn't have anything to do."

"It's our turn to confess," Larry and Betty advanced from out of the shadows. "I wrote that letter," Betty confessed meekly. "And I told her to and helped her," came glibly from Larry.

"But why?" Malcolm looked from one to another.

"We wanted you to give Larry a chance at the office—a chance to do some of the work that would show them he could be of more value down there and get a raise in salary and he wanted Marian to have happiness, too because she wasn't really happy. It has got everything we wanted."

"And we wanted to get married," joined in Larry with bated breath.

"What does it all mean?" Poor Marian could not make head nor tail of it.

"It means that I have been a blind idiot," Malcolm gasped; "but I am the happiest man in the world, anyway."

"Don't be too sure of that." Larry's voice came from out of the shadow and was followed closely by a smothered little cry from Betty that no one mistook for a cry of fright. There was not a word of protest from any one—all lips were very much engaged otherwise.

Alarm Clocks that Get You Up at the Right Time

Dependability is a necessary quality in an alarm clock, for if you cannot be sure that it will get you up at the desired time, there is little use in setting such a clock.

We back up these alarm clocks we sell—they are just as dependable as the best clock makers can make them—good time keepers. And the alarm can be set for one long blast or a number of short rings every few seconds.

These alarm clocks are finely finished and worth really more than we have priced them here.

The Service Guest

By LEOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"And I would like to suggest right now, while we are assembled here to honor our brave boys just returned from the front," Mrs. Hampton paused to give full emphasis to her next words, "that we each one take one or more home with us to dinner."

Katherine heard, but made no sign of acquiescence. She had been on the Citizens' league committee of welcome and had worked for two weeks on the program for entertainment, but this was bringing the question of patriotism straight into the privacy of her own home and she objected.

It happened to be a particularly cosy home where she had lived since the death of her father, Doctor Fenway, with Maria Tupper as housekeeper. Nobody in North Waldo ever spoke of Maria as a servant, although her life had been devoted to service in the doctor's family.

The house stood well back from the sidewalk on upper Main street; a large, old-fashioned house, with a cupola on top and a wide piazza surrounding three sides of its lower floor. The garden was withered and brown now, with patches of snow in the deep hollows around flower beds and shrubbery, but in the spring and summer it was a glory to the eye of the passerby.

And to old-time residents Katherine seemed a part of the garden, somehow; so many seasons had found her there, working here and there over the annuals and perennials, and training the myrtle at the base of the old rock pedestal that held the sundial.

Very few suitors had ever passed up the winding path. There was something frosty in the air at the Fenways'; something that nipped romance in the bud. So Rodney Allan expressed it, the first and only time he ever asked Katherine to marry him:

"She thinks there's a Fenway with wings right beside St. Peter. I'd like to see the pride taken out of her, all right."

But Katherine went serenely on through her twenties without apparently regretting her position as the prize maiden lady of the little Maine town. She had plenty of money, an assured position, and all the old doctor left her. Life had run in serene channels until the war flame reached America. Rodney had organized the first volunteer company that went down the coast. She heard he was a captain, and his sisters smiled at her in church in a sort of triumphant way for having missed such a chance.

He was in the hall tonight, decorated and handsome, with one of the Hulsey girls beside him. Evelyn, the prettiest one. Katherine heard someone say they were engaged, and suddenly she realized that all of the girls and friends of her own girlhood had some special soldier to welcome and cling to. Her straight, dark brows drew together slightly, and she drew her fur cloak closer around her. It was chilly in the back of the hall. She heard a window close two seats behind her, and glanced back to see who had noticed her discomfort.

He was a stranger to her, a tall, deeply tanned western type of man, with service bars on his sleeve. Later, as the meeting broke up, she noticed he walked with a limp, and appeared to know nobody there. Their eyes met again, hers with a quick questioning of her duty to him, as the other members of the committee speedily gathered up their guest units among the boys and went home.

"I'll send your silk flags home tomorrow, Katherine," Mrs. Hampton called as she went out, but under the words Katherine knew there was the censure. All she had done was to furnish silk flags and money for the decorations. She turned with a sudden impulse to the stranger and invited him home to dinner with her.

Maria's eyes opened widely when she was told to set an extra place for a strange man, but, after the first half hour, Katherine began to find her self-consciousness leaving her, as he sat at her father's place and told of his experiences at the front. He was just out of the hospital and had come north with the Maine units because he had friends among them.

"There's no one expecting me specially," he added. "My people are all gone, excepting a sister out in Seattle."

And then, how it happened she never knew, but Katherine saw him grow tense and white, and Maria helped her lift him to the couch in the doctor's old room next the study.

Shell shock and overexertion, young Doctor Morton's verdict was. He must rest and be cheered up before he tried to go on farther.

In the days that followed the full lesson of war came home to Katherine as it had never before done. Clad in white, she took her place as his nurse, and fought to bring him back to the normal. He was Bob Lorimer, she found out, nothing more, but at the end of six weeks, when he was able to have breakfast in the little sun parlor off the dining room, she felt as if he had always been a part of her home.

"I suppose it didn't mean anything to you, Miss Fenway, that night," he was telling her; "you just did your duty by a strange soldier, but to me it was handing me back my faith in human nature. I'd said all the time since we landed, nobody cared excepting those who really belonged to you, don't you know, and I hadn't a soul. I don't see how you'll ever get rid of me now."

She was pouring his coffee, and met his eyes for one swift second as their hands touched in passing cups, but the undercurrent of appeal in his words sent the color to her face delicately. Maria was singing gospel hymns out in the buttery and Cheer Up, the canary overhead, was trying wildly to keep up with her. The sunlight poured through the south windows on rows of flowering plants and the pink and white china.

"It will be very lonely without you," she said, softly. "You've made me feel as if I had been given the opportunity to realize a little of what service meant in having you here."

"And nothing more," he urged. "Would you just as soon have taken in one of the others instead of me? I've liked to think that right from the first time we looked at each other you meant to ask me."

His hands had closed over hers and Katherine felt a relaxing of all the old prejudices as she looked at him laughingly.

"Oh, dear Bob. I've grown accustomed to you here, and I don't know whether I want you to go away or not. It's just like taking the camel in your tent, isn't it? Marie said the first day she saw your pipe on the mantel, you'd stay right along and now I'd miss it terribly."

Bob took out his record card which the doctor had filled out daily. He pointed to one line on it, "Quartered indefinitely," it said.

"Can I stay?" he asked. Maria's singing came nearer along the hall, and Katherine merely laid her finger on her lips and nodded assent.

Love of Trees.

That one should feel affection for the great trees is natural. In the Minnesota forests I met a lumberman who told me he would weep bitter tears when he got orders to cut down a fine hemlock, Julius Chambers writes in the Brooklyn Eagle. Every stroke of the ax seemed to him to be felt by the sturdy monarch whose life he was taking.

When I have revisited the "woods" in which, as a boy, I gathered nuts, I have fancied the trees I used to climb recognized me. They looked the same. They hadn't aged. The shellbark hickory trees seemed a trifle more dangerous to climb than of yore, and the lengthened arm had barely kept pace with the expanding bark. I could still encircle their trunks and could have climbed them if necessary, but the rewards of a winter's store of nuts no longer appeal to me. The walnuts and hickory nuts one buys do not taste like those gathered with one's own hands.

No Hog.

"You have plenty of money, but you haven't any more than your share of happiness." "I'll try to work along," said the magnate. "I don't want to hog everything."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

History is full of what youth can do. David was a mere stripling with rosy cheeks when he slew the great giant. Alexander was scarcely more than a boy when he crossed the Hellespont and fought his way to almost universal empire. Newton was only twenty-three when he made discoveries that have revolutionized science. Athanasius was a young man when he became the leading advocate of the Doctrine of the Divinity of Christ at the great council of Nice. Luther was only twenty-four when he led in the great attacks of the German reformation. His years were no barrier to vision, for he saw the need of educational freedom which has resulted in the modern public school. So the list might be enlarged adding an increasing emphasis on the powers of youth.

Early Formal Gardening.

In the sixteenth century, formal gardening was carried to a very high pitch. In England, many fine new country houses were being built on a scale unknown before, and gardens, fit to act as their setting, were being laid out round them. The importance of the place which both domestic architecture and gardening, or rather the designing and laying out of gardens, occupied in men's thoughts is shown by the fact that such a man as Lord Bacon wrote an essay on both subjects. Nor was his essay by any means an isolated instance. A century or so later, John Evelyn devoted much attention to and wrote a great deal on the same subject, and there are a host of lesser writers on gardens, such as Gervase Markham and some of his friends.

A little Hebrew from Harlem was listening with open mouth to a Scotchman from Glasgow, who was livening things up a bit in the Salvation Army but just back of the lines.

One of his "buddies" asked him the reason for the expression of awe on his countenance. "What's the matter, Abey, didn't you get the joke?" he asked.

"I don't know nothin' about no joke," was the answer, "but Gawd how that guy can imitate Harry Lauder."—Everybody's Magazine.

History of Skating.

The art of skating was invented by the Dutch, and was popular in Holland centuries before it spread to England and France. The first blade-skates used in England were introduced from Holland about 1660, and are first mentioned in a diary bearing this date, January 20, 1661. Prior to the use of skates by the Dutch, a sort of skate made of the bones of animals was used by the northern peoples, dating back to prehistoric times. Several of these primitive bone-skates have been found in the marshy fields near London, and are preserved in the British museum. The period when skating, as it is known now, originated in Holland, is not known to historians.

A Fair Inference.

"The cave man wanted something to eat and a leopard skin to wear."

"Well?"

"These secured I don't see what he did to put in his time."

"Judging from these stage exhibits he puts in all his spare time practicing classic dances."—Kansas City Journal.

Of Interest to People on the the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. 3. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, September 11, 1919 No. 21

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

On Saturday evening Sept. 6, 1919, at Guyettes Delicatessan, the Olympian Athletic Club held its annual banquet in honor of the four newly initiated members, namely: Frank Edwards, Carl Birle, Lester Bruckelmeyer and Emmett Spangler. The banquet was opened by the president, Morris Ater, who gave the toast to the Club. Then a delightful two-course supper was served. Speaking, music and cards took up the remainder of the evening. Those present were: Carl Birle, Edwin Beh, Lester Bruckelmeyer, Frank Edwards, Wynfred Moss, Ray Baird, Sherman Edwards, Thomas Merriman, Harry Snyder Walter Perry, Eugene White, James Russell, Morris Ater, Clarence Smith, Ray Linville.

Sunday, Sept. 7, the descendants of James M. and Sarah Briley Johnson held a reunion at Glenwood park. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were life long residents of Scioto township, Pickaway county, Ohio, the parents of 17 children, 16 of whom lived to mature years and each rearing families.

Quite a number of the third generation live on the Hilltop and other parts of this city and many are scattered over different parts of the U. S. The majority of the second generation, however, remained in or near the vicinity of the parental home where they were influential citizens, working for the higher intellectual, social and religious welfare of the community in general. The Johnson Reunion is an annual occurrence.

Sugar Production.

Although the average acreage of sugar cane per farm outside of Louisiana is quite small, this crop is so generally grown in some of the Southern states that the total acreage for an entire state may be surprisingly large. In Georgia, for instance, the cane patch per farm is only two-fifths of an acre, according to an estimate by the bureau of crop estimates, and yet the estimated total acreage of the state is [illegible]

What Are You Worth?

Did you ever figure out what you are worth to yourself?

Did you ever think that, as a human being, you have a certain value which can be set down in dollars and cents?

You can reckon it from your wages or salary.

Your annual income represents the interest on a certain amount of capital.

Suppose you receive $1,000 a year. At 4 per cent this is the interest on $25,000. If you could turn yourself into "capital" this would be your value.

Whenever you increase your energy, intelligence or effectiveness in your business you capitalize yourself at a higher figure. When you can pull down $4,000 a year from your services you can set down your personal valuation at $100,000.—Waco (Tex.) News.

Male and Female.

A man's idea is just to catch a train; a woman gets down to the depot half an hour ahead of schedule, for fear the engineer may decide to leave early.

Curious Cities of the World.

Some curious cities of the world are told about in Leslie's Weekly. Among them is the remarkable town of Curva, Bolivia, built entirely on a curved mountain top. One of the most peculiarly located towns in the world is this one, most aptly named Curva. It is situated high in the Bolivian Andes and is entirely confined to the top of a hill.

In Patagonia, at the southern extremity of South America, lumber of any kind is extremely scarce. So the town of Puerto Madyrn, 838 miles from Buenos Aires, is constructed entirely of tin and zinc. These are brought down from the capital and are much cheaper building materials than lumber. The houses, roofs and walls are built of metal; the fences also are constructed of it, with a wooden frame.

The curious town of Newcastle, Jamaica, is located on the side of a hill in such a way that none of the houses are on the same level. Even in the graveyard, every tombstone is higher or lower than its neighbors.

Are you easily startled?

Has the Flu effected your nerves in any way?

If so, use the great Nerve Remedy, KE-O-KA.

THE COMMITTEE.

Miss Maybelle Wells of 146 Eldon Ave., who has been ailing for sometime, was taken to St. Clair hopsital last Friday for treatment, is under the care of Dr. Howel and is getting along fine and is expected home in a short time.

Here is just what the Hilltop has been needing. Mr. M. W. Seiller has bought a half interest in the dry goods store of his brother, L. M. Seiller, and they are re-arranging the store completely with new shelving, etc., getting ready to add a complete line of ladies' ready-to-wear clothing, coats, suits, skirts and dresses.

Mr. M. W. Seiller has had several years experience in this line and will be able to go into the market and get good values and latest styles at moderate prices.

It will pay the ladies on the Hilltop to inspect this line before placing their orders for fall wearing apparel.

They will have an opening on September 20th.

Charles B. Hughes, 74, civil war veteran died of complications Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. C. Provens, 157 N. Wheatland Ave. Mr. Hughes was a member of Co. A, 173rd and Co. F, 33rd Regiments, O. V. I. He formerly lived at St. Clouds, Fla. He leaves a widow and two daughters. Funeral at 2 p. m. Thursday at the residence. Burial in Green Lawn.

Mrs. Victoria Josephine Tucker, wife of H. C. Tucker, age 72, died at her home 1[illegible] S. Harris Ave., of asthma, leaves husband and son, brother and siter. Funeral at the home 2:30 p. m. Saturday. Burial at Green Lawn by Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Ferguson of 85 Highland Ave., have returned from a three weeks visit with relatives and friends in Jacksonville and Ashland, Illinois. Before coming to Ohio, they resided in Jacksonville.

Moore's Slotted Anti-Carbon Fire-Pot

Burns the Gas, Smoke and Soot

The United States Government declares that soft coal contains within 6 per cent as much heating power as hard coal, and would be just as valuable for heating if the gas could be burned. Its statistics show:

"A bushel of hard coal contains 6 per cent volatile carbon or gas, 82 per cent fixed carbon or coke, making a total of 88 per cent heating power.

"A bushel of soft coal contains 38 per cent volatile carbon or gas, 44 per cent fixed carbon or coke, making a total of 82 per cent heating power."

In ordinary stoves it has never been possible to burn the gas of soft coal, and the greater part of its heating power has been lost.

Moore's Firepot with which Moore's Air-Tight Heater is equipped is constructed specially to burn all the Gas, the Smoke and the Soot of soft coal, making it as valuable for heat as hard coal.

Perpendicular flues extend from the bottom to the top, and completely surround the firepot on the outside. These are connected by narrow slots with the inside. The air which is admitted through the draft door is drawn up the flues and discharged through the slots against the sides of the coal; the heat frees the gas from the coal, which immediately mixes with the air and bursts into flame. The smoke passing out of the chimney is white, showing that all the heat-giving qualities in the coal have been consumed. The fire burns around the sides of the firepot, and gradually consumes the coal toward the center. There are no ashes between the fire and the pot, so that a great heat radiates through the firepot and dome.

In ordinary stoves the fire burns from the bottom and center toward the top and outside; the gas is driven up the chimney and wasted, and the ashes and fuel prevent heat radiating through the firepot.

Through the invention and use of Moore's Firepot the heating value of soft coal or slack is nearly doubled. The cheapest grade of slack coal can be used in this stove with the same success and satisfaction as the best grade of lump.

MOORE'S AIR TIGHT EASY TO MOVE

EASY TO MOVE

It is easy to move the Moore's Air-Tight Heater. The handsome foot rails can be turned upside down and hooked into the casing, when they can be used as carriers. You don't have to have help to move the stove at house-cleaning time.

CLEAN

Moore's Air-Tight Heater is a clean stove. It has a dust flue which connects the ashpit with the cast smoke elbow. When the easy running ball-bearing grate is shaken, the damper to the dust flue is opened and all dust is drawn up the chimney. In removing the ashpan a plate drops down in front of it which catches any ashes which may spill and would otherwise fall on the floor.

HANDSOME

The blacking does not burn off, and the stove is always bright. The reason is that the open ornamental casing rests on the extended base, and does not come in contact with the firepot or dome at any point. The stove remains bright and clean the entire season, which is an important feature in a parlor stove.

PERFECT FIRE CONTROL

Absolute control of the fire is the result of perfect fitting joints.

The ashpit, draft door and slide have ground joints that are so perfect that when the parts are put together they are both water and air tight.

Perfect regulation of the fire is easy because of the long draft lever which allows the slide to be adjusted to the smallest fraction of an inch. The fire is easily held from 12 to 48 hours.

HEAT THE UPSTAIRS

In nearly every home there is a hall or rooms upstairs you would like to heat.

Moore's Air-Tight Heater is built to do this without interfering with heating downstairs. On the top of every stove is a collar and a large heating pipe can be attached to it and run to a register plate in the ceiling and a large volume of heat carried to the upper part of the house, thereby greatly adding to the comfort of the family.

SAFETY

A special feature of this stove is that children are not easily burned by falling against it.

When Myra Forgave

By ROSE RAWSON

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The ice was in splendid condition, and carefully avoiding the people she knew in the crowd about the boat landing, Myra struck out with long powerful strokes for up the river.

She was in no mood for company. She wanted to be alone and think things over. It is a serious thing when a girl gives back her first engagement ring and informs the donor that she never wants to see him again. That experience had come to Myra that afternoon.

It had all been ridiculously foolish. Tom had scoffed at her for having joined the Browning club, declaring Browning to be a prize puzzler and not a poet. She had taken offense and they had had their first quarrel. She had given back his ring and he had gone off in dudgeon, leaving her with the afternoon on her hands. They had planned to skate to Riverdale, five miles up the river, have supper there and skate back by moonlight. Now it was all spoiled and she must skate alone.

She was fond of the ice and the swift motion and the bracing air soon put her in a more pleasant frame of mind. Perhaps she had been hasty in giving back the ring, but then it is not every day that one is elected the president of a literary club, and he might at least have congratulated her upon her victory over Nettie Doran.

She had been so engrossed with her thoughts that it was with surprise that she found she had entered the "cut" more than two miles from the landing. Here the river ran between steep bluffs for three-quarters of a mile, and she shuddered a little as she glanced at the cliffs on either side. She never had noticed it before, but now they seemed so black and forbidding.

She was still glancing up as her skate struck a bit of wood frozen into the ice, and with a cry she sank to the glassy surface. She struggled to her feet, but with another little moan she sank to one knee; she had sprained her left ankle.

Several times she essayed to rise, but each time her ankle hurt her more and finally she desisted and crept on hands and knees to the bank. Perhaps some of the others would take it into their heads to skate up and they would give her help. If no one came she would try to creep back after she had rested.

She Gave Up Hope of Help Coming.

But after an hour she gave up hope of help coming. She was so numb she could scarcely move. She began

Charley Zepp's Feet

By ARCHIE CAMERON NEW

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

His chair propped up comfortably against the door jamb, in the narrow hallway leading from the stage of the Olympia theater to the back alley, with a dim red light casting its feeble rays on his white hair, Baker, the doorman, kept watch snoozily, against the trespass of unhallowed feet. And then an unhallowed foot brought him upstanding, and an unhallowed hand on his stooped shoulder brought a frown, which quickly changed into a grizzled smile as a bill shot under his nose.

"I say," piped a voice, "my good man, will you give this card to Miss Dolly Hart?"

"H'm-m," came the answering grunt, as Baker scanned the card. "I'll see. I think her act's on now. Jes' wait."

Baker shambled off, but hadn't got a foot when a retaining arm shot out of the darkness and stopped him.

"Pss-t," hissed Charley Zepp, reaching for the card. "Who's Dolly's Johnny?" Then as he read the card he turned a surprised face on Andy Scobel, the property man. "Shades of Morgan, Andy, it's Piper!"

"Piper?" echoed Andy quizzically. "Where does he tend bar?"

"Can it, Andy," growled Charley Zepp. "He's no bartender. His daddy's name's on most o' yer weekly pay."

"Forrest's angel?" quizzed Andy, puzzled.

"Forrest's nothing," was the retort. "He ain't got nothin' t' do with th' manager o' this house. He's president

"Can't y' Tell 'im by 'is Pigeon Feet?"

o' th' Consolidated National bank—worth about fifty million—oh, boy, what a write-up for Dolly!"

"Soft pedal," admonished Andy, in a hoarse whisper. "You press agents 're reg'lar nuts. Dolly's partner Bill Hemsley'll give you all that's comin' t' you if you go to framin' up Dolly with a money-masher. Besides, this don't look real—a bank president Johnnying around stage—"

"It's his son, not him," and Zepp gave Andy a scornful look. "Besides, y' gotta be a fair property man before y' can get t' be a stage doorkeeper even, and that's ten jobs below press agent. So keep yer mind on yer own business. This is my meat. Oh, boy!"

Charlie Zepp started for Dolly's dressing room and accosted the dainty little dancer just as she returned panting from the stage. Greeting him with a winsome smile, she invited him in. Cautiously he held his breath until the door was closed.

"Well, what's up, Charley?" she demanded, dabbing cold cream on her slightly tinted cheeks—Dolly didn't need much make-up—nature had saved her some expense on that score.

"Biggest thing in years," answered Charlie, hoarsely. "You've got him sittin' up an' barkin' for yeh."

Dolly blushed prettily, and a soft glow suffused her face and neck.

"Who—Billy?" she asked, smilingly. "Good old kid—he's some boy."

"Hilly be dinged!" shot Charlie, scornfully. "A real one—a gilded gusher—a dough-dripper—he just oozes money—millions of it."

"That's not Billy, then," admitted Dolly, still smiling; "but he's a—"

"Course it ain't," snapped Charlie. "This is Piper—son o' th' big Wall streeter—he's waitin' for yeh outside; here's his card."

"For me?" asked Dolly, with a puzzled frown, scanning the card Charlie gave her.

"Sure," insisted Charley, impatiently. Wants to date y' up for tonight. Baker's waitin' for an answer. Biggest write up y' ever had, kid. Better wrap it up an' bug it t' yer bosom. Can't I tell 'im yes, an' when?"

"Wait, Charley," Dolly's smile turned to a deep frown. "This is my business. I don't want to see him. Tell him so."

"Why?" demanded the perspiring press agent. "Think of it, Dolly. Just go out with 'im once. Jes' once—and look at th' big headlines in th' papers. Leave it t' me. 'James Piper's Son Courting Dolly Hart, the Irrepressible Ingenue.' Why, it means millions t' yeh, kid."

"But I can't marry him, I—" Dolly broke off abruptly.

"Y' don't have t'," assured Charley, eagerly, "though I don't see why not. He's a gold mine. But all 'y gotta do is string him along fer a couple dinners, an' I'll do th' rest. Look where it'll get yeh. I can see yer name now on th' 'lectric sign out front, 'Hemsley and Hart—Dances Divine.' Or even 'Dolly Hart — the Irrepressible Ingenue.' Y' can drop Bill Hemsley."

"Cut that!" said Dolly, sharply. "Whatever comes off, Bill's in on it, too. He's a good kid, an—"

"All right, all right," soothed Charley, then returned to the attack. "Come on, take it while th' takin's good. Shall I tell 'im yes?"

"Er—no," faltered Dolly, thinking of the big electric sign. "Er—tell him to call—tomorrow night—and I'll let him know."

"But—"

"Tell him just that," snapped Dolly decisively. "I'll think it over."

"Better had then," surrendered Charley, content with a partial victory. "Think of the big pay, th' big headlines—th'—"

The door closed behind him with a slam, and he returned to the hopeful Johnny, bidding him graciously to return "tomorrow night," and then he went about scattering the glad tidings.

The news reached Hemsley in due time, as it did also their fellow players on the bill. The latter took it as a triumph.

"Fine, Dolly," they congratulated her. "Invite us up on Fifth avenue when y' get settled, will ye'?" An Dolly, jokingly, assured them that she would even send her limousine after them.

But Billy Hemsley took it as a shock. Dolly Hart—his Dolly, as he had recently come to think of her—angling for a millionaire? Impossible! But, then, Pearl Popp, of the Juggling Poppe, assured him it was so.

"Told him to come back tomorrow night," she told Billy. "Looks like a sure-fire hit. Old man Forrest says he's been hangin' aroun' the theater for th' last seven nights. Looks like weddin' bells, don't it?"

Hemsley grunted, and left the theater for his midnight lunch—alone. He didn't want to see Dolly—he wanted to figure this awful blow out alone. Dolly leaving him?—it was terrible. But, then, what chance had he against a man who could buy her a pet elephant, and after that, besides, a diamond necklace for the beast. It ruined his appetite, and afterward his sleep. And this, in turn followed by a spoiled breakfast, nearly caused him to spoil their act at the matinee. To only one did he express himself, and that was Andy Scobell.

"Better keep th' tin god out of my sight," growled Billy, "or th' Piper family'll be minus one."

"Y've stuck yer feet in it, Charley," Andy told Zepp a few minutes later. "Hemsley's sore as th' devil."

"Never y' mind about my stickin' my feet in anything," retorted Charley. "They'll get me out of it, too. Hemsley's a nut."

And then, later, ten minutes before their act, the news spread that Piper was back for his answer. Hemsley heard it as he stood in the wings, and then, across the stage, under a piece of suspended scenery that hung a foot from the floor, he recognized Dolly's feet. Those slippers—he could tell them anywhere. But that wasn't all! Under hers were two big feet—a man's shiny patent leathers!

And then, with a sickening feeling, he saw Baker shambling toward the back door. In a trice he was at his side.

"What did Dolly tell that—rat?" he demanded.

"I—I don't know, sir," faltered the aged doorman. "Here's th' note she gave me."

Billy seized it, read the single line, "Nothing doing," and then gripped his shoulders eagerly.

"Is that for—Piper?" he demanded, hoarsely. Baker nodded. "Then who?" demanded Billy, breathless with joy, "who is that guy talkin' to her?" And he pointed to the feet showing under the curtain.

"G'wan," growled Baker. "Can't y' tell 'im by 'is pigeon feet? They're big enough. That's Charley Zepp. He's been arguin' with her, but it's no go. It'll cost me a big tip, too. She's a stubborn young woman."

"Thank God she is," snapped Billy, as he hurried away in Dolly's direction.

Later, as Scobell saw Dolly, with her head resting happily against Hemsley's shoulders, having heard from the doorman, he mused contemptuously.

"He ain't got no business mixin' in love, Charley ain't," and he stole another glance at the enraptured couple. "An' now he'll be hangin' around, like th' rest of th' news-hounds, sayin' I tol' yeh so. But his feet did get Charley out of a mess, th' lucky stiff."

to cry softly. If she could not get to the lower end of the cut where she might attract attention of someone on shore she might freeze to death.

With infinite labor she crawled a few feet, but she had to give up and sit down again. Perhaps they might miss her at the landing and remember that she had gone up the river. They would send out a searching party for her. It might be an hour or more before she could hope for help, but the idea brought her some comfort, though it did not check the flow of tears.

Then her quick ears caught the welcome sound of the ring of steel on the hard ice and she tried to struggle to her feet.

Around the bend above, Tom Run yon came with powerful strokes. He was looking straight ahead, and in the dusk he passed her. Before she could gain the courage to call to him he stopped suddenly and turned. In a flash he was at her side, kneeling before her.

"What's the matter, dear?" he asked. "Are you hurt?"

"I've sprained my ankle," she sobbed, "and I'm tired and cold and hungry, and it hurts an awful lot. I'm so miserable."

"How long have you been here?" he asked.

"Hours," she moaned. "It seems like days and it's so black and lonesome."

"Poor little girl," he said tenderly "I'll soon have you out of it. I'll skate down to the landing and borrow a sled."

She grasped his coat in terror. "Don't leave me," she pleaded. "I think I would go crazy."

"It would take only ten minutes or so," he argued, but she kept a convulsive hold upon his coat. Presently an idea struck him.

"Can you stand on your other foot?" he asked. "Will it bear your weight?"

For answer she put out her hands and he helped her to rise. She winced as the lame foot struck the ice, but she smiled bravely.

"I think I can," she said.

Tom dropped on one knee and started to unfasten the skate on the injured foot. The ankle was so swollen that he had to cut the strap through, but presently he rose and grasped her hands.

"Now keep the foot up," he commanded, "and let me tow you."

It was a little awkward at first. They skated together nicely, but now she could not take a stroke, merely sliding along upon the single runner and leaning heavily against him for support. Under his coaching she soon caught the idea, and presently they were swinging along at a good pace.

The injured foot ached with the motion and weight of the boot, but it was comforting to feel Tom's strong handclasp and to lean against his shoulder as they sped along.

Somehow she had never realized what a strong man he was until she felt herself being carried along almost without an effort. It was less than ten minutes before they came in sight of the town as they turned the last curve.

"Looks kind of good, doesn't it?" he laughed, as she gave a cry of delight.

"I thought I never should see it again," she confessed. "I had almost given up hope."

"Lucky thing I had to go to Riverdale, he commented. "I had given up the idea, but Johnson took me up in his rig to look at a horse he wants to sell me, and I took my skates along."

"I'm glad it was you," she murmured.

"Are you?" he asked in surprise. "I thought you would rather have had almost anyone else rescue you."

"I did feel that way for a moment," she confessed, "when I first saw it was you. I wonder why you turned around."

"Something seemed to stop me," he explained. "It was a funny sort of feeling. I just seemed to see you behind me, and I had to turn around to make certain. It seemed almost as if a great hand made me stop."

"I think it was fate," she said, softly.

"Maybe I sort of half saw you, and was not conscious of it until I had passed you," he suggested.

"I would rather believe it was fate," she persisted.

"So would I," he said soberly. "Here's the landing."

The crowd had left the ice and had gone home to supper. There were no sleds around, so he slipped off his skates and caught her up in his arms.

"It's only a couple of blocks," he said. "We'll get home more quickly this way."

She did not make any comment until he had carried her into the house and had bestowed her comfortably upon the sofa. As he turned to go she spoke his name softly. He turned back.

"Will you be over after tea?" she asked.

"Surely," he answered, "I shall want to know how you are getting along."

"Will you bring the ring," she whispered.

"I have it right here," he cried, eagerly.

For answer she stretched out her hand and he slipped it on.

"This makes me think of the only Browning I know," he laughed, "Remember:

"'There's a time in the lives of most women and men,
When all would go smooth and even,
If only the dead knew when
To come back and be forgiven.'"

"I forgave you long before that," she whispered. "I care more for you than I do for Browning."

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

The surprise birthday party given Tuesday evening by the Ladies Aid Society of St. Pauls United Evangelical church on Mrs. F. R. Ellison, 428 Powell Ave., the president of the Aid, was a complete success, due to the efficiency of the leaders and all that took part. They all met at the home of Mrs. Fanny Davidson, S. Warren Ave., and went in a body to the home of Mrs. Ellison, where they caught her in the act of getting supper. She was taken completely by surprise.

Each member went prepared with plenty to eat and they and their families enjoyed a fine lunch on the spacious lawn of the Ellison home. After lunch all that could gathered around the piano and sang as only a crowd can who are enjoying themselves and having the time of their lives.

Then came the presentation speech by the new pastor of the church, Rev. P. E. Smoke, which was answered by a speech of thanks by a very much surprised and blushing recipient. In replying Mrs. Ellison stated she was so surprised and in the excitement had completely forgotten her age, so the writer can not say which birthday was celebrated.

It is not necessary to say that a most pleasant and delightful evening was enjoyed by the sixty that were present as that is always understood when at the Ellison home.

The conferring of teh third degree last Monday evening, September 15, by "Hilltop Lodge No. 662, I. O. O. F." marks another step forward in the history of this Lodge. Since it located on the Hilltop about three years ago its membership has increased about two hundred per cent. About ten per cent. of its members were in the government service during the war and some are still doing their bit. That dreadful disease Influenza of course did its part also. But taking both the war and the influenza in consideration this lodge is making wodderful strides forward and without a doubt will become one of the strongest lodges in the city in the near future.

A Garden Exhibit and Birthday Celebration will be held at W. Broad Street School, Friday evening, September 19th. The school was opened September 19. 1911, with an enrollment of 252 pupils, in six rooms. Now the registration is 674. All the rooms are in use and the basement, also, and B and 2 B grades are so crowded that half day sessions are necessary.

The Gardeners of this school won the 5th prize at the State Fair, and will show the patrons of the school some of their products. Mrs. Walton has been the garden teacher, and has worked faithfully and successfully with the children.

The parents and friends of the children are very cordially invited to attend the exercises.

Honoring their teacher, Mrs. Porter, a class of 8 young girls of the Hoge Memorial church entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Nowell, 147 N. Warren Ave. on Monday evening, September 8. Mrs. Porter was the recipient of a serving tray, the gift of her class. The evening was spent in playing games and music. Refreshments were served.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society and their families of the St. Paul United Evangelical church held a surprise party on Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Ellison, 428 S. Powell Ave., Tuesday evening, it being the occasion of Mrs. Ellison's birthday. The party met about 6 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Davidson on S. Warren Ave. and with well filled baskets for the evening meal marched to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ellison and completely surprised them both. After the supper hour a social time was enjoyed by all, after which a beautiful black silk dress was presented to Mrs. Ellison. After the presentation, Mrs. Ellison responded in a few touching words expressing her appreciation of the kindness abown to her. There were about 65 present. The occasion was greatly enjoyed by all present.

The Epworth League of Glenwood M. E. Church gave a party in the church basement Friday evening, September 12th. It was rather well attended as more than fifty Leaguers and their friends were present. After a very enjoyable evening was spent in the playing of games, light refreshments were served. This festivity marked the beginning of a series of such events which are to be given during the winter months. Many pleasant evenings will be spent in the carrying out of this program. The members of the league are well assured of a good time whenever an entertainment is announced and as a result are always well attended.

The Annual Conference of the United Evangelical church which was held at Findlay, Ohio. last week, closed Sunday ecening, and Rev. P. E. Smoke was returned as pastor of the St. Paul church for the fifth year. The church is now engaged in an intensive and progressive campaign which will last for two months and is creating quite an interest among the membership of the church. This is the greatest forward movement that has ever been undertaken in the United Evangelical church. This movement was undertaken for the purpose of bringing our people practically up to the ideals our Church advocated from the beginnig, that. first of all it is a spiritual movement and that it is hoped to continue it until all the ends we are striving for have been gained. Every member of the church is expected to do his best.

STRAPOLOGY

We heard a colored Methodist preacher this summer at Ocean Grove make this startling statement: "There is not so great a need for more or better theology in the Protestant Churches of the United States as more "Strapology." He meant that there was such a universal and lamentable amount of disobedience to parents with its horrible resultants that it was high time fathers and mothers of this effeminate age should return to the more ancient wholesome and corrective custom of applying the strap to their disobedient children. Ask any school teacher this question: "Isn't it a fact that the children are more disobedient to parents than they were ever before and they will answer, yes. And parents know that it is harder to make their boys and girls obey. The children are running the homes, not the parents; calling them the "old man" and the "old woman," no respect; what do we care what dad says what mother says. In days past children were obliged to go an dsit with their parents in church during the entire service and give good attention and they received that instruction which helped them to form strong characters and brainy men and women worth while. Today the children. yes grown boys and girls, if they attend Sunday School it seems to be all their weak bodies and soft brains can stand. Behold an Sunday morning the small armies of youths hasteing from the santuaries while the few middle aged and those with totttering step wend their way to the places of worship. The Sunday School is an human institution while the church is divine and when the church declines our nation totters and falls like every nation, empire, kingdom that has forgotten to keep holy the Sabbath and neglected the worship of the Almighty God. If children cannot attend only one service a day then let that always be the preachig nservice. All the great men and women of the past owe their greatness in a large measure to their being obliged when children to attend church services. Solomon said, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he gets old he will not depart therefrom. We might add in this disobedient day, train up the parents in the way they should go that they and their children may not contribute to the downfall of our American Republic.

By the way, what is the matter with many Hilltop parents and citizens in general that such nasty, vulgar stories should be told in presence not only of hundreds of parents, but children of all ages on the corner of one of the prominent streets Where are the police. Where are the pure in heart? Where are some of the workers and converts of the tent meetings? Let's have more practical, good for something religion, and more back bone citizens.

G. R. Robbins.

This church raised twice as much money this year for benevolences and home expenses than any year of its history. The pastor believes i running an express, not an accommodation train and consequently never closes his church for union services or turns aside for other attractions believing all churches should hold their own services. Thus the greater success always and everywhere.

Larry's Wedding

By Genevieve D'Arcy Mackay

(Copyright, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Larry Donovan was promoted from footman to coachman and moved from a room over the stables to a trim cottage with a fine view of the Hempstead's lawn, he felt as if the summit of his ambition had been reached. If genius is a capacity for hard work, Larry could well lay claim to it, for he toiled early and late with a pertinacity which set him high in the estimation of his employer, and enabled him to put by a snug sum by the time he had been in America three years.

There was only one thing wanting to make Larry's happiness complete, and that was the presence of Ellen O'Meara, who was already on her way from the old country. A month ago Larry had sent the money for her transportation.

Ellen was the belle of Ballymoran, and his winning her was to be viewed in the light of a great triumph. For a while it had been nip and tuck as to whether she would marry him or Tim Kearney. But Ellen had chosen Larry, and in the letters she wrote him from time to time there was no mention of Tim Kearney.

"Shure, her heart's all mine," said Larry to himself, and as the day of Ellen's landing approached his joy became more apparent.

Indeed, the whole Hempstead household took great interest in Ellen's coming. The servants knew her age to a dot, that her eyes were as blue as the lakes of Killarney, and her hair like burnished copper.

The morning of his wedding dawned clearly and Larry was in jubilant spirits as he took the Long Island train for New York. How Ellen would delight in their little cottage, and exult in the surprise that her husband was not a groom, but a full-fledged coachman.

Larry boarded the immigrant ferryboat, and it was not till he had reached the immigrant building on Ellis Island that he found that the Cedric, the steamer on which Ellen was coming, was a day late.

A whole 24 hours to spend without Ellen! Larry wandered disconsolately through the long bare halls of the building, stopping to look at the newly landed immigrants in their cage-like compartments, and thinking of the time when he had been like them. In one of the halls a girl was talking to a blue-coated official, and biting her lips to keep from crying. She was young and slender, with deep gray eyes.

She Was Young and Slender.

"I'm sorry," the official was saying kindly, "but we haven't been able to get any word of the aunt who was to meet you, and you're too young a girl to work alone in the city. It's against the law. If your aunt doesn't come for you, you'll have to go back to Ireland to your own people."

"But they're all dead," said the girl. "Shure, there's no one belonging to me at all except this aunt in New York whom I've niver seen. An' if she doesn't come for me—" the girl broke off with a sudden sob, so childish, so piteous, that Larry, in spite of his happiness, felt his heart ache for her.

"It's a shame, it is," he said to himself. "A poor young bit of a thing like that! Faith, if my Ellen was only here we might think of something to do for the girl." And on his way back to New York Larry determined to speak to Ellen about the matter. Women's wits were much better than men's in such cases.

Next morning he was early at the island, and instead of waiting in the immigrant building tramped up and down outside that he might catch the first glimpse of the boat that was bringing Ellen to him. Presently he descried it and his blood raced at the sight.

He stood as near as he could to the gangplank and anxiously scanned the faces of the immigrants crowded on the deck; but Ellen's was not among them. Larry was filled with an anguish of apprehension. Then his heart leaped. He had seen the glint of Ellen's red-gold hair! For an instant she faced him, their eyes met, and then she turned and spoke to a man beside her. He laughed and pushed back his cap.

As he did so, Larry recognized him. It was Tim Kearney. They were coming down the gangplank now, and Ellen, to steady herself, put a bare red hand on the railing. On her fourth finger gleamed a plain gold wedding ring.

Larry was too stunned to speak. Dazedly he turned toward the immigrant building. He knew not what to do, or where to go. The mockery of it all swept over him—the fruitless years of planning and working; the little house that he had meant to be so happy in. Worse than all, the shame of returning alone smote him to the quick. But as he stumbled on, there flashed through his mind the memory of the gray-eyed girl he had seen the day before. She had been so helpless, yet so lovely in her grief. Somehow, the recollection of her loneliness seemed to draw him toward her as if by an invisible hand.

"Shure, misery loves company," he said to himself, "and if the girl could only learn to care for me, 'tis joy and not sorrow might be in store for us!"

He quickened his steps, fumbling in his pocket for the letters with which Mr. Hempstead had invested him in case he had trouble in proving his right to Ellen. They certified as to Larry's character and errand beyond a doubt, and satisfied the middle-aged official who ran his eye across them.

"Well?" he said.

The situation was a difficult one and it took Larry some moments to explain.

Finally, the official threw back his head and laughed. "We've had a good many romances on the island," he cried, "but this beats all! Still, as far as I can see, there's nothing against your marrying the girl if she consents. At present she's expecting to be deported, for we've found that her aunt died some days ago after the girl sailed."

So Nora MacManus was called from the women's detention room, and came with a look of wonder—a wonder which deepened as she saw Larry.

"They're telling me you're from the owld sod," said he, "and that your

Steamship Engagements

By C. B. LEWIS

(Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It may have been that in the hurry and confusion of getting away from London the purser of the steamship Bramble got things mixed up. He knew that he had among the passengers no less than three fond American mammas who had been trailing over Europe with marriageable daughters and were coming home with disappointed looks, and he hoped to give one of them a last chance.

However it happened, it was known among the passengers even before the Bramble left her dock that a great man was on board. It was Mr. Julius Smithers of the Chicago beef trust, and his fortune was variously estimated at from ten to fifty million dollars. There were men who at first denied that Smithers was a member of the trust. They could name over every packer who had ever been mentioned in the papers, and the name of Smithers didn't figure in the list. They were about to denounce him as an impostor when a red-headed man suggested that Smithers might have come into the trust on a merger of some sort. There were mergers merging all the time, and what if the beef trust and the tombstone trust had consolidated their interests?

The thing was as good as settled in an hour. Mr. Smithers was a man of forty. He was rather rotund and baldheaded. He had just the faintest inclination to be flashy. Mr. Smithers was very democratic for a man worth untold millions. He made acquaintances rapidly, and the steamer had not made a hundred miles to the westward when he started a game of poker in the smoking room and had for companions a drummer, a cattleman, a ward politician and the inventor of the sausage stuffing machine. He was given a seat at the captain's table. It was afterward said that this was a mistake, and that he had taken the place assigned to a bishop. If he hadn't been worth millions upon millions his table manners would have been open to criticism.

There was much to overlook in Mr.

"Well, I Guess Yes!"

Julius Smithers, or there would have been under any other circumstances. He was about the only one who didn't know it, and he was happy.

Within 48 hours those mammas were laying wires. If they had failed to pick up a lord, a duke or count abroad, it wasn't such a bad thing to fall back on one of the Its of the beef trust. Mr. Smithers could not only restore the family beefsteaks to the old-time prices, but he had millions to spend in castles, yachts and diamonds. These mammas had male friends aboard who were instructed to obtain information about Smithers. He met them half-way, and more.

"Say, you take my word for it, it's going to be the biggest success of anything for the last ten years," was his sanguine reply. "You'll hear all about it within a month after we land. Money in it? Well, I guess yes! I expect to make bonfires of fifty-dollar bills."

He was talking about the merger, of course. His replies were reported to the waiting mammas and they were introduced. The said introductions came about in a careless way, as if by mere accident.

The mammas found him hearty and jovial in his speech. He didn't always follow the rules of grammar, and he sometimes caught himself just in time to bite off a cussword, but a man may be forgiven much if he can draw his check for several millions.

It was decided in all these cases that Mr. Smithers would do as a member of the family. When he became a son-in-law they could polish him up a bit and gradually reduce the size of his two watch chains and his diamond pin.

Then the daughters were introduced. This was also carelessly accomplished. That is, while Mr. Smithers was making intervals between his poker games in order to get a breath of ocean air he would suddenly find some one in his path and be compelled to pause and be introduced. He wasn't a man with a grain of suspicion in his composition, as he was the soul of good nature. He gave up his poker to sit down and make himself agreeable to Miss Blank.

"You may have heard of the beef trust?" was his way of starting off the conversation. "It's going to be the biggest thing the United States ever heard of. Gad, but that was a great thought of mine, and I can't help but feel rather swelled up over it. No more bust-ups—no more walking the railroad tracks for Julius Smithers, Esq."

The girls elevated their eyebrows in surprise and perplexity. They had never heard any merger talk before, and it was as Greek to them. They reported to their respective mammas that Mr. Smithers didn't get into college the day he called—that his ways were rather familiar—that he evidently hadn't attended over a thousand high teas and grand receptions, and that it would take a carload of sandpaper to rub him down, but he had a good heart as a foundation to build on. If his conversation wasn't exactly up to the notch, the wind-up was intended to draw applause. He always finished by saying:

"I shall now have to ask you to excuse me, but I will see you again. In fact, I want to see you again. I think I can figure it out before we arrive at Sandy Hook to offer you the best thing of the season, but keep that to yourself."

"Mamma, what did he mean by that?" asked the respective daughters of their respective mothers.

"Why, child, how silly you are!" was the reply. "What could he mean but one thing?"

"But we have known him such a little while."

"You haven't got to know a millionaire over a day or two. They are different from other men. They have the cash."

There were men aboard looking to get into a good thing on the ground floor. They knew that the beef trust was a good thing. They threw out hints to Mr. Smithers, but he laughed and shook his head and replied:

"Not yet, my boy. I've got the dough to start it off, and I want all the plunks there are in it. See me next season."

"Will beef go up?"

"Thunder, no! We expect to knock the price down to fifteen cents a pound."

"Then how will you make your millions out of it?"

Mr. Smithers didn't make a direct answer. He simply winked a long, quivering wink with his left eye and conveyed the impression that there was a coon up the tree. The merger man enjoyed the sunshine of flattery and envy and toadyism for five or six days.

Then Sandy Hook was sighted one morning and he announced to the three scheming mammas that he wanted to hold converse with their three daughters. It was to be private converse. There was agitation. There was perturbation. There was consultations. Mr. Smithers selected a corner of the music room, and to that spot the victims were led in turn. The conversation was about the same in each instance.

"My dear girl," began Mr. Smithers, with paternal blandness, "I told you I had a good thing on hand and would try to arrange to make you an offer. I am about to do so. You have never had any experience on the stage, but you are a mighty good looker."

"Sir!" demanded the maiden, as she retreated a step.

"Oh, I shan't ask you to dress unbecomingly. It's just a plain, straight play called 'The Beef Trust,' and showing how that corporation, by raising the prices, parted two happy lovers and brought grief and death to other householders. Three corking acts and a cast of twelve people. We introduce a drove of cattle, a slaughter house, and a butcher shop among other spectacular effects. Will move right along without a hitch. Papers are bound to give it free columns of advertising. I can put you in the cast at thirty dollars per to begin on. What do you say?"

None of the three said anything—not to Mr. Smithers. Ten minutes after the last interview a murmur swept over the great steamer. That was followed by a growl. After the growl came cries of "Kill him! Throw him overboard!" There was a rush of feet, but Mr. Smithers was pulled into the purser's room and saved from total wreckage, and when the steamer reached her dock the captain lent him a pair of false red whiskers to disguise himself and escape the mob.

name's Nora MacManus. Is it of the Innishowan MacManuses ye are?"

"Yes," said Nora. Her voice was as soft as the run of a river.

"I was at Innishowan once, myself," said Larry, and he went on to speak of the old people and the old times. "Faith, they're a great bond whin people are in a strange land," he said.

Then Larry took both of Nora's hands at the same time.

"Nora, girl," he said, "listen to me." While he was speaking she kept her gray eyes fixed on his honest blue ones. He did not pause until he had told her the whole story. "I've lost faith in one woman," he declared, "but not in all. And the little house back there is lonely and empty, and my heart, shure, it's lonely and empty, too. Will ye come and fill it, Nora, alana? Will ye trust me whin I tell me that the longer I stand here speakin' with ye' the more I love ye?"

"It gives me a feelin' o' home to know they have the Blarney stone in Ameriky," said Nora, a gleam of humor appearing in her eyes.

"I'm no worse than an aunt ye niver had seen," pleaded Larry, "and I may be some better. And the people where we're going—shure they'll niver know but what you're the girl I came here to marry. There's such a thing as love at first sight, Nora, darlint, and that's what's the matter with me this minute. Ah, say ye'll marry me—though I know ye've niver set eyes on me before—"

"Oh, but I have," cried Nora. "Yesterday, in the hall—" she stopped with a quick blush.

"Ah," cried the delighted Larry, "then ye did notice me, my angel! 'Twas hardly a wink I got last night, for your face kept haunting me. I thought of what I'd heard ye say and how lonely and hard it was for ye, a girl in a strange land."

"Did ye, now," said Nora. "There's few would have thought o' that!" A wonderful change passed over her face, her eyes softened. "If ye think—if you're still shure—" she faltered, groping for a word.

"Ah, Nora, is it 'yes' ye mean?" cried the ecstatic Larry.

And Nora nodded.

So Larry and Ellen were married, and the kindly official and the matron of the detention room were witnesses of the simple ceremony. And it chanced that as he and his bride stood on the dock of the immigrant ferry they came face to face with Mr. and Mrs. Tim Kearney, also bound for New York.

"Nora, my dear," said Larry, "this is Mrs. Kearney. Mrs. Kearney, I'd loike to make you acquainted with my wife, Mrs. Lawrence Donovan." He shot a sharp look at Tim. "Is it on your wedding trip ye are?" he questioned, and without waiting for an answer drew Nora toward the bow of the boat, so that in going down the gangplank they took precedence of Mr. and Mrs. Tim Kearney, who followed sullenly behind, and were just in time to see Larry call a cab, hand Nora into it, and, jumping after her, close the door with a vicious slam.

"There are times," said Larry, whin it pays to be extravigant," and leaning over, he squeezed Nora's hand.

RELICS OF INDIAN VILLAGE

Accidental Discovery Made in New York Is Considered to Be of High Importance.

Digging for woodchuck on the outskirts of a virgin forest near Cato led to the discovery by Maynard A. Cramer, Auburn's city forester, of a buried pre-historic Indian village, largest of the several which have been excavated during the past half century in the Finger Lakes region of central New York, once the most heavily populated by Indians of any equal area in North America, says a dispatch from Auburn, N. Y., to the New York Evening World.

Bones were found a few inches below the surface of the ground and beneath these lay two skeletons of Indians, so determined by the shape of the skull. Led on Mr. Cramer, who is a member of the State Archeological association, excavated a large area, finding a mass of rare Indian relics in many "dumps."

For the first time in history it is believed, relics unearthed disclosed both Algonquin and Iroquois occupancy of the same camp site. Hundreds of arrow heads, with bone awls, beads, knives, hammers, mortars or mealing stones, notched sinkers, fish hooks, picks, cylindrical pestles, pipes and broken pottery were mingled in the masses of debris which lay beneath the moss of the forest.

Beside one skeleton was charcoal, believed to have been used in thawing out the ground in winter, that the Indian might be buried. It is estimated that the village was occupied about five centuries ago.

For Those Born in January.

People born in January are favored so far as strength, intelligence, and health are concerned. That is the conclusion arrived at by Dr. Marcello Boldini, one of Italy's greatest scientists, who, as a result of investigations, has discovered that men born between January 1st and March 31st are stronger, taller, and superior in intelligence to those whose birthdays fall in other months. This view is borne out by the researches of another Italian scientist, Deela Rovere, who found the proportion of children of inferior intelligence lowest among those born in January and February, and highest in August and September.

Human blood and tears are well known legendary sources of plants and flowers. Among the ancient Greeks such legends were common. The anemone, for example, was said to have sprung from the tears Venus shed over the death of Adonis.

Among the Virginian tribes of Indians red clover was supposed to have sprung from the blood of red men slain in battle with the white invaders.

According to tradition, the Danish invasion was the course of the Daneweed, a coarse asteraceous plant common in England, as it sprung from the blood of Danes slain in battle.

IS NOT MERE SUPERSTITION

The Touching of Wood, Supposed to Drive Away Bad Luck, Had Its Origin Many Centuries Ago.

Like most modern superstitions, the "touching of wood" is really a revival of a very old practice. Various sources are given as its origin, one being the medieval practice of carrying about an alleged piece of the True Cross and touching it upon appropriate occasions (perhaps with a reference to St. Paul's phrase: "God forbid that I should glory save in the Cross of the Lord Jesus Christ"). Another investigator suggests that the idea is very much older than Christianity, and was originally associated with the sacred trees and groves round the pagan temples. He adds: "The superstition had a practical side to it, as fugitives from hostile armies or the forces of the law took refuge in woods, where they were comparatively safe from pursuit. So well was this recognized in this country that we find in the 'Forest Laws' that all travelers leaving the wood for the road or the open country should blow three notes upon a horn before emerging, so that all should know that they were 'good men and true.'" An old Scottish dominie had another but analogous derivation. "Churches in early times," he maintained, "were in many cases sanctuaries from both the law and the oppressor. Those who sought refuge in them used, when attempts were made to dislodge them, to cling to the altar rails, commonly of wood, and so long as they maintained their hold they were safe."

The new year starts off with many tokens of progress and continued prosperity. Twenty-one new members were received last Sunday. More will be received next Sunday and many are indicating their purpose to unite with the church soon. There has been a great increase in the prayer meeting attendance and the people seem to be in the spirit of prayer and expectation. With the centenary drive put across and the finances of the church organized on a scriptural and spiritual basis which is making possible the prompt payment of church obligation, the moment is opportune for a great spiritual awakening which now seems near at hand.

A Poem and a Sequel

By DORA MOLLAN

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Elise Duane felt anything very deeply she invariably wrote a poem and sold it. Her verses appeared infrequently in a certain popular weekly. Always they attracted notice and oftimes she was asked the inevitable question: Why didn't she devote all her time to verse? If she could write like that, her path to at least moderate success was assured, and surely it must be less laborious than photography. To this question Elise always made the same answer: "But I can't write that way except when I feel a thing intensely, and I don't—often."

Back at the beginning of the war, when the first contingent, a battalion of National Guard troops, left her home town for camp, Mrs. Duane, accompanied by her small daughter, Alice, was wedged in the wildly enthusiastic, though somewhat tearful, crowd that bade them Godspeed.

A few weeks later a poem, signed with her name, was published in the periodical which had printed all her verses and which had a national circulation. It was a simple lament that she had none "near and dear" to offer to her country.

Mrs. Duane received many letters mostly from women who wished to thank the author of the poem for putting into words thoughts which they had not the gift to define. One, however, was from a man.

He did not praise the poem—simply stated he had read it, and in plain phraseology offered himself as a substitute for a "near and dear" one. "I have a premonition," the man wrote, "that I never will come back, and I am a firm believer in 'hunches.' I have no family to represent. My name is an honorable one and I have kept it clean. If you will take it, madam, and will allow me to make over to you my insurance I ask nothing in return but that I be not the only one left out when the mail arrives from God's country. We start East next week." It was signed "Private John B. Pendleton."

Pondered Many Hours Over the Letter.

Mrs. Duane pondered many hours over the simple, straightforward letter before she answered. Finally she wrote that she could not accept the name of a man who was an utter stranger to her. Neither would she feel that she had any right to his insurance, if the premonition should come true.

However, if Mr. Pendleton would permit, she and her small daughter would adopt him as their special charge during the war. If he could obtain leave before his regiment left for "over there" would he come and see them? She signed the letter "Elise and Alice Duane."

The next letter that Mrs. Duane received from Private Pendleton was dated at a nearby training camp. He would have a few hours' leave the following Saturday. Might he come and see them then?

Alice, aged twelve, was delighted when she heard that their soldier was coming to them Saturday.

Saturday noon he came. The little Duane flat was in immaculate order. Alice had helped make it so and from her post by the window called: "Here he comes, mother!" She ran headlong down the stairs at the sound of the bell and reappeared holding by the hand a tall soldier.

John Pendleton was not handsome, Elise decided at the first glance, but his face was one to be trusted. Somehow, she did not feel at all embarrassed, as she had expected to. After lunch they sat and talked considerably about his past, but more about the future. And the time passed quickly.

When Pendleton left he stooped and kissed Alice, then shaking hands with her mother and looking straight into her eyes, told her that he had spent the most enjoyable hours of his life. "I surely will have one more leave, and I'm coming again—may I?"

And Elise answered: "Of course."

Two days later Elise Duane received another letter from Private Pendleton. He had made his life insurance over to Alice. Surely she could not object to that. Then, too, he had a tiny income. It wasn't much, but it might help out in the days to come, when her business would be sure to suffer.

He had arranged that it be paid to her during his absence, for Mrs. Duane was to remember that even if she refused to bear his name they were still his adopted family, and, in view of the premonition, he would feel more comfortable about leaving them. The following Saturday, the letter stated, he was coming again and it would probably be good-by.

And over this letter Elise pondered during the intervening days. Had she any right to take this big-hearted man's money? No; not for herself, surely. But for Alice? Even a "tiny income would smooth their pathway. And in the event his forebodings proved to be justified—but here, rather to her own surprise, she found herself in tears.

That big, fine-natured man would have no one of his own name in the whole world to mourn him—no one who had a right to hang a service flag in the window in his honor!

Perhaps it was Alice's remark when her mother told her their soldier was coming to say farewell—"Oh, mother, I like him so! I wish he could be my really daddy!"—that brought Mrs. Duane to her decision; for it transpired that on that last visit she listened to the soldier's plea and became Mrs. John Pendleton.

Immediately after the ceremony the big soldier bade his "really" family good-by, and this time he kissed them both.

Then followed the anxious times that no one has forgotten. Sometimes letters came regularly. Then there were apprehensive weeks when no word came from France. The business fell off and the small income helped considerably. Daily Alice planned for the time when her daddy should return—and at the thought Elise's heart would beat faster. But it was not until the letters ceased to arrive altogether that the wife owned, even to herself, that she dearly loved her big, generous soldier husband.

Then one day, when Elise was busy in her workshop and the doorbell rang, she sent Alice to answer it. It might be the fateful bit of paper that haunted her dreams, bearing the tragic message that John's "hunch" had come true.

But this could be no telegram, for indistinguishable voices sounded from below. Alice was talking to a man. Did she call him "Daddy?" No. It couldn't be. Mrs. Pendleton trembled, however, as she arose and passed into the hall. Alice was coming up the stairs, holding by the left hand a tall soldier.

"Elise—my wife!" he cried. Then somehow that left arm was around her. Feeling her hand on his empty sleeve, he said: "You see, only part of my hunch was true, dear. Are you glad that the rest of me escaped to come home to my 'really' family? Alice is, she has told me so."

Stroking the useless sleeve Elise replied: "Somehow, I can't tell you, John, how I feel. I will write it. And none but you shall see the poem."

Down Falvy Way

By WILL T. AMES

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Ho, sheriff, this is Barton. You're needed down Falvy way. They been trying to get you on the 'phone, but the dummed line's busted or something. Come down and I'll tell you about it."

"All right; be there in a minute." And the head of Deputy Sheriff Cal Nestor disappeared from the moonlit upstairs window. Three minutes later he opened the side door.

"Come in, Bart," said the sheriff. "What's broke loose at Falvy?"

"Oh, that half-baked Dubreece boy, the second oldest of the tribe, you know—works in the pulp board mill, when he works at all—"

"I know him," cut in Nestor.

"Well, he's suffering from a mixture of hard cider and Wild Bill nickel novels, and he's got an ingrown notion that it's up to him to be a bad man like he's been reading about. He had some sort of a jangle with an inoffensive little cuss from Peterboro—something about taking his job away from him—and this afternoon he brought the Peterboro fellow a swipe with a light crowbar that almighty near done his business for him. Then he run home and got together a regular darned arsenal he owns—a thirty-thirty rifle and a repeater shotgun and a revolver and a jobiot of shells and set out for the woods. Stopped some kids and told 'em to go serve notice on the world for him that he was right dangerous and not to be took alive.

"Then he slid into the thickets up back of where he lives—and the whole town has been out after him ever since six o'clock. There ain't any head to the chase, though, and the two constables over to Falvy, if you ask me, is scared of the cuss. I was driving through from West Liberty and stopped to see the doings. The constables asked me to roust you out when I got back and tell you they want you to go down to Falvy and take charge. My mare got a stone in her shoe, and it took me more than two hours to get here."

"Anybody caught sight of Dubreece since he took to the woods?" inquired the sheriff.

"Three or four. But nobody with backbone enough to get him. That shooting gallery outfit of his seems to be a great antidote for Falvy valor. Far as that goes, I got a peek at him as I came up through the edge of the woods this side of Falvy, and somehow I didn't seem to take any very keen interest in getting into an argument with him. I came right along without stopping. Well, I got to be moseying along. Going down there?"

"Of course. I'll get there by one o'clock. They're all up for the night, I suppose?"

"Sure thing. Falvy hasn't had so much excitement since the minister's little boy swallowed his mother's wedding ring. Well, so-long."

"Don't You Dast to Step a Foot Nearer, or I'll Send You to Hell A-kitin'!"

"Good-night, Bart."

Sheriff Nestor's thoughts were not on young Dubreece and his melodramatic foolishness as he drove his little car over the moonlit roads to Falvy. Nothing but the line of duty could have dragged him to Falvy at this particular time—and yet in no other direction did his inclination so powerfully draw him. For Mary Nestor was in Falvy, in her capacity of trained nurse, taking care of old man Falvy, the mill owner. She had left her husband, the sheriff, a week ago.

It was a case of the conflict of strong personalities, together with a mistaken viewpoint on the part of the man for the rights and liberties of the woman. It had been brewing for months.

The final clash had come over a slight, immaterial thing—and Mary had gone out, white-faced but courageous and all-apparent calmness, to earn her own living. After a week Cal Nestor would have given his right hand to have her back again. In his stiff-necked pride he would have given the left one rather than let her know it. But tonight he wondered whether, in Falvy, he might not see her.

Nestor found the mill hamlet of Falvy wide-awake and all its able-bodied males afield, man-hunting. The sheriff, taking command, deployed his forces for a drive, fan-wise, through the half-mile of thicket in which Dubreece presumably was hiding—leaving unguarded all rear approach to his home.

"By this time he'll be hungry and losing some of his spunk and want some of that stone-fence cider; we'll let him sneak home, and then get him," Nestor told Phillips, the constable.

Even so, At 5:30 in the morning came running one of the youths set to watch the Dubreece house. "He just snook in over the pasture fence, sheriff," reported the excited lad.

"All right; I'll go have a talk with him."

"By hookey, sheriff, you'd better be careful. He's a darned bad egg," advised Phillips. But Nestor laughed.

In the broad light of the summer morning, Sheriff Nestor unlatched the rickety Dubreece gate in a most casual way and started up the dirt path to the side door. He had taken not more than four steps when the door flew open and young Dubreece, white, shaking, wild-eyed, victim of a very panic of desperation, stood on the sill with a shotgun at the "ready."

"By goshumighty, Cal Nestor, don't you dast to step a foot nearer or I'll send you to hell a-kitin'," he squeaked, his voice quavering with excitement.

"Oh, I guess you wouldn't do anything as foolish as that, Dubreece," Nestor's reply was so easy as to be scarcely argumentative. Without show of arms, without the faintest sign of fear, he continued his approach. It should have worked; with any normal man it would have worked. But Dubreece was not a normal man. The gun roared—both barrels. And big, rugged Cal Nestor, without a sound, crumpled into a heap on the ground.

"Anyone else! Come on, the hull gol-dummed world 'n git yours!" yelled the lunatic, ramming home two more shells. "Come inside that gate and go to hell a-flying!"

Of ten men of the posse in the roadway not one moved—toward the gate. But from across the way, where, sheltered by some alder growth, she had been watching in fear and trembling, a woman rushed, brushing away restraining hands. As she tore open the gate the mailman threw the gun to his shoulder, but, heedless of him as of the others, she sped up the path and threw herself on her knees beside the fallen man. Then she gathered him in her arms, and with the strength of two men, carried him away to safety.

At the end of a feverish half-hour, May Nestor had beaten fate. When Doctor Holt, back from a country call, arrived at last, he said no one but a thoroughly trained and resourceful nurse could have saved the sheriff's life.

What happened then? Goodness me! What a question! What could happen? Did you ever—ever in this world—know of a woman saving her husband's life at the imminent hazard of her own—and then going away and leaving him, or having occasion to? Indeed, no.

Hawaiian Republic.

Hawaii was proclaimed a republic July 4, 1894. More than a year before Queen Liliuokalani had been deposed by a committee of public safety because of her attempt, it was asserted, to obtain more absolute power. A provisional government was set up, which lasted till the islands were proclaimed a republic. Sanford B. Dole, former head of the provisional government, became president. Unsuccessful attempts had been made to conclude a treaty of annexation with the United States. The islands were finally annexed July 7, 1898, as a war measure, the United States being then at war with Spain. They were organized a territory June 14, 1900. Ex-President Dole was appointed governor by President McKinley.

NEWS HAPPENINGS

Hilltop Post of the American Legion formed. Over forty former service men of the West Side met at Highland Ave. school last Friday night and took the initial steps toward forming a post of the American Legion. A charter has been secured under the name of Curtis Bender Post No. 158. Mr. Bender was the first Hilltop boy killed in action and it was thought fitting that he be given this memorial.

Temporary officers were chosen as follows: Chairman, Grant Melvin; Vice Chairman, Fred Sulzberger; Treasurer, Cleil Corn; Adjutant, Brown Turner.

Several committees were appointed who will report at our next meeting. Much enthusiasm was displayed and everything points to a successful and vigorous organization.

Every former soldier, sailor and marine is urged to be with us at our next meeting, Friday night at Highland school. Delegates will be appointed to the State Convention and we need you.

The regular business meeting of Philathea Class of Glenwood Church was held at the church Thursday afternoon, Sept. 25, 1919. The officers elected for the year 1919-1920 were: President, Mrs. Marburger; Vice President, Mrs. Stevenson; Secretary, Mrs. Culp; Asst. Secretary, Mrs. Bigler; Treasurer, Mrs. Hengst; Parliamentarian, Mrs. Haner; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Harris; Teacher, Mrs. Chenoweth; 1st Asst. Teacher, Mrs. Sheckler; 2nd Asst. Teacher, Mrs. Albin.

The Kappa Nu girls were entertained with a slumber party by one of their soroity sisters, Miss Irene Priest, 70 North Burgess Ave., Saturday the 27th. The early evening was spent in games of various sorts, and taking flash light pictures. A lovely lunch was served by the hostess. Those present were the Misses Marie Krause, Gertrude Slater, Bertha Rausch, Gladys Hondashelt, Gladys Crellin, Catherine Sperry, Marion Slater, Nellie Deffenbaugh, besides the hostess. An exceptionally good time was enjoyed by all.

Robert Russell, who has been visiting at the home of his father, G. M. Russell, 158 N. Warren Ave. has returned to Washington, D. C., and resumed his duties in the Adjutant General's office.

The following friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. George Horne, 319 Midland Ave. gave them a surprise farewell party on the evening of Sept. 29, 1919: Mr. and Mrs. Thompson and daughter, Anna; Mrs. Chas. Dear and daughter, Betty; Mrs. Mark Dear and children, Don and Catherine, Mrs. James Zink, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Wm. Shelby, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Meyers and son, George; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lutman, Mr. and Mrs. Schumacher, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lauer and sons, Carl, Kenneth and Jack; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley W. Colburn and children, John, Henry and Margaret, Miss Emma Zink, Mr. Robert Zink, Mr. Purn Stone, Mr. Frank Bickel and Mr. Lyman Zink. Cards and dancing were indulged in until a late hour when the guests departed wishing them much joy in their new home and anticipating a house warming at that time.

The United Brethren Church members have purchased a parsonage for their pastor, Rev. E. B. White, on South Warren Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Moss, of 146 N. Ogden entertained Sunday for Harry Moss who returned last week from over sea. Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Moss, Wynfred, Mable and Kittie Moss, Charles Moss, Jr., Dortha and Robert Moss, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Shepler and daughter, Betty Ann, Mrs. Harry Moss, Mrs. Ray Caldwell. Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Will Shepler and sons, Delos and Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Shepler, son Kenneth and daughter, Nora, Mrs. Emma Miller, Kingston, Ohio.

A number of the young men of the Tri Mu Class were guests of a group of University co-eds in the university district last Tuesday evening. Later a theatre party was formed.

Among those were the Misses Esther Bush, Josephine Racinol, Ruth Downing, Zella Schaffner, Daphne Darringer, Helen S. Schapton and Messrs. John D. Marsh, Marion H. Ferguson, Frank K. Dickerson, Parker R. Reed, E. Albert Cady and E. Richard Lewis.

This was the first social function of the fall term to be given by the I. F. T. Sorority.

Miss Anna Ophelia Owen, aged 20, died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Owen, 68 Eldon Ave. She was a graduate of the Ella Smith School of Music and was a music teacher. The funeral services were held on Sunday with burial in Sunbury, Ohio, by the Hilltop Undertaking Co.

FALL FESTIVAL

Highland Ave. School Friday, Oct. 10, 1919, 7:30 P. M. Something doing all the time. Everyone can find amusement. Community Sing led by Miss Cherry. All parents and friends of the school are invited. Refreshments for sale.

The Kindergarten at Glenwood Park will reopen Monday, October 13th and any child over five years of age and up to six years is eligible for enrollment. For information call either Hilltop 2919, Glenwood Park; Main 158, Recreation Department.

The gymnasium at Glenwood Park will be open for winter work starting Monday afternoon and evening, October 13th. Mr. Carlos Matheny, who had charge of the men's and boy's activities during the winter of 1916-17, but who has spent the last two winters in France, will again have charge of the work this winter. Miss Kathleen Cherry will again be in charge of the women's and girl's activities. Mr. Matheny says that one of his best classes will probably be the men's class on Saturday evening, because it was so well attended two years ago and the men seem so enthusiastic again this year.

A Volley Ball and Indoor Base-Ball league will be organized in addition to the West Church Basket Ball League which plays all its games at Glenwood Park. So if you cannot play or do not care to play Basket Ball you can play either one of the other kinds of sport.

The game room will be supplied with numerous games where you can spend your dull hours and the boys and girls will have a place to go to spend their time between classes.

Mr. Raymond of the Recreation Department is also planning to have a library at the building, so we all hope that his plans shall be satisfactory.

For information about classes or time, get in touch with Miss Kathleen Cherry or Carlos Matheny.

The Girls Class of Hoge Memorial Sunday School enjoyed a weiner roast on Saturday night. The class met at Broad and Eureka and "hiked" to the ravine North of Hill Crest and spent the evening in singing and games. In the party were the Misses Lois Otten, Eleanor Otten, Mary Porter, Margaret Hall, Dorothy Buell and Anna Nowell.

Mrs. Porter, teacher of the class, assisted by Dr. and Mrs. Turner chaperoned the party.

The S. J. G. Society held their weekly meeting at the home of Evelyn Knox, 133 Eldon Ave. The election of officers took place. Those elected were: President, Florence Crawford; Vice President, Louise Barnhart; Secretary, Evelyn Knox; Treasurer, Sara Ryan and Pianist, Mary Porter.

Next Friday evening they will have a Fancy Dress Party at the home of Mary Porter, 77 South Warren. A splendid time is prophesied.

The machine recently purchased by P. G. Gantz, 167 N. Warren Ave. and which was stolen from off E. Broad St. on Friday, Sept. 19 has been recovered.

Hilltop English Ev. Lutheran Church,

HILL CREST BAPTIST CHURCH

10:30 "What Does God Want This Church To Do In the Next Year?"

This will be a great HOME COMING Service celebrating the Pastor's Anniversary. The present pastor has been here one year. God has richly blessed the church financially and spiritually. The membership has increased over 50 per cent. Practically at every service men and women are finding God and dedicating their lives to God's service. Sunday, will be a great day when the pastor outlines the work for the next year. Every member is urged to be out. There will be a roll-call. If you are sick and cannot come be sure and send a message. We want every member out next Sunday morning. Make up your mind now to be there. You will be a bigger man or woman when the pastor puts God's challenge to Hill Crest up to you. The Lord's Supper will be observed. Junior choir led by Miss Beelman at 2 o'clock. Junior B. Y. P. U. at 2:30.

7:30. Great Evangelistic sermon by the pastor. Subject, "The Children — The Jewels of the Home." Special music. Baptism will be administered.

Prayer meeting Wednesday 7:30. Subject, "The Model Church."

Come to this church once and you will realize why souls are saved. Watch for the announcement of the Special Sunday Evening Messages on "Sermons with a Punch."

Mr. W. E. Knox urges every member of the choir of Hill Crest to be out tomorrow (Friday) night to choir practice.

Wanted: Every member of Hill Crest B. Y. P. U. and every church member interested in the young folks to be present at 6:30 Sunday evening. Subject, "Our Relation to Others. Toward World Brotherhood." Myles Robinson, leader. This is a consecration meeting and every member is expected to be there. Are you a "shirker," "worker" or "jerker"?

Junior B. Y. P. U.—Dont neglect sending the juniors out to the church at 2:30 P. M. We will try to keep them just an hour.

This new society of the church is worth while and we need your support. Ella Withrow is leader, topic, "Magic and Magic."

Glenna Gilmore, Supt.

HIGHLAND AVE. FRIENDS

Morning services at 10:30. Pastor's topic: "The Great Commission to Evangelize the World."

Evening services at 7:30. Pastor's topic: "No Man Can serve Two Masters."

The men's meeting will be held next Tuesday evening at the parsonage, 59 N. Warren Ave.

The Ladies' Aid Society meets on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 8th.

Bake Sale.—The ladies of St. John's Lutheran Church will hold a Bake Sale at the Economy, Mr. Fred Raether, proprietor, next Saturday afternoon and evening.

ST. PAUL UNITED EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Rev. W. H. Harpster, a former pastor, will preach both morning and evening. Mrs. Lenore Harpster-Lutz will sing, "Open the Gates of the Temple," at the morning service.

Sunday, October 12th, has been set as Rally Day in Glenwood Sunday School. What are the Tri Mus going to do? Going to have a big attendance on that day. The first Rally Day in the history of the class saw 70 members present. As there are only 80 active members on the roll at the present time it is hoped that 70 of these will be out for Rally Day. If you are invited to come by one of a committee of 14 appointed to bring five members don't hesitate to answer the call. Your presence is needed each and every Sunday to bring the attendance up to at least 50 every week.

The Epworth League of Glenwood M. E. Church held their last outdoor gathering of the season Thursday evening, Sept. 25, 1919. About fifty of the League members gathered down in the hollow at the end of North Oakley Ave. and held a weiner roast. After spending about two hours around the huge camp fire the party adjourned to the old church where the remainder of the evening was spent. Songs and games were employed in passing away the rest of the time and when the party finally went home each was satisfied that an evening had not been lost.

Mr. H. C. Biddle the director of music at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian Church will lead the singing of the Chorus Choir consisting of twenty-five voices at the morning and evening services Sunday, October 5th. The singers have been selected by the Music Committee of the church and appointed by the Elders to sing for a definite period of time. They will be installed Sunday morning as members of the Choir by the pastor at the beginning of the morning service. Members of the Choir are expected to be as faithful to their service as singers as the Bible School teachers are to their appointed tasks. The Choir will lead in the inspiring congregational singing. Hymns of merit and worth will be a part of their program each Sabbath. Mrs. Kathryn Heid is the pianist. Mrs. Heid specialized in music at Cornell University during the summer and comes fresh to her winter task at the church.

The Hilltop Embroidery Club was entertained Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. P. G. Gantz, 167 N. Warren Ave.

Ring Three

By WILL T. AMES

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The telephone in the east room of the Hanford homestead rang zing-zing-zing. Miss Hanford, who was writing notes, glanced inquiringly at the instrument. The house was on a party line, to be sure; separate wires in that locality were not to be thought of; but Eleanor did not remember having heard a "ring three" call that year.

Zing-zing-zing! Zing-zing-zing! clamored the phone. Miss Hanford was wondering, as ten thousand other people have wondered under similar circumstances, whether she shouldn't really answer, on the chance of the operator having made a mistake, when a man burst into the room.

The man was a total stranger. Eleanor had never seen him before. He was a large man and young, and obviously stark, raving mad; for not only had he made his entrance to the house uninvited and without permission of anybody, but now, without the first word of apology and without even glancing at Miss Hanford, he rushed wildly to the telephone, grabbed the receiver and yelled in a lavishly redundant voice, "Hello!"

To Eleanor's ordinarily calm eyes his entire demeanor was that of a lunatic, perhaps a dangerous one. Without too much fuss she shifted her position so that the drawer with the pistol in it was just beside her right hand.

The intruder, who had flung himself into the nonetoo-strong windsor chair beside the telephone table and made it creak alarmingly in doing so, appeared still to be utterly unaware of Miss Hanford's presence.

"Hello! Hello!" he bawled, the look of wild anxiety on his countenance becoming still wilder as he appeared to wait, in desperate impatience, a reply that did not come.

Miss Hanford, who was never precipitate, had almost made up her mind to [illegible] seek the protection of old Noel, the gardener, or Hannah in the kitchen, when a great change came upon the man at the phone. The strained, eager look disappeared, a happy light sprang into his gray eyes, and he smiled broadly. Miss Hanford mentally classified the smile as a grin. "Like a Cheshire cat's" she indignantly concluded.

"Hello! Hello!" He Bawled.

"Sure, this is Les," the uninvited guest was saying into the phone. "Never so glad to hear a human voice in my life, sweetheart! Don't seem as if I could wait another minute to see you. What's that? Yes; didn't know but you'd be up on the two-eighteen. Yes; gets here at five-twenty. You bet; I'll be there. Good-by honey!"

When about half way through this monologue the man twisted about on his chair till he was facing the mistress of the Hanford establishment. Then, still grinning broadly and with the receiver still at his ear, he winked at Eleanor—winked at Miss Eleanor Hanford, if you please! The nerve of him!

Miss Hanford arose, to the full height of her sixty-three majestic inches. She no longer felt any fear of this madman; she was experiencing instead a mighty indignation. Much—anything might be forgiven in a mere lunatic; but for a vandal like this to violate your privacy, to seize upon your prop erty, to set at defiance all the conventions and safeguards of society for the purpose of making love over your phone—to some other woman—ugh!

Miss Hanford was all icy calmness as the trespasser, hanging up the receiver, uncoiled his tall length from the trembling windsor chair and stood erect. She gave him no time for a first word—there is no strategy in that.

"May I be privileged," enquired Eleanor, "to know to whom I have the honor of being hostess and why? It would be interesting to learn what there is about this house to give strangers the impression that it is a hotel or an office building. I do not think it has ever been regarded as a mere public utility before."

"I'm awfully sorry, Miss Hanford—you are Miss Hanford, are you not? But what's the use of that talk—I know you are. I am—honestly—awfully sorry to come tearing in that way but I'll tell you how it was.

"You see, I've had that little bungalow that sets back in the woods a quarter of a mile above here for a week. I've been away for a good while on that little business overseas and she's been in California, so we haven't seen each other. She got home to New York yesterday and wired that she'd be out here on this afternoon's train. There are two trains, you know, and I put in a telephone call for her at New York. After it was in, and I'd waited half an hour, I realized that if I waited any longer I couldn't meet the two-eighteen, and she might be on that. So I started. When the phone man hooked up the bungalow he told me that this big white house and that stone one down below were the only other subscribers on the line. My number was three.

"Just as I was passing here I heard the ring. Golly! What was I going to do? If I stopped to be polite they'd calmly say, 'Party's hung up; excuse it, please!' by the time I got the receiver down. I know it was rotten manners, but you've got to make allowances for a fellow, sometimes, now haven't you? My name's Grey—Lester Grey; I scribble foolish things that foolish people print sometimes. I hope you'll pardon my headlong intrusion."

Miss Eleanor Hanford with all her dignity and all her responsibility as a woman of position and not a little wealth was, as a matter of fact, just a mere girl. And this big, utterly natural, blundering boy with the marks of overseas still on him, was good to look upon. Somehow it wasn't the ingenuous impropriety—quite shocking in itself—of his receiving his sweetheart in a lonely bachelor bungalow that made Eleanor feel a new and different kind of indignation toward him. Away down in her secret heart she knew that it was because there was a sweetheart at all.

"Oh, very well," she laughed—for, of course, under this new circumstance, being a woman, she could no longer show indignation of any sort lest it be construed in a certain way—"if you put your defense on the ground of temporary aberration, there is nothing else to do but pardon you, I suppose."

Grey should have gone away then. Of course he should. A young man in his peculiar position would be doing very well, you'd think to get out of the situation without complicating it further. But the more he looked at this marchionesslike little person the more he didn't want to. The only thing he could think of to say, however, was

"May I not bring her to see you, Miss Hanford?"

If looks could kill, Lester Grey should have been at least a serious casualty. "Bring whom, pray, Mr. Grey?" Eleanor inquired chillily, with her eyebrows a quarter of an inch higher than normal

"My mother, of course."

The Cad

By VINCENT G. PERRY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Lakeview was just near enough to the city to be caught in the whirl of election excitement. From her little home on the hill Lenore could see the villagers stopping here and there to enter into controversy or exchange good wishes for a mutual choice. It was grand to be the fiancee of the future district attorney! The thought thrilled Lenore to her finger tips.

Away in the city she knew Charles Flogg-it, the man of her choice, was working as he had never worked before—working for the good of the community, for her and the ideals he held dear. If they all knew Charles as she knew him, he would not lose a vote; she felt sure of it. From the very day she had entered his office as stenographer she had learned to respect him, and now love was mingled with that respect.

He had insisted that she take a rest the last month of his campaign, as they had planned to be married soon after the election. Now she wished she had insisted upon staying by his side to see the fight to the finish.

A special Sunday supplement lay open at her side. There, in a three-column cut, was a picture of Charles with the governor's daughter by his side. "Candidate for District Attorneyship and His Most Enthusiastic Campaigner," it was headed.

Lenore knew that no one could be a more enthusiastic campaigner for Charles than she had been; but she was not jealous of the governor's daughter, she told herself. It was all in the campaign—part of a big game.

Up the hill she could see a messenger boy ending his way. With that strange instinct which messenger boys usually arouse, she scented at once that he was carrying a message for her. Sure enough he was—from Charles. She opened the note with fervent haste almost before she had signed for it. It had been dashed off in a hurry, she could tell by the shaky letters, but they were the same large open letters that distinguished Charles' penmanship.

Faster and Faster the Little Car Bounded Forward.

"Dear Lenore:

"I cannot let you come down to meet me tonight after the returns, for I have a confession to make: I love some one else, dear. She will be at my side tonight. The governor's daughter has promised to become my wife as soon as you will set me free from my promise. It is to your influence I owe my success today, Lenore, but I know you will not stand in my light, and will forgive me. Believe me to be always,

"Your friend,
"CHARLES."

Poor Lenore sank to a chair, hardly able to believe what she read. Surely she had read it wrong. But no! Even through the tears she could read the same hard, cruel words. Her head swam dizzily, everything went black and she felt herself slipping.

"Lenore, open your eyes; speak to me. It is Jimmy!"

It was some minutes later when these words brought Lenore to her senses. Before she opened her eyes she could feel a man's arm tight around her and her head resting upon his shoulder. Jimmy! After all those months!

It felt good to have some one there—some one who would understand. On Jimmy's shoulder she wept out the whole story. Jimmy took the letter and read it for himself.

"The cad!" he hissed. "The dirty, loathsome cad!"

"So she will be at his side tonight, will she?" Jimmy cried. "To see him proclaimed district attorney! Not by a jugful! It isn't too late to lose the election yet. He has reckoned without Jimmy Davis of the Star. This letter on a front page extra will cook his goose. 'Jilts woman who has made him what he is for governor's wealthy heiress.' A full sweep' heading like that will sway the crowd away from him as if a cyclone had struck them."

"Not that, Jimmy, not that!" Lenore had risen and put a restraining hand on his shoulder. "Charles must not lose the election. It is his right to choose his own wife. I will not complain."

"What? Do you think I would let him get away with this? He is turning down the girl he won from me, the sweetest little girl in the world, one I would die for."

"If you think that much of me, Jimmy, you will destroy that letter and forget that you have seen it."

Jimmy's lip curled with derision. "I won't do that. I will publish it in the Star. It will be on the press in half an hour. You can't see it that way now, dear, but in a few weeks' time you will thank me for exposing this cad."

"You must not publish it. I won't permit it!" Lenore faced him with flushed cheeks, determination shining from her eyes.

"You can't stop me." Jimmy was just as determined; battle was shining in his eyes. In vain did Lenore threaten and plead.

"He has been a cad! He deserves to be defeated, you will have to admit it!" Jimmy cried, as he saw himself triumphing.

A new light came suddenly into Lenore's eyes. "He will be defeated," she cried. "I will take you to the Star in my car, so you will be sure to get there in time for an extra. I will be ready in a minute."

It was just a minute later when Jimmy sat beside her in her roadster. "We will make speed," she cried, as she turned on the power. Faster and faster the little car bounded forward, whizzed past other cars and struck the open stretch by the lake. It had been speed before, but on the open stretch the car traveled at a maddening rate. Nearer and nearer the city came; faster and faster the car seemed to bound. "Almost there. Just one more mile; hang on!" Lenore gasped as they rounded another bend.

A big red car loomed up in front. The little car slackened speed as they passed. Lenore recognized the occupants—Charles and the governor's daughter.

"I wonder if they recognized us?" Jimmy gloated.

"Yes; didn't you see the surprised look on Charles' face?" A sob cut off Lenore's voice, but it was lost in the whirl of the wind as it struck the little roadster, again traveling at full speed.

"We are on the wrong road!" Jimmy suddenly realized it.

"Yes, and we are going to stay on the wrong road. Hang on! There is lots of speed left! A move from you and we will both be dashed against that fence!" From sheer fright Jimmy kept his seat. It was an hour later when the car came to a halt.

"Sixty miles from a telegraph office or a telephone, and the polls close in ten minutes." There was real triumph in Lenore's tone. "Now, Mr. Jimmy Davis of the Star do your worst!"

"The whole thing's a failure." Jimmy sank back on the cushions with a groan of disappointment. The ride had knocked all the courage out of him. "It was all a frameup to get Floggert, but you beat us."

"The letter—it wasn't from Charles?" Lenore faced him with blazing eyes.

"No; it was written by his former secretary; a good forgery."

"You cad!" All the indignation of a fiery little soul was contained in those words.

Unnoticed by the two in the roadster, a big roadster had halted by their side.

"What does it mean?" It was Charles. He had followed the runaway car and had heard the confession. Lenore was very brave when she told him the story, but she felt very weak and insignificant as she nestled in his arms on the homeward journey.

"Brave little champion," he whispered, as he drew her very, very close. "A man couldn't lose with a sweetheart like you."

NEWS HAPPENINGS

The Glenwood Park Gymnasium which was to have been opened Monday, Oct. 13th will not open until Wednesday, Oct. 15th, for the reason that the floor has not been given its second coat of paint and it is desired that everything be in readiness before the fall work starts. The Kindergarten will open on Monday, Oct. 13th as was first announced.

The Hilltop Union, W. C. T. U., has a membership of 105, with two honorary members. In our campaign we gained 15 new members, held nine business meetings and three called meetings, also two socials. No meeting in October and November. Our jubilee fund was $28.00, in other temperance work, $26.00. New subscribers for Ohio Messenger 16; visits to sick and shut-ins, 415; text card, 250; plants and sprays, 10; bouquets, 300; 1 wreath for our fallen heroes in late war, $7.00; garments 5; 1 basket fruit and jellies total $18 80; to Columbus Barracks, glasses jelly 390; quarts fruit, 20; bouquets mounting to $3.50; magazines 160. Sewing Red Cross days, 605.

Selection of officers: President, Ella Welch; Treasurer, May Swanson; Secretary, Mrs. James Hall.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Bright, 116 S. Wheatland Ave., Friday afternoon at 2 p. m. All invited.

Howard and Charles McDonnell, the two sons of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. McDonnell of 2114 Sullivant Ave., arrived home safely Friday morning, Oct. 3, at 2 a. m., after serving 15 months in France in the navy. Although the boys have had some thrilling experiences and have seen many foreign countries they would not care to go again. The oldest son Howard, and his youngest brother Francis are now spending a few days in Cleveland with friends, while Charles is visiting Dr. Knight and is family at Orient, Ohio. Mr. R. J. McDonnell, who is superintendent for the Van Contracting Co., of Pittsburg, Pa., also spent the week end at home to celebrate the home-coming of his sons. The boys will soon return ot their work as stationary engineers.

The Burgess Ave. U. B. Church gave a reception to their pastor, E. B. White and family on his being returned to them for the fourth year. A nice program was rendered. Piano solo, Miss Mary Gaver; recitation by Miss Ruth Dowler, musical recitation by Miss Helen Leibensperger and Miss Helen Southward; recitation by Mrs. Dowler; welcome address by Rev. Mrs. Anna Burgett, after which refreshments were served. The evening was enjoyed by all present with promises of loyalty by the people. We expect to have a prosperous year.

Mr. Walter King has opened a studio at his home 31 S. Ogden Ave.. Bell Phone Hilltop 3094, where he will teach Piano, Harmony, Counterpoint, and Theory. He is also teaching at the Capitol College of Oratory and Music, 1076 Neil Ave. Mr. King has spent the greater part of the summer in Philadelphia studying under Constantin Von Sternberg.

The men of St. John's Lutheran church were entertained at the parsonage, 59 N. Warren Ave., on last Tuesday evening.

The S. J. G. held their weekly meeting at the home of Truth Daniels, 126 N. Harris.

"The Belle of New York," a special picture will be at the Empire Hilltop theater tonight only.

We have a story in type from a Hilltop school girl which were unable to get in this week's paper, but will print next week

EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER FROM A HILLTOP YOUNG LADY

Seattle, Sept., 1919.

Last Wednesday we left Seattle for Port Angeles, near the Pacific Ocean at 12, landing at Port Angeles at 4, where we took an automobile bus and drove for two hours, 20 miles up into the Olympics until we came to East Beach on Lake Crescent, surrounded by the mountains. At East Beach we got on a launch and was driven about six or eight miles to the other side of the lake to Ovington's, where we stayed until Sunday morning, coming back to Seattle at 7:30 Sunday evening. Now I will tell you about Ovington's. They have a summer place on the lake, with lots of row boats where one can procure a boat at any time. They have a big lodge, as it is called, which consists of a living room, dining room, kitchen and a couple other smaller rooms. The living room and dining room are quite large, both overlooking the lake, and a large porch outside the living room. In the living room is a big fire-place, where there are fires every evening. In this room many amusements can be indulged in. A number of cottages surround this lodge, and in them are running water, electric lights and little stoves. They are all right on the lake, and are delightful. We slept in one of these cottages. Up further on the mountain are a tennis and croquet court, just everything to provide a good time on a vacation. Three immense meals are served every day and the cooking is the very best. Expenses prohibited us from remaining at this beautiful place longer.

We saw President Wilson and Mrs Wilson when they were here. He stood on chairs in one of our windows. We had a splendid view of them and Mr. and Mrs. Daniels. We afterwards went down and got on one of the battleships and had a "gob" show us around on the boat and explain things to us. It was interesting. The battleships are immense.

Grace (Gifford).

Corrine Griffith in "A Girl of Today," a Vitagraph feature and "Perils of Thunder Mountain" will be shown at the Empire Hilltop theater, Friday only.

Evening—Sermon by the pastor.

The Young Men's and Boy's Class of Hill Crest enjoyed a fine weiner roast on Tuesday evening in the Hollow. Those present were: Rev. A. E. Cowley, teacher and Miles Robinson, Gildon Mugrage, Harold Deroif, Edwin Scholes, Irwin Zinn, Cecil Early, Sol Wharton, William Cady, Welcome Spangler, Albert Thurston and Floyd Hill.

On last Friday evening at the home of Mary Porter, 77 South Warren, the S. J. G. Society had a Fancy Dress party. The evening was spent in games and dancing. All members were dressed in brilliant colored costumes of crepe paper. After dainty refreshments were served, Mr. Porter took us home in his car.

Remember this! "Rally Day, Glenwood M. E. church, Sunday, October 12th." Also Rally Day in Tri Mu class. The first Rally Day the class witnessed saw 70 of its members present. Why not have that many there next Sunday? Easy enough, providing the 14 appointed members bring 5 men each. Come and get in on two good announcements, also for your benefit.

The Tri Mu class now has before them two important tasks. The first published here and the other announced next Sunday. First: The Class will put over the job of selling at $1.00 each, 450 admission tickets to the Redpath Lyceum course that starts in Glenwood church Nov. 15th and for four months succeeding November. Five of the best numbers on this course one ever heard of for the amount of $1.00. Single admission will be 50c for adults and 25c for children under 12 years. Tri Mu's only will sell tickets so it is a proposition that must go thru with every Tri Mu's help. Come next Sunday and get your share of tickets. Bring a member with you. A big feed if this goes "over the top."

R. H.

The Ladies' Bible Class of Hoge Memorial church met for their regular business and social meeting at the home of Mrs. Guy Ault, 134 S. Hague Ave., Monday evening, Oct. 6. A number of plans for the improvement of the class were discussed. It was decided to collect the old papers and magazines, Wednesday, Oct. 15. Those interested please take notice and have papers sorted, tied and out in front of house on that day. It was also decided to have a scouting party before the next business meeting which will be Nov. 3, at the home of Mrs. Burnside, 39 N. Ogden Ave. After the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed during which time dainty refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by her son and daughter.

Bake sale at Carlile & Kerr's October 11th. Cheerful Workers of Hilltop Church of Christ.

MOTORISTS

Get 75 Per Cent More Mileage from Your Tires

It is a well known fact that the tire tread represents but 25 per cent of the tire mileage. To throw away the casing means to LOSE 75 per cent of the MILEAGE YOU PAY FOR AND DON'T GET.

MANY MAKESHIFTS

Of course there are many makeshifts repairs. NONE of them, however, offered enough insurance of EXTRA mileage to warrant the repair expense.

Motorists, therefore, had no alternative other than to run on the carcass after the tread was worn off, in VAIN effort to get as much mileage from the tire as possible.

The RESULT, of course, was that their tires quickly blew out.

THE FINAL TYPE

The WY-MAR REMILEAGE METHOD has ended all this, and INSURES the 100 per cent value from their tires.

The WY-MAR METHOD consist of a layer of tough buoyant rubber, several layers of new fabric, breaker strip and a heavy outer tread which is put on by the DRY VULCANIZING method. This is the SAME method that all factories use in the MANUFACTURING of tires.

ACT NOW

DON'T WAIT until the casing is so badly worn as to make re-miling impossible. As soon as the trend is worn off, take it to or call the

A letter bearing what is believed to be the only authentic signature of King Ferdinand of Spain—co-patron with Queen Isabella of the expedition of Columbus to the new world—that is extant in this country, forms one of the most important additions to the collections of the Historical society of New Mexico. The letter is written to his cousin, the duke of Infantazzo.

The document, which is dated Dec. 28, 1512, is remarkably well preserved. It deals with the arrangements for the approaching marriage of the king's niece and the duke's son.

The letter concludes:

"Everything is already prepared for the wedding, including the money which is to be given the said court as agreed."

The signature affixed is Ferdinand's famous "Yo, El Rey (I, the King)."

Temperament and Ted

By VINCENT G. PERRY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Ted was a wonder. Every man, woman and child on the Merlight "lot," as the big film studio was called, admitted it; every film fan in America proclaimed it from the "house-tops." It wasn't just Ned's acting that was the cause of all the wonderment at the Merlight—it was Ted's defiance of temperament.

Why, actors and actresses who were not half so famous as Ted Leonard were allowed to have their days and even weeks of temperament "flings," but Ted worked right through without one in two years, and he worked twice as strenuously as any of the other actors, at that.

Ted wasn't one of the "bold men" type of film actors, either—he was a typical matinee idol in everything but disposition and nerve control.

Director Bob Lasbrook was the only one who didn't comment much on Ted's wonderful fortitude. Lasbrook had been in the film business since its infancy and before that he had had a long stage experience. "He is going to come down with a crash some of these days," Lasbrook murmured to himself one day. "I never saw the man with the true dramatic spirit who didn't have the temperament bug, too, and Ted sure has the dramatic spirit and then some. When the crash does come, look out!"

The crash did come. It was all because of the new leading lady. From the day of his first early success Ted had been starred alone, but now for some unexplained reason the directors of the company decided upon a co-star for him—a famous stage actress who was to make her film debut.

Ted knew what most of the stage actresses who sought the movies were like. He had seen them come up one by one and go down in formation of fours and fives. They didn't take. The movies were meant for young actresses, not for made-up has-beens. The camera brought out the lines and crowsfeet the footlights and grease paint hid! No stage actress was going to be exploited on his fame, no siree!

"I Hope Her Face Breaks the Camera!"

Bob Lasbrook was not surprised. The calm of the old director had more to do with Ted's final breaking up of temper than anything else. After Ted had waxed hot, shaken his fist and resorted to mild profanity old Bob just shook his head. Ted left that night for parts unknown. "To blazes with my contract," Ted had flung back at the business manager of the company as he sailed through the office, head held high. "Marie Sivelle can star alone. I hope her face breaks the camera!" He closed the door without noticing that the business manager had been talking to someone very small and sweet, someone who had risen and was blushing profusely.

The temperamental crash, as old Bob would have called it, had a firm grip on Ted for three days. At the end of the third day he began to think reasonably. It all came from not taking a vacation for so long, he told himself. The country was the place for him—the country he had left so few years before. How changed it would be now.

But the country was not much changed, he found. There was a feeling of gratification in bringing his roadster to a halt in front of the little schoolhouse where he had learned his A B C's. That sentiment was not the one that had brought him there first, though. The pleasant memory of the little teacher who had taught there the last year he had been in the village had never really left him, but now it had come back with great force. He had thought then that their friendship would have developed to something more than memories, but for some unexplained reason it hadn't. It was all his fault, the fault of his success, he told himself reproachfully. Would she remember? Would she look the same?

Wonder of wonders, she had not changed a bit. The school door had opened and she was coming down the path to the road. Ted was out of the car and running down the path to meet her. Did she remember? The glad little cry of recognition and the eyes filled with tears of joy said more than all the words in the world. He almost had her in his arms when he remembered.

It was a wonderful week that followed. Just the sort of week that was needed to restore Ted's nerves. With the return of all his practical judgment, Ted began to analyze his feelings. He loved this little teacher, this Nora Givens. She was the sweetest little woman in the world and he was going to make her his wife, he told himself.

Just as he had made firm this resolve a bomb was hurled onto his plans.

"I felt sure that some day you would come back—a successful business man. I knew you would lose all those foolish old ideas about the stage and art and such like," Nora told him as they drove along a particularly inviting stretch of country road.

"Would it make any difference if I still had those ideas—couldn't you love me?" he asked her as he nervously reached out for her hand.

"It wouldn't be practical to love a man with unsettled ideas, like your old ones," she answered, withdrawing her hand from reach.

"I understand," Ted mumbled. That settled it in his mind. Nora shared the narrow thoughts of many other country people—stage and movie folk were all bad in her estimation—she could not realize that some of the finest men and women in the world were engaged in the theatrical profession.

What did it matter after that? There was only one place where Ted belonged and he went back to it—back to the Merlight studio. Let them bring on their co-stars, let them exploit has-beens under his fame. What did it matter? What did fame or success mean when the woman he loved could never be his?

Bob Leonard could not understand this morbid change in Ted. Temperamental attacks did not usually leave after-effects like that. He wondered, too, when Ted raised no further objections to Marie Sivelle. Perhaps when he met that young lady a change would come over him.

A change? Well, perhaps! The moment Ted looked up languidly to acknowledge the introduction to the actress who was to share honors with him in the forthcoming production, the change was effected.

"Nora!" he gasped, "what are you doing here?"

Certainly it was Nora. She was smiling out an explanation. "I am Marie Sivelle. I became famous on the stage because that was my ambition—and I came here to co-star with you because I knew who you were and I wanted to be near you. I was in the manager's office when you expressed the wish that my face would damage the camera. I knew you didn't know. I guessed where you would go. My sister is the teacher at that school now. That's how I arranged to substitute there for a week. I made up my mind months ago, when you first became famous, that I would be your leading lady. Please Teddy won't you let me?" There was real pleading in her request.

"Let you? Why, dear heart, you must be my leading lady for life. I want you always," he cried joyfully, as he gathered her up in his arms.

The Light in the Darkness

By A. W. PEACH

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Doris Lane could gather little from the kind eyes of the physician who removed the bandages, and her hopes rose. From the moment of the explosion in the chemical laboratory in which she had been employed, during the long days of suffering in the hospital, she did not dare to ask if she would be left with a badly scarred face. The question seemed, for the time being, vain and foolish in her situation, but now that life was assured, she began to wonder if for all her days she was to meet the pitying, questioning look that the unmaimed give the maimed.

"Doctor, how do I look?" she asked, smiling as bravely as she could.

The gray-headed surgeon smiled in answer, and said in his grave, kind way: "Well, little girl, I think you have a pair of the finest brown eyes I have ever seen, and your hair—"

"But I didn't mean that," she said hurriedly.

"I know, but your question put me in the old-enough-to-ask class; so I wanted to tell you." He looked at her gently. "There is just one bad scar, the others will fade, I am sure. You might bring Miss Lane a mirror," he said to the waiting nurse.

She was weak with suffering, and her mind was tortured with questions of the future, for her training had been limited and the simple matter of a livelihood was no small item now. So when she saw in the truthful glass the livid scar that raced its ugly line across her forehead, and the blotches below where the flying acid had touched, she moaned in anguish.

"Hello, By-way!"

The pleasant voice cut through her darkness, and she opened her tear-filled eyes to see standing above her the attending physician, known to her as "Doctor Walter." During the month that her eyes had been bandaged, he had been to her merely a pleasant voice and gentle fingers. Now she saw he was tall, tanned as if from much time spent out of doors, gray-eyed and dark-haired. His mild fun in calling her "By-way" instead of "Lane" had pleased her in her childish weakness; now, however, she turned to the pillow.

Now She Saw He Was Tall.

His voice was gentle, for he seemed to understand. "Look here, you must not feel that way—"

"No, but if you—were—to—go through life—this way—pitied—by everybody," she returned brokenly. "Besides, I— She paused. "Besides what?" he urged in the same gentle fashion.

She shook her head and waved him aside. The sight of his strong, pleasant manhood, the sound of his voice, for some reason or other, made her misery all the more bitter—just why she did not know.

She did not guess the purpose in the nurse's friendly questioning that evening, but because there was no one in the world to whom she could confide some of her anxiety, she told the nurse what she refused to tell Doctor Walter. And the nurse did not tell her of that purpose, nor offer any suggestion as to how the mutilated girl might solve the problem she was facing.

The next morning, Doctor Walter stopped again. "Miss Lane, I have come to make you a formal offer of a position as my secretary; I want you to look after my office; are you willing?"

She lifted her scarred face. "So that was why the nurse asked me so many questions!" She turned away. "Even you pity me."

"No, I am sincere. I really need some one, and you have had experience with drugs," he said patiently.

The quiet reproof in his voice was enough. "Forgive me, I hardly know what I am saying. Yes, if I can serve you, I want to."

"All right," he said, cheerfully. "We'll consider the matter settled."

So it came about that after a week she found herself in charge of the doctor's pleasant office.

From the day she had seen her blue-scarred face she had not looked into a mirror. She combed her hair by arranging a small mirror in such a way that her face was not revealed. The pitying glances of the patients who came in was all the mirror she needed. Keener, too, was Walter's gentleness, and the way his eyes would rest upon her in moments when she guessed he did not realize that she knew he was looking at her. Everything seemed to combine to make life more and more dismal as she looked down the slope of the years.

Worst of all, and unguessed, she found herself being drawn more and more to the tall, handsome physician. His personality seemed to the weakened and worried girl a shelter within which there was kindliness and peace.

The full force of the situation did not strike her until one momentous day, when a girl came into the office, lovely with the loveliness that is always suggestive of June time and roses. She was welcomed with manifest pleasure by Walter, and the stricken girl in her simple gray and white dress felt the world sink about her.

"I must be brave," she said to herself. I must. He just pities me, and I must not trouble him."

Two weeks went by. The Junetide girl came and went with Walter; and his interest in her presence was evident.

Then came the day that bore with it a change of destiny.

The Junetide girl, her face flushed with joy, hurried from the office, and Walter, following with as much pleasure shining on his, went with her.

Doris watched them go, and guessing what had taken place between them, felt the room about her grow gray as with dusk. From her world the last sunshine went. Through the darkness came a suggestion. She trembled. To go through life alone—an object of pity when she was so hungry for love, for beauty and happiness and youth—it was too much.

The afternoon waned. The din of the great city ebbed into the low monotone suggestive of tides that have spent their force, drawing outward to the sea. She sat in silence, then quietly she went to the cabinet in which he kept the drugs with which he stocked his case. She knew every compartment. From a bottle she shook out with a steady hand three tablets—morphine—enough to send her into the long and restful sleep which would carry her beyond suffering, beyond pity, beyond heartache.

Taking them, and shivering only slightly in the act, she turned to the couch and lay down. "I am sorry, dear, for the trouble and bother I shall cause you, but I am weary beyond weariness."

* * * * * * *

Out of the darkness came a voice, insistent, firm and thrilling, with a meaning that broke into her consciousness. She opened her eyes, feeling strangely rested and at peace.

The lights were soft and shining in the office. Kneeling beside her, his face strained with anxious question, was Walter.

"Doris, Doris, what have you been trying to do?" The grief in his voice woke her to full consciousness. Sanity came. With a low cry she sprang up, to find herself caught in his arms and held tight.

"Don't pity me!" she begged breathlessly.

His voice indicated that he had found himself. "I don't pity you." He drew her closer to him. "I love you! How blind you have been! Haven't you seen?"

"Seen? You love me—me?" she questioned in a whisper.

"Listen, you stay in my arms until I am through. I do love you—have from the time I saw you in the ward, but you have given me no sign—wrapped in your own thought; is that it?"

"But look at me!"

His mellow laugh relieved the tension. "So that is it! Foolish girl, I am not one of those who love a face; I love the spirit behind those brown eyes of yours—a troubled spirit now. Let me bring it peace. May I? Just say 'Yes!'"

She clung to him. Speech was beyond her for the moment. After a struggle she whispered: "And I have loved you from the moment you looked at me and spoke to me, but I did not dream—"

"The dream begins now, my dear, to come true." His lips brushed her warm and quivering ones. "Let's close the office. Then we'll go for a long spin under the stars. We—"

She remembered. Horror filled her eyes. "But I took morphine! Why did—"

"No," he said gently; "I was worried about you, and was fearful myself. I had filled that bottle with harmless sugar pills. Little girl, I have watched you and kept ward over you. I did not intend to lose you—waiting in hopes that you would take some interest in me."

The music in her heart died at the shock of her recollection. At his last words it started up softly the music that links eternity to eternity.

"You love me—even my hideous face!" she said again, as if the news were too good to be true.

He turned in his authoritative physician's way, and going to the corridor, returned with a mirror. "You sensitive soul, you ought to know those scars have faded out!"

She took the mirror, wondering, a last wonder surging in her heart. All those long weeks she had kept her vow never to look upon her marred face. She took the mirror, his eyes tender upon her. One glance was enough. The blue, vivid scars were gone. Memories of them would remain, but his love would heal even them with the balm that is the surest healing of all woes of earth—the balm of a great love.

HOW BUTTERFLIES CROSS SEA

Delicate Creatures Suffer During Voyage, but Millions of Them Make Passage in Safety.

The most wonderful of ocean flyers are the butterflies which cross the ocean in the spring.

Naturalists tell us that one of the most amazing sights in the world is to see millions of these delicate creatures, like a cloud of tiny pieces of paper, flying across the channel from the continent to English shores, when the wind is favorable.

Their stamina and endurance are extraordinary, and although some fall exhausted into the sea, the bulk make a successful crossing. The butterfly army of invasion generally includes many beautiful specimens, and as an illustration of their powers of endurance it might be mentioned many butterflies have descended to rest on vessels 200 miles at sea.

The farthest authenticated distance at which a moth has been captured at sea was recorded by a well-known scientist eight years ago, who took specimens of a certain large moth 1,200 miles from the nearest possible land. —London Tit-Bits.

Girl's Father Bit.

"Run quick!" cried the girl to her clandestine lover. "Papa is unchaining the big bulldog he bought yesterday! The brute will tear you to bits!"

"No, he won't," said the lover calmly. "That dog is an old pet of mine. I raised him, and I hated to part with him; but I gave him to the dealer last week, with instructions to sell him to your father. Well, Bill, old chap! Glad to see me, ain't you? There, now—charge! What were you saying, darling?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Seems a Little Late.

Yeast—Some men are always behind the times.

Crimsonbeak—I don't follow you.

"Why, here's an Arkansas man who just has invented a corkscrew mounted at one end of a handle, from the other end of which project beaded wires to extract corks that have been pushed into bottles."

MADE IT PERCENTAGE JOB

Old Mose Was Working Along New Lines Which Were Entirely Satisfactory to Him.

The old-time negro who used to take off his hat and say "massa," is learning modern methods. In the old days, Mose used to do chores and if he received a dollar or a sack of potatoes, he was tickled to death.

Nowadays it's different. Mose works on schedule. The other day Mrs. Brown hired him to clean off a few pieces of furniture. It was a job that would have taken a white man an hour or so, but Mose spent three days at it, coming and going as he pleased. Finally he declared the job done, and presented a bill for $3.50.

"Why Mose," cried Mrs. Brown. "Isn't this a little high? The job really wasn't worth even a dollar."

"No, ma'am," said Mose. "It ain't high. Ise working on percentage now, like a white man."

"Percentage? What do you mean?"

"Well, ma'am, I figures this way: Yoah library's worth about $350. Ise charged only one percentage for handling it. In the newspapers it says white men handles furniture for 5 and 10 per cent, so I reckon Ise dirt cheap."

NEWS HAPPENINGS

That Have Taken Place on the Hilltop During the Past Week

A very pleasing event of Monday, Oct. 13th, was an indoor picnic of the Crego S. S. Class of Glenwood church, at the delightful country home of Mr. J. J. Eakin and wife, where they were celebrating their 55th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Eakin, the beloved teacher of the class, has been confined to her home many months suffering from a serious injury received in an auto accident, but nevertheless was the happiest of the happy crowd. Her cheery optimistic spirit, her real Christian faith, makes even her shut-in life a blessing to all about her.

There were 43 present, including their pastor, Dr. Wykoff, Miss Egy, the deaconness, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton, daughter and son-in-law, three sisters of Mrs. Eakin, namely, Mrs. Elizabeth Eakin of Mercer, Pa.; Mrs. Martha Watts and Mrs. Lottie Cathers of Columbus, a grandson, a nephew, several neices and some nearby neighbors. As a little love token the class presented the couple with a book, a record by Evan Williams, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." Others brought gifts. All brought heartfelt congratulations and good wishes. The victrola furnished sweet music and many of the old-time Gospel songs were sung, recalling sweet memories that touched hearts and brought smiles and tears.

Rev. Wykoff led in a prayer consecration and thanksgiving and gave a very helpful and encouraging talk.

Full justice was done to the bountiful feast of "good eats," the last course of which was cream with two generous slices of the bride's cake.

The cake had been baked by Mrs. Hughes decorated with 55 white candles and was delicious, as was also the one baked by Mrs. Gould. The bride and groom and relatives ate dinner on a drop-leaf table purchased 55 years ago.

Talk about your good time at a weiner roast in the open, but an indoor picnic with fried chicken and bride's cake appeals to me.

The weiner roast given by Westgate Lodge last Friday evening was indeed a gala affair. Many hundreds attended, although the weather was threatening rain. There is lots of "prospecting" among the crowd as to where the wood went to. There was buns, coffee and weiners enough to feed an army, but they all got away just the same. Those Westgate feed stewards, or rather mess sargeants, Web and Mack, are some feeders. Harry's pick-up chorus could be heard for miles. Everybody went home happy and full of glee and so on. Worshipful Master Porter is a great Master when he announces there is something on we all know that it's worth while.

James A. Moore of 2385½ W. Broad St., died at 3:40 p. m., Oct. 10, aged eighty-two years, ten months and twenty-three days. Mr. and Mrs. Moore came from Missouri to Linden Heights nine years ago. They have resided at the present address two and one-half years. Mr. Moore was stricken with apoplexy on October 1st, his left side being paralyzed. On Tuesday, the 7th, he received a second stroke, from which he could not rally. He is survived by his widow here and five children and fourteen grandchildren, all of them being residents of Missouri. One son arrived Wednesday evening before his death. Funeral services were held at the house Saturday at 3 p. m. and the beautiful ritual by a number of the comrades of Wells G. A. R. Post, of which Mr. Moore was a member, was followed. The body was removed to the station and, accompanied by his son, was taken to his old home at St. Clair, Mo. Mrs. Moore, being in poor health, was not able to accompany them on the long journey.

Mrs. Moore extends thanks to all the kind friends who were so faithful in their help and sympathy during her trouble, and especially to the members of Wells Post G. A. R., who showed their comradeship and kindness in a way that can never be forgotten. And we hope that when the last roll-call comes to these brave comrades that they, too, may have the same kind care and help that they so willingly gave to another.

Mr. Moore was a member of the Baptist church for the past fifty years and was a conscientious Christian man. Rev. Colburn of Linden Heights Baptist Church conducted the funeral services.

The Tri Mu Class had set for a mark in attendance Rally Day seventy members present. A decrease from that number and forty-six men were present. That is an increase of about twenty over other Sundays. Why not have forty-six every Sunday? The class have as their two big jobs before them these things to put over. First, to sell, starting Oct. 19, $450.00 worth of tickets to the Redpath Lyceum Course to be held in the church starting Nov. 15, and four months succeeding November. One course for 50 cents or five courses for $1.00. One each month for five months. What is cheaper? Only Tri Mus sell tickets and will be on sale next Sunday. Get your share.

The Tri Mus' second job is this: A soldiers' memorial in the form of a 100-page magazine will be published in the near future. In this publication you will find a photograph of each soldier of Glenwood church, army stories and jokes, other stories of the church and class, advertising by Hilltop Business Men, snapshots of army life and Tri Mu athletics. Remember you get all of this and more not mentioned for the sum of $1.00. Any soldier who hasn't turned in his photo for this paper do so by Sunday, as many more are needed to complete the honor roll. Give them to some Tri Mu by Sunday sure.

The Eldest Camper

By CONSTANCE GRAY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When the news reached Camp Segatchie that a junior naval reserve station was to be located near by Muriel Brown, the head camp counselor, sighed audibly and remarked to her coworkers: "We'll earn our keep this year, girls. What chance have sports and crafts with a couple of hundred or more uniformed youths not two miles away? Every girl will have one eye on the tennis ball and the other wandering into the dim distance after a potential speck of white!"

Bertha, Muriel's eldest sister and the business manager of Sagatchie Camp for Girls, paused in her task of arranging simple furniture in an A tent. "Cheer up, sis; there will, perforce, have to be grown-up uniforms in charge. Perhaps they will give some dances. Those naval men dance like dreams, too."

"M-m-m; maybe so. But I prefer dreams in my own little hammock, thank lyou, after a strenuous day's work in the open," returned Muriel.

There were 30 girls at the camp that year, ranging from fifteen to eighteen years old. Clad exactly alike in khaki bloomer suits with black sailor ties, the little company set out one morning for the daily hike. Muriel was walking ahead with Miss Holden, an assistant counselor, when, without warning, there appeared over a rise of ground a squad of white-clad sailor lads commanded by a young officer, immaculate in snowy duck.

Miss Muriel heard the excited exclamations of her charges, but ignored them and led them into an opportune woods road. Now the head counselor did not look a day older than some of her campers. However, she was twenty-five. Miss Holden, though only a year older, looked every bit of it. Therefore it was not surprising that the dapper young officer, halting his detachment and hurrying ahead, should address the latter. With lifted cap, disclosing brown curls closely barbered, he inquired if the shore road came out on the highway. Then he listened attentively to Miss Holden's reply—and looked at Muriel.

Aikens Was Sitting on a Rock.

At a crisp order from their commander the sailor lads continued down the road. The campers vanished into their own woods. The incident was closed.

Lily Dart, a romantic young woman of seventeen, elaborated upon the meeting to Bertha. "And the officer was a peach. He fairly ate up Miss Muriel with his eyes."

Muriel looked up from where she was assisting one of the "Cleveland twins" to pick up a stitch gone wrong. "Lucky he used his eyes instead of those white teeth, Lil," she said, "but I don't admire fatal beauty in a man. So don't waste your time building up a romance on that look."

It was when the campers were out in the canoes the next day that a big square envelope arrived. There was to be a hop on the following Saturday night at the reserve station. Every one at Camp Segatchie was invited. Great was the rejoicing among the girls when they returned and heard the news. Immediately "what to wear" became the principal topic of conversation. Lily Dart, against the rules of the camp, had brought a very flossy evening gown. Every one was envious. That matter, however, was quickly settled by Muriel. "Now, girls," said that decided young lady, "the costume of the evening will be a white skirt, white middy, white shoes and stockings; then your black sailor ties. We are campers, not a society outfit. I shall wear the same."

"I'll bet that good-looking officer takes you for one of us," gushed the irrepressible Lily. "Really, Miss Muriel, you don't look a day older."

As it happened, the romantic prophecy came true. Ensign Richard Aikens simply took it for granted that Muriel was one of the campers. She let him labor under that delusion. When he inquired her home port she gave Akron, Ohio, which, luckily, she knew—for so did Ensign Aikens. He asked if callers were allowed at the camp. Muriel told him, very decidedly, they were not. But when the young officer proposed that they meet on boulder path at two the following afternoon she agreed to try.

Muriel walked rather slowly and thoughtfully down the path at the appointed hour. Quite against her will she liked the handsome young officer. The flush which so often flooded his tanned cheeks seemed to absolve him from the vanity of the merely handsome man.

It had been great fun to "keep him on a string." Then, no woman, however young, really enjoys confessing to more years than appear to be hers. But the head counselor had decided, by the time she drew close to the place designated for the meeting, that she would do that very thing.

Aikens was sitting on a rock when Muriel came into sight. He arose and greeted her. "Miss Brown, I was wrong to ask you to meet me here clandestinely, but there is something I want to tell you where no one can overhear."

"Why, this is interesting," said Muriel; "you have something to tell me and I have a confession to make to you. Let's sit down. You talk first."

Ensign Aiken, after a moment's hesitation, proceeded. "You know Jack Hart in Akron?"

"I certainly do."

"Well, there is where I saw your picture."

The girl seemed about to speak, but Aikens kept on: "It was in Jack's room. One of a row across the mantel, third from the left. He had a ouija board there that afternoon trying to get some dope on one of the championship ball games. Jack's a queer duck"—Aikens smiled—"wanted me to try it. So I asked it the usual stock question, 'Whom would I marry?' and—I swear I hadn't even glanced at the photographs on the shelf—the thing spelled out 'Your girl from left on the mantel.' Then, of course, I quizzed Jack to find out something about the girl in the picture, for it looked mighty good to me. But he wouldn't give me a hint who she was. Said it would be a test of the powers of the board, and I was to let him know if I ever met her. I've been looking for a year. And now when I've found you I'm not even allowed to call!"

Muriel had listened with mixed emotions. "I have no faith whatever in ouija boards, Mr. Aikens," she said, "but you may call. You see, you labored under a mistake and I—well, I just let you. I am not one of the camp girls, but the head counselor. My sister and myself run the camp. We don't take girls over twenty—and I'm years and years more than that. I'm twenty-five."

"And I'm twenty-six. Now, don't tell me I don't look it, for that's the cross of my life," returned the ensign.

Muriel arose and moved away. "I must go back to my charges."

"But when may I call?" queried Ensign Richard Aikens, as the girl started up the path.

Muriel did not answer till she came to a large boulder, around which she must pass.

"Ask the ouija board," she called out—and ran laughing up the path, campward.

Get 75 Per Cent More Mileage from Your Tires

It is a well known fact that the tire tread represents but 25 per cent of the tire mileage. To throw away the casing means to LOSE 75 per cent of the MILEAGE YOU PAY FOR AND DON'T GET.

MANY MAKESHIFTS

Of course there are many makeshifts repairs. NONE of them, however, offered enough insurance of EXTRA mileage to warrant the repair expense.

Motorists, therefore, had no alternative other than to run on the carcass after the tread was worn off, in VAIN effort to get as much mileage from the tire as possible.

The RESULT, of course, was that their tires quickly blew out.

THE FINAL TYPE

The WY-MAR REMILEAGE METHOD has ended all this, and INSURES the 100 per cent value from their tires.

The WY-MAR METHOD consist of a layer of tough buoyant rubber, several layers of new fabric, breaker strip and a heavy outer tread which is put on by the DRY VULCANIZING method. This is the SAME method that all factories use in the MANUFACTURING of tires.

ACT NOW

DON'T WAIT until the casing is so badly worn as to make re-miling impossible. As soon as the trend is worn off, take it to or call the

MAJOR'S RELIEF CAME FIRST

Willing to Admit Sam Had a Grievance, but He Had Served the Longer Term.

A major in a stevedore regiment employed one of his men to take care of his horses and do little chores around the yard. One day Sam came into the major's office and he was some agitated man. After he had saluted, he exclaimed:

"Major, I want to be relieved from dis hyar job right now!"

The major asked him why he didn't want the job any more.

"Major, that job is good enuff, but I just can't seem to get along with yo' all's wife. Seems every time I goes down to that thar house she puts me to doin' all kinds of chambermaid's work, and a-naggin' at me all a ther time, too."

Then it was the major's turn. "Sam, I've been living with that woman for thirty-odd years now, and if there is goign to be anyone relieved, it's going to be me."—Judge.

Not a Square Deal.

My little cousin, Bobby, five, came crying to his mother:

"I don't like the little boy next door; he hit me."

"Well," said his mother, "I wouldn't cry. Why didn't you hit him back?"

Bobby thought for a moment, then said:

"I did," and went away still sobbing. In a few minutes he was back.

"But, mother—"

"Yes, Bobby?"

"When he hit me, he hit me, and when I hit him, I missed him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DEAREST JERRY

A Story, Written by a Hilltop School Girl.

It was a dark, gloomy afternoon in March in a hotel lobby of New York, sat a young lady, probably twenty years of age, in front of a desk writing for dear life. He hair was brown and tiny ringlets peeped from beneath her hat. Her dark brown eyes were so clear that they seemed deep as wells. This is what she wrote:

Dearest Jerry:

I am so disgusted with life that I am soon going to commit suicide, but I don't know whether to cut my throat, drown myself or turn on the gas. Those VanSkyler kids are the limit, but I like them both. The Mrs. is worse than the kids. Oh, Jerry, I can hardly keep the tears back, I don't know anyone so I must tell you. I already feel better, even you are only a ghost and cannot help me. Your loving.

Vivian.

While Vivian was writing this telltale letter, a young man entered the lobby, seated himself very comfortably and prepared to read the Sport edition. Everything was quiet. A storm had been raging that afternoon and now a loud clap of thunder broke the silence of the room. Vivian gave vent to a scream of "Ahoo," as she jumped up, knocked her chair over and ran to the window.

The young man whose name was Jerry Wood, was very much surprised to find anyone else in the room for he thought himself alone At the next flash of lightning, Mr. Wood was alarmed, so he approached Vivian very cautiously and thought he would give her a piece of friendly warning that it was dangerous to stand by the window during a storm. "Oh, thank you sir," she laughingly answered him, her dark eyes dancing, "but don't you see I love rain and above all a storm."

Mr. Wood, very much astonished at the conduct of this young lady, and above all when she rushed from the room without an umbrella or rain coat.

After she had left the room with such a rush he gave a low whistle, looked around and spied a package which she had left, he went over to the desk to pick it up. Naturally his eyes traveled to where she had been writing and in a bold hand "Dearest Jerry" met his gaze. Like any other young man Mr. Wood picked up the letter and read it.

"Well it's luck I found where she lives," this was said to himself, "guess I'll go over tomorrow night."

It was Thursday evening about 8 o'clock, Mr. Wood made his appearance at the VanSkyler home. When the maid anounced him to Mrs. VanSkyler, a pleased expression crossed her homely face, for she admired him very Much. "Mr. Wood, I am delighted to see you this evening." "Thank you Mrs. VanSkyler but I have come on business and wish your help." "On business! Oh, Mr. Wood, it's the first time any one ever consulted me about anything."

"Is Miss Vivian here this evening?" "Yes, she always takes care of the children in the evening. Do you wish to see her?"

"If you please." At this she took upon herself the dignity she always addressed her servants, and ascended the stairs to the playroom. "Vivian, Mr. Wood would like to see you in the front parlor." The front parlor was sort of heaven for the servants of this house, so when Vivian entered this room she felt very much out of place and surprised to find anyone.

"Miss Vivian, I brought back the package you left at the hotel, Tuesday evening."

"Oh, thank you sir, but how did you know where I lived?"

"By a letter," here Jerry laughed.

"A letter?" "Yes, a letter." "Thank you sir for bringing the package here. It was a doll for Janet." She reached for the package which she did not receive. "Miss Vivian, may I take you to the opera to-morrow night?" "No, no, no." "Why?" "Why because Janet may have the croup." "Well, here," he handed her the package and bid her good night.

It was the next night and this romance was not doomed to be like other books, there was no vampire, nor another girl, or even a quarrel which many stories have. Jerry came early the next night, early to avoid the rush, as he termed it, and as it happened Janet had the croup which provided Vivian a chance to refuse to go to the opera, much to the delight of Jerry for in the dark he could not see her deep eyes sparkle. A week of such proceeding followed, when one night much to Vivian's surprise Jerry suddenly asked: "Vivian could I be your ghost?" At that he pulled out a little worn letter, that he had read so much. "Why of course," she laughingly replied. "Oh you dear," before she knew what she was doing he was holding her in his arms. "Oh Vivian, say that you will never have to write another letter to a ghost, only say you love me." This was unexpected by Vivian, but she did love him and a weak "Yes dearest Jerry," was heard.

HIS WILL

Accept His will entirely, and never suppose that you could serve him better in any other way. You can never serve him well, save in the way he chooses. Supposing that you were never to be set free from such trials, what would you do? You would say to God, "I am thine. If my trials are acceptable to thee, give me more and more." I have full confidence that this is what you would say, and then you would not think more of it—at any rate, you would not be anxious. Well, do the same now. Make friends with your trials, as though you were always to live together; and you will see that when you cease to take thought for your own deliverance, God will take thought for you; and when you cease to help yourself eagerly, he will help you.—Francis de Sales.

Why Teddy Left.

As the Sunday school teacher was entering the classroom she saw a little girl and her small brother leaving in great haste.

"Why, Anna," she exclaimed in surprise, "you aren't going home?"

"Please, Miss Jones, we've got to go," said Anna, in distress; "Freddie's swallowed his collection."

Munchausen Outclassed.

"I suppose you meet a great many eccentric characters in Washington."

"Oh, yes. You can hardly believe the stories you hear about some of those persons."

"Not?"

"I was once introduced to a man who was said to read every issue of the Congressional Record from cover to cover."

WHAT MAKES ORANGE RUSTY

Spider-Like Insect Crawls Over Fruit and Punctures Outer Skin.

The juiciest and sweetest oranges are the rusty ones.

An exceedingly tiny spider-like insect is responsible. While the fruit is ripening on the tree it crawls over the orange and punctures the outer skin with over so many minute holes.

For this purpose it is provided with an awl-like instrument incomparably sharper than the finest cambric needle. It punches the holes to get at the oil contained in little glands just beneath the surface. Upon this oil it feeds, apparently.

If you rub a lump of sugar hard and persistently upon the skin of an orange it will soon become saturated with this oil (from the ruptured glands), which has a very strong flavor. It is the so-called "essential oil" of orange.

The oil, leaking out of the glands punctured by the "rust mite," forms a coating which, as it dries, is turned to a rusty color by contact with the air. It is in effect a varnish, which, being impervious to moisture, prevents the juice from evaporating.

Only Disease He Could Treat.

Charles and Marie had recently had the measles, and at about the same time an elderly neighbor had died of pneumonia. The children decided one rainy day to play "doctor." Marie was to be the sick patient and Charles the doctor. The doctor, dressed in his father's clothes and carrying a large traveling bag, nearly as large as himself, answered the patient's hurry up call and to his question, "What's the matter with you?" the patient answered, "Monia." The doctor looked in his medicine bag, but could find no pills for "monia," so said, "Well, you will just have to have measles, 'cause that's all the kind of medicine I have."

District of Columbia Land.

The government owns about half the land in the District of Columbia, or about 5,500 acres. Much of it is in public parks. Its assessed value is $114,000,000. The improvements on this real estate are assessed at $115,000,000. As the assessments are made on a basis of two-thirds, the actual value of this property is estimated to be about $340,000,000.

Probably First Game Law.

What is believed to be the first game law for the protection of birds is found in Deuteronomy 22:6—"If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be young ones or eggs, and the dam sitting upon the young or upon the eggs, thou shalt not take the dam with the young, but thou shalt in any wise let the dam go, and take the young to thee."

A Safe Move.

"I should hate to have a husband who argued. I shall try to marry a lawyer."

"Why, lawyers are the very men who argue."

"But not without a fee."—Boston Transcript.

Where Fish Explode.

To the Russian people Lake Baikal, in eastern Siberia, is a holy lake, and they believe both the lake and its surrounding country are endowed with supernatural powers and inhabited by unearthly beings.

All kinds of weird tales mingle with their explanations of any feature of the lake. Even so simple an object as a great rock lying in the middle of a river just where it flows from Lake Baikal takes on a mysterious significance. If this stone were to slip from place, they say, the whole of Lake Baikal would pour out of its basin and flood the river and probably the continent.

But there are actually many strange things about Lake Baikal. There is, for example, a species of fish that inhabits the deepest part. These fish have been seen by few persons, for as soon as they are lifted out of their accustomed atmosphere of high water pressure, they explode.

Rivers Deeper Than Ocean.

Geologists have discovered a number of sub-oceanic canyons, or drowned rivers, along the east coast of the United States. Both the Hudson and Delaware rivers are in this class, as well as Chesapeake bay. The St. Lawrence river, in Canada, and the Congo, in Africa, are also deeper, near their mouths, than the ocean. The Hudson river, worn by the flowing stream, is considerably deeper than the offshore part of the Atlantic. It is flooded by the intruding ocean. The bay and lower river compose what would be called in Norseland a fiord. The whole coast of the United States has sunk a good deal in the course of ages, owing to the enormous weight of material brought down by the rivers and deposited out in the ocean off shore. But geologists say that the melting of glaciers has largely to do with the phenomenon.

WHEN BILLY ITCHED

By WILL T. AMES

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Sanderson says if you'll draw a diagram of that story on your desk he'll have the new high school cub rewrite it. You're sure going strong with the old man, Itchy."

"Oh, you go chase yourself!" Billy Harbury wasn't very much stronger on repartee than he was in the construction of his laboriously written news stories. But there was considerable feeling in the glance that he bent on the grinning Jones, the city hall man.

There was no need of Jones piling it on. Billy was sensitive enough about his failing, and the blue-penciled message scrawled across the whole first page of the "copy" on his desk—"Itchwrite!"—required no interpretation by outsiders.

Harbury's nickname alone would have served to spoil a worse temper than his. "Itchy." Somehow suggestive of indifference to the cleanliness next to godliness, of some kind of personal, physical taint, of a slum origin, it was a deuce of a name, Billy often thought, to have wished onto a fresh-faced, immaculate, daily bathed boy who had been brought up in a good home and never forgotten the days thereof!

But one day in the first weeks of his cubdom Billy had dug up a peach of a story along the docks about a schooner then in port which turned out to have had a most amazing but authentic history of blockade running, gun smuggling and the like.

Billy wrote the story, and therein he referred to the schooner, interchangeably as "it" and "she," just as the words happened to come off his typewriter. The copy desk on the Herald was a bit of a joke, and Sanderson, the city editor, was in the midst of a first edition rush, so the story got by as written.

"You are Beatrice Orton."

It was an awful mess of pronouns, with its conflicting repetitions of "it" and "she." The staff needed but about forty seconds to evolve "it-she" into "Itchy"—and Billy Harbury was dubbed.

But if Billy's nickname reflected paucity in the gift of expression, the reputation he had gained in his two years on the Herald was far from being one for stupidity. He was the paper's very best natural sleuth, a born digger after evasive facts, an engineer gifted with resourcefulness in following the merest color of exclusive news back to the mother lode of glorious "scoops." The boys in the office railed at his bungling use of the president's American, but they took off their hats to him when it came to "getting the stuff."

Having rewritten the story and turned it in to Sanderson, who grunted something to the effect of the rewrite being not quite so horrible, Billy hurried away to his police "beat."

Besides headquarters he had to cover three precincts, and it was half past nine when he dropped off an East side car in front of the "hard boiled" station house. Medley, the lieutenant in charge, was questioning a girl as the reporter entered the station.

The girl was not an unusual type. Thin, cheaply dressed, of no particular complexion, the only noticeable things about her were her uncommonly fine eyes and her clean, neatly cared for hair, which was almost black. She looked chronically worried and harassed.

Billy had a vague impression that he had seen her before—but that generally means that you have just happened to notice the person in a street car.

Presently the lieutenant dismissed the girl, who departed. Billy looked inquiringly at the policeman.

"No story there," cautioned Medley. "No charge against her; not even a suspect. Mrs. Shanahan, around the corner on Grove, came in here and asked me to have a talk with the girl; she lodges there. Said the girl lost her job in one of those North end garment shops two weeks ago and hasn't hardly been out of her room since. The old lady thinks she hasn't had anything to eat but crackers and milk this week, and she's worried.

"I sent Briggs to ask her to step in here, thinking she might be nutty; but she talks straight enough. Secretive as the devil, though. Calls herself Swain. Guess she's got a good education. I didn't get anything out of her."

Billy knew the lieutenant well enough to be sure that he was keeping nothing up his sleeve. It was probably merely a case of a well-brought-up but incapable girl fallen on ill times, who had lost her nerve but not her pride. Young as he was the boy had run across more than one such case in his police station experience.

But as he hopped a car for the fourth precinct Billy was still thinking about that girl and the haunting resemblance. Ten seconds after that he had hopped off the car again in the middle of the block and was on his way to Grove street on a run. Billy had remembered something—a newspaper photograph of many weeks ago.

Mrs. Shanahan's was easy to find, and the persuasive Billy induced that reluctant lady to take him up to her lodger's room and introduce him to her in her correct character as a representative of the Herald. The lodger, whom they found sitting at the window of her stuffy room, hadn't a chance to escape the interview. Billy opened up the instant Mrs. Shanahan was gone.

"You are Beatrice Orton," it was a statement, not a question.

The girl looked at Billy sullenly.

"For three months the police of the country have been hunting for you, and your stiff-necked father has given you up as dead. Meantime you have been hiding under a disguise that not one woman in ten thousand of your class could successfully assume—that of an ordinary working girl. You could, because you worked in the settlements and know them."

Still there was no reply. The girl looked out of the window.

"I know what none of the rest of them know—that you didn't even see fit to let your father know—that your disappearance is due to revulsion over what you thought you had found out about Chester Ailing."

The girl rose from her chair. "I

SACKETT'S GIRL

By IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

In the old days, Captain Nichols said, there had been a false beacon lighted up regularly on Sackett's hill, and that was why, in the beautiful white sand along the curving, wide shore you found skeletons of schooners and all manner of ancient wreckage. Even 200 years had failed to wipe away the shadow of responsibility in the eyes of the harbor, and Polly Sackett always walked across Fountain square to the general store with her head just a trifle higher than was necessary on account of the old blot on the family honor.

But Benjy Sackett, her father, was genial and rotund, and far too fond of spending his leisure hours at the Three Kittens to worry over what the harbor thought about his ancestors. Polly would come from the village along the narrow board walk that guided the wayfarer over shifting sands until the dunes were reached. And half way from the square there was the hollow, a natural bowl scooped out by nature to form a shelter for the old, ramshackle yellow tavern known as the Three Kittens.

Here Polly would pause and look inquiringly over at the open, hospitable side door, wondering if her father were inside. But never would she herself cross the stretch of clover and sorrel-strewn sand to find out. If Rod Kennedy happened to come to the door to look out at her, she would give her head a quick, defiant shake, and go on to the dunes. And Rod would stroll back into his father's place and persuade Benjy it was time to go home.

He had been sent away from the island to school for years, and had lost the memory of Polly as she grew up. Somehow, it had become a settled fact that when the day came, the Three Kittens was to be dismantled and sold to Peter Gaffney as a general feed and supply store. Peter waited the day patiently, passing the time down along the docks in daily conference with the ex-captains who sat there in the sun.

Rod had planned after the sale to leave the island and go away somewhere. Anything rather than spend his life like the rest of the islanders, content to wait for the weekly boat and live by the turn of the tides. But Polly had upset his plans, although all she did was to pause on her way from the village to look up at the yellow house and wait for her father. And for her sake he kept an eye on old Benjy Sackett.

Benjy's principal indulgence had been cribbage until the Flying Squirrel put into the harbor from a Jersey port. That night poker was introduced to the little company up at the yellow tavern, and before Benjy Sackett managed to navigate home he had not only lost every cent he possessed, but had also signed a paper giving "in consideration of the sum of one dollar" a deed of sale to his 40 acres along the shore.

Rod had been over to the glee club in the yacht clubhouse. When he returned he met the two men from the Flying Squirrel coming from the yellow house, and they were laughing together. The next day all of the harbor knew what Benjy had done and that the paper would hold in law because it was signed in the presence of witnesses. Only Rod thought deeper than the surface of things. Why had two strangers put into the harbor from a Jersey port, come deliberately to the island, and laid for Benjy, instead of others? There was many a piece of land richer and better cultivated than the 40 acres along the shore and the hill where the old false beacon had been. And in his own mind he did not believe the paper would hold in law. It was signed while Benjy was not himself.

Polly heard the news in silence that afternoon when the two strangers paid a call to the old white house on the hill. Her father listened, too, sober and suspicious, but the paper was there, and his name was signed to it.

He avoided Polly's eyes, pursing his lips, and meditating. And while he listened to the two tell when they wanted possession, Rod came up the narrow, graveled walk bordered in clam shells. Someway Polly's whole heart turned to him for help at that moment, he looked so resourceful and fearless.

"Good day, Mr. Sackett," he called cheerily. "Thought you might need a little help on this deal. Did Polly sign that deed too?"

"Only the owner's name is necessary," said Tuttle, the older man, curtly. "Mr. Sackett's willing to abide by what he did. Is it your business to interfere?"

"I think so," answered Rod quietly. "We're all neighbors here on the island, you see, and my father's taken a good deal of Mr. Sackett's money the past twenty-odd years. I can't stand by and see him lose everything now, Mr. Sackett, I've taken the liberty of looking up the old deed, and your wife's name was on it as part owner, since her dower money went into the purchase of it. Under our law here you are not sole owner now, since I had found on record her will, leaving all she possessed to her daughter, Mary Elizabeth Sackett. Polly's name would have to go on that paper to make it legal, and the place is still yours and Polly's."

"You talk just like a real lawyer," sneered Tuttle.

"I am a real lawyer," Rod smiled. "Only I hadn't had a chance to practice here. I think that's all gentlemen, only this." His eyes narrowed keenly. "We have a constable here. I've given him your record from the police at New Jersey ports. You've played this trick at a good many village ports along the shore, and you've met a record for quick sales. You'll find our Mr. Gaffney is waiting for you down at the dock where your boat lies. That's about all."

Benjy walked after the two, chuckling and happy, but Polly stood by the pink and red hollyhocks, looking down at the little oval flower beds along the walk, her heart beating fast as she listened to Rod.

"You know I did it most of all for you, Polly," he said. "I couldn't stand and let those fellows get away with a deal like that, of course, but it was you I thought of all the time. Why won't you speak to me, or be friendly?"

"Because you belonged to the Three Kittens," she said hesitatingly. "I thought you were just going to keep it forever."

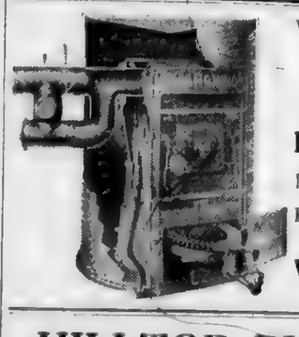
"Would you leave the island and go with me?" he asked. "We went to school together, Polly, and you always were my girl then. Why do you treat me so now?"

"I guess I must have been jealous of you, Rod," she laughed helplessly. "I wanted to go away and study, too, and I hated to stay here all my life, and you were free to do as you pleased. It seemed as if I'd be Sackett's girl to the end of the chapter."

Rod's arm closed about her. The little windbreak of beach trees and willows hid them from view.

"We'll be married at the chapel," he said, "just when you say, Polly, and after that we'll leave dad to retire from business, and your father to settle down up here as he likes, and we'll go away traveling until I find a place where I want to hang up my shingle and settle down, too. Do you like that?"

Polly nodded her head quickly, her eyes soft with tenderness.



"Wouldn't it be queer, Rod, if we just came back home, after all," she whispered, looking off at the blue sea and the broad, sandy shore. "Remember what you wrote me once, the first year you were away:

"'Over the world and under the world and back to you at last.'

"Only you didn't know you were going with me, did you?" he laughed.

is The Another "Pair of Stoves" Like This

Moore's Air Tight for Coal

Estate Triple Effect for Gas

Ample proof of their merits is evidenced in the fact that they are the most widely imitated stoves on earth. When "other fellows" say "Here's a stove just as good," don't believe it. It is not so, and we defy proof.

These stoves have more exclusive features—all of which have more merit in the ultimate results to be achieved—than any ever before offered the public.

They are beautiful to behold, which, together with their wonderful wearing qualities, makes them the most admired and the most desired stoves on the market to-day.

You say they are high priced? They are not higher proportionally than any other stove, and there never was a time in your life when you were more justified in paying the highest possible price than NOW, because you are assured of quality and service, and quality always lives after price is forgotten.

Residents of the Hilltop

who have to buy stoves this year, don't buy a coal or gas heater of any make until you have given our salesman the opportunity of showing you all the advantages contained in these wonderful stoves. If we cannot convince you that they are the best for your purpose, you will be out nothing but a little of your time, and we will be satisfied with having had the opportunity of offering you the best stove proposition on earth.

You can't afford to "pass them up" without investigation. Yes! They're sold on easy payments, too. The price? It won't interest you unless you come and see the stoves. We're expecting you soon.

shall ask you to leave—" she began.

"Presently," interrupted Billy. "But Chet Alling happens to have been my best friend on earth, and I have a duty to perform toward him."

"As a newspaper reporter?" There was icy sarcasm in the girl's tone.

"Newspapers be blowed. As a man and as a friend. Listen. Alling's father, as you know, was a legal adviser of the American peace conferees. He had possession of certain knowledge on the treaty, documentary stuff; it would have been of untold value to a political clique in Washington. It was known that the one person who could steal that information was Chester. They knew he was beyond approach.

So they plotted to compromise him with that Baroness Coigney, with three or four of her clique of crooked adventurers as witnesses. Then they peddled the news to you, through two hands, secretly. Also they let Chester know that if he would get the documents for them they would swear that the whole business was a rotten lie—as it was. Of course Chester refused—and then you beat it without giving him a chance to talk."

The girl had gone white. "But why didn't somebody—how do I know you are not the liar? You are a newspaper man, are you not? Why didn't you print this story—why didn't anybody?"

"Because it couldn't be proved—legally. They could outswear Alling five or six to one. And besides the newspapers don't know it. Haven't you any faith at all? Do you know that Chester Alling has done absolutely nothing for three months but hunt for you while you have been eating your heart out and ruining your health in this mad escapade of the sulks?"

"What—what shall I do?"

"Stay here for one day and let me wire to Chet. Will you do that?"

"Yes; oh, oh, yes! It has been awful! Awful!"

Billy sent the wire and then he went back to the office and justified his nickname. He itched—itched all over to write the best scoop that ever came into the Herald office. But he didn't. Chester Alling was his best friend.

NEWS HAPPENINGS

Mr. H. S. Currier died suddenly from heart disease while he was teaching a class in bookkeeping at the Office Training school Monday evening. He had been a teacher at the High School of Commerce for the past three years, coming to Columbus from Lancaster. His wife, four children, his mother, three brothers and two sisters survive. He was a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan university, a member of the Glenwood M. E. church and superintendent of the Sunday school of that church. The funeral was held from the church at 10 a. m. Thursday, with services at 2 p. m. at the Plain City M. E. church and burial in Plain City. The death of Mr. Currier was a surprise and regret to Hilltop people among whom he was well known and loved.

The Hilltop English Evangelical Lutheran Church is pleased to announce to its friends and the people of the Hilltop that it has let the contract for the new church to be erected on its splendidly located lots at the corner of Broad and Terrace streets at a cost of about $17,000. The work of construction is to begin at once and pushed to completion as rapidly as possible. Only the front part will be built now.

The original plans have been changed entirely but the initial cost will be more than that calculated a few years ago.

This congregation has a bright future before it. It has been and is now worshiping in a little chapel at 15 N. Oakley Ave. It has well earned the name of being a friendly and sociable church. Watch it grow! Will you be included in the number?

Rev. J. M. Wenrich, 120 Midland Ave., as Field Missionary, organized this church and is now its pastor.

Mrs. W. H. Williams of 514 South Harris Ave. was pleasantly surprised at her home on Saturday evening, Oct. 25, 1919. The house decorations were of red, yellow and white chrisanthemum. A large birthday cake with forty-five candles adorned the table. Dainty refreshments were served. She received many beautiful presents.

Those present were, Mrs. Anna Thrush, Mr. Wm. Groves, Mrs. Partridge, Mrs. Ellen Groves, Mr. Frank Groves, Mrs. Stella Wilson, son and daughter, Charles and Margaret, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Whipped and daughter, Hilda May; Mrs. Mary Abbee, son and daughter, Robert and Alice; Mrs. Elsie Burget and daughter, Dorthy; Mr. Andy Good, of Canton, Ohio; Miss Olive Hoeflich, Mrs. Lillie Heffler and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Williams and family.

Miss Marie Schoonover who had a position with the Gordon Department store at Findlay, O., spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Schoonover, 168 N. Warren Ave.

Mrs. Charlotte Evans-Kahler, widow of the late William Kahler and for 38 years a resident of Columbus, died October 27th, 1919, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. E. M. Jenkins, 54 S. Burgess. Age 80 years, 1 month and 27 days. Mrs. Kahler was born in Delaware County near Lewis Center, August 30th, 1839. Her father Gabriel Evans was a surveyor and early pioneer of Delaware country. Mrs. Kahler united with the Christian Church in her youth but has been unable to attend services for the past several years being unable to hear and for the past seven months she has been confined to her bed. She was married April 24th, 1859 to William Kahler and to this union three children were born, Mrs. E. M. Jenkins, Mr. George Kahler, and Zedic Kahler. Her husband, one son Zedic Kahler and two sisters, and six brothers have preceeded her to the spirit world.

"I cannot say and I will not say,
That she is dead. She is just away.
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,
She has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since she lingers there.
And you, O you who the wildest yearn
For the oldtime step and the glad return.
Think of her faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here.
Think of her still as the same, I say;
She is not dead, she is just away."

Beside her son and daughter three sisters, twelve grandchildren and two great grandchildren mourn the loss of a kind loving mother and grandmother.

Members of the Alpha Gamma Psi fraternity gave a dinner dance near Alton, Ohio, Wednesday evening, Oct. 22, at which covers were laid for fourteen couples. The most exercised great taste in the selection and arrangement of the decorations, which very appropriately fitted the occasion and season. Mr. Willard Durflinger made a brief address. Mr. Arthur Heyl and Mr. Earl Rowe were also on the program A few of the young people present from the Hilltop were, Mr. Joe Wyman, Mr. Herbert Mallette, Mr. Arthur Heyl, Mr. Earl Rowe, Mr. Willard Durflinger, Mr. Henry Manning, Miss Marie Gillette, Miss Elizabeth Ellis, Miss Violet Gotchal, Miss Marie Heyl and Miss Marie Charleston.

It is believed that the arrangements for the dinner party planned to take place at the Elmont Hotel, Groveport, Ohio, have been changed and if no out-of-town hotel has been selected, it is probable that the dinner will be given either at the Virginia or New Southern hotel.

About thirty ghosts gathered at the home of Louise Barnhart on Oct. 17. After many ghostly proceedings the ghosts retired to the living room where they played many games and listened to several pieces played by the Edison. After Hallowe'en refreshments they had their fortunes told.

One of the most enjoyable events of the season was the Home-coming celebration held by the Hilltop Lodge No. 662 I. O. O. F. and E. F. Allen Lodge No. 754 of Rebeccas, at the I. O. O. F. Hall, 2367½ W. Broad St., Monday evening, October 27th. A good program consisting of speeches, short stories and excellent music prevailed throughout. One of the many very pleasing features of the evening was the singing of Mrs. Edith Scott Cannon accompanied by her brother Winfield Scott, Jr., violin and Miss Margarite Carter, pianist. The reading of Mrs. Lannalittle and Mr. Doty as impersonator, was very clever. Mr. Chapin P. Beam gave an excellent address on "Friendship," his story telling kept the large audience in a splendid humor. There were several other good musical number both vocal and instrumental that the writer was unable to get. Most excellent music by Herberts' Apollo orchestra of fourteen pieces, was a musical feast. This is one of the most popular orchestras in the city. Last but not least—a long table set in the middle of the hall and loaded with good things to eat and drink. There was more pumpkin pie than the crowd could eat. It was a jolly crowd and a jolly good time all around.

Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Gauts, 167 N. Warren Ave., visited over the week end with the latter's parents in the north end of city.

Mr. and Mrs. Cimino, 53 N. Warren, left last Saturday to visit relatives in Chicago.

Mrs. Charlotte M. Kahler, 80, widow of William Kahler, died of infirmities of age Monday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. M. Jenkins, 54 S. Burgess Ave. She leaves one son, George Kahler of Powell; one daughter and 12 grandchildren. Funeral at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the residence. Burial in Union Cemetery.

Mrs. A. M. Groff who has been at Mercy Hospital for the past three weeks is improving slowly.

Emma Bell Mitchell, age 48, died of cancer Wednesday at the home of her brother-in-law, H T Wilson, 104 North Eureka avenue. She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Wilson and one brother W. E. Mitchell. Funeral services will be held at 7:30 p. m. today. Burial will be at Logan tomorrow by the Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Mr. Walter King has opened a studio at his home 31 S. Ogden Ave., Bell Phone Hilltop 3094, where he will teach Piano, Harmony, Counterpoint, and Theory. He is also teaching at the Capitol College of Oratory and Music, 1076 Neil Ave. Mr. King has spent the greater part of the summer in Philadelphia studying under Constantin Von Sternberg.

We wish to extend our appreciation and sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors for their sympathy in our late sorrow, the loss of our beloved father, and especial thanks to Rev. Lose and the Steickley undertakers. Also for the many beautiful floral offerings.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Engard, L. C. Bluhm, John Bluhm, Robert Bluhm.

During the illness, death and at the funeral of my beloved mother, Mrs. Charlotte Evans Kahler, such marked kindness was shown to us by neighbors and friends that I here most gratefully record my heartfelt thanks with special mention to the ladies of the "Church of Christ" for their beautiful songs and to Rev. Dr. Johnson for his comforting message.

Mrs. E. M. Jenkins and family.

We wish to extend our thanks to our friends and neighbors for their kindness during the sickness and death of our darling daughter and sister, also Dr. Wyckoff for his consoling words and the Hilltop Undertaking Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Dean and family.

The Hilltop English Lutheran church will hold a Hallowe'en social at the home of the pastor, Rev. J. M. Wenrich 120 Midland Ave., on Thursday evening, Oct. 30th. All the members and friends are invited to attend. A silver offering will be taken.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Ferguson of 35 Highland Ave., have been enjoying a visit with Mrs. Ferguson's mother, Mrs. Noah Smith of Ashland, Ill., and her son, Corporal Russell J. Smith of Fort Scott, Calif. Corporal Smith was in France with the First Anti-Air Craft Sector for seventeen months.

Rev. Harry James and evangelistic party that held tent meeting on the Hilltop recently, are holding a very successful series of revival services at Dresden, Ohio. It is reported that a very large audience is present every night. At the first altar call last Sunday over one hundred responded. A consecration service at the morning service that day resulted in over 300 Christian people consecrating themselves to a more faithful service for Christ. The expense budget of $12 00 was raised in about 20 minutes.

The last two meetings of the S. J. G. Society were held at the home of Louise Barnhart, 93 Eldon Ave., Oct. 9, and at the home of Bernadine Drumm, 131 Whitethorne Ave., on Oct 16. A fine time was enjoyed by all members at both meetings.
